Flight Lieutenant Orville Moore Passes Final Examinations

Flight Lieutenant Orville Moore, son of Mr. Archie Moore, Aylmer St., has passed his final examinations and is now a fully qualified aviator in the Royal Flying Corps. At a field day of sports held on July 12th at Thetford, England, Lieutenant Moore won the 200 yards race for officers, according to a letter his mother received from him recently.

Attributed to Open-Air Training — Morgenthau Visits the Camp.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Aug. 17.—The strict physical training out-of-doors which the members of the American expeditionary force are undergoing is having its results. One turned up to-day when Field Headquarters received a letter from a compay commander in which he said his men were developing so fast that all their uniforms were getting too small. Some of the uniforms, he wrote, now are four inches too small about the chest.

CAMERA INSIDE VESUVIUS.

Scientist Tries to Take Motion Pictures During an Eruption.

ROME.—The American volcanologist, Frank Perrett, has made a daring and interesting descent into the crater of Vesuvius while in eruption, going down about 250 feet and carrying with him a cinematograph machine, his object being to render it possible for people far off to realize the appearance of the volcano in action.

The results were not quite satisfactory because the acids emitted by the crater rendered the air almost unbreakable and produced a serious smarting of the eyes, thus preventing Perrett and his companions from using the machine.

MICHELIN

Notice the Curve in Which Michelin Tubes Naturally Hang

INSTEAD of being simply a piece of straight tubing cemented at the ends, the Michelin Tube is formed on a circular mandrel in the shape of the inside of the casing. Thus when inflated it is neither stretched on its outer side nor compressed into destructive wrinkles next to the rim. This perfect fit gives the Michelin Tube greater durability and practically eliminates danger of pinching the tube.

SNIDER SUFFERED MOST ALL HIS LIFE

Feels Better Since Tanlac Overcame Trouble Than He Had in Thirty-five Years

"I'm feeling better to-day than I have in thirty-five years and it's all due to the good work of Tanlac," said James A. Snider, of 17 Jackson street, west, Hamilton, recently. Mr. Snider has the distinction of being one of the fastest coopers in Canada, but was forced by ill health to give up his trade. He has now returned to work, however, and is employed by the Paardeburg Chapter I.O.D.E.. Mr. Snider is well known both in Hamilton and vicinity and although sixty-nine years of age he has the appearance of a man many years younger. Continuing his statement Mr. Snider said:

"A medicine that will make a person my age gain weight and relieve them of troubles of thirty-five or forty years standing is certainly wonderful. I had been suffering from a bad stomach nearly all my life. I had no appetite and just had to force myself to eat. At times I felt like there was a thousand pound weight on my stomach, and I was almost doubled up with misery. Gas would form from what I ate and make my heart flutter, and I often had dreadful smothering spells. I have had the best treatment both in the United States and Canada, and have taken all kinds of medicines. I would feel a little better for a day or so and then feel as bad or worse than ever.

"I'm now prepared to say that Tanlac has done for me just what others say it has done for them and I want to make this statement because I feel like it may help lots of people who are in the same fix I was. Why, before I took Tanlac I had rheumatism in my knees and the pain was so severe I couldn't straighten up and now the rheumatism is nearly all gone and I can walk as straight as a dial. It has put my stomach in good condition the gas has stopped forming and I don't have any more of those awful smothering spells. My food agrees with me and I know it is building me up because I have already gained several pounds and have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac. All my pain is gone now and I want to say again I feel better than I have in thirty-five years. I can't say enough in praise of Tanlac and I'm going to tell everybody I can about the good it has done me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Wayne Drug Co., Ltd.

Desperate Fighting Continues

dians in their mad endeavour to retake Hill 70. After the Bavarians came the Prussian Guards. They threw themselves in close formation Canadian artillery and machine guns blazed forth. The attack was headed straight for the Canadian centre, but it never reached the line. Shells broke over the advancing Germans, while machine gun fire ripped through their ranks. The Bavarians wavered and then fell back, but that was not the end. They came in thick waves. By sheer momentum they forced back the Canadian posts to the left of the line that was held Thursday morning. But they did not remain victors long. The Canadians came back. With vicious, determined thrusts they pushed forward toward the positions they had been forced to relinquish. With bayonet and bomb they charged over the shell-torn ground. There was a sharp fight and then the enemy began to give way, slowly at first; then they went down the slope which they had just climbed—at a heavy cost. Their withdrawal became a confused retreat, and the Canadians were soon re-establishing their positions west of Cite St. Auguste and rectifying and consolidating their lines along the remainder of the entire front.

AN ILLITERATE NATION.

As Large as Switzerland Could be Gathered Out of U. S.

In various ways there were counted in this country, in 1910, 5,500,000 illiterates. Were these segregated they would make a nation larger than Switzerland, or as large as Denmark and Norway combined.

It would be a nation without Bibles, without songbooks, without magazines or newspapers, without banks, without railways, without pens, pencils or writing paper, and one supplied with only the coarsest commodities of trade. I heard an illiterate woman say that she couldn't recognise a $2 bill until she was twenty-five years of age. "Square money," with its printing, is not as popular with them as "round money."

When the census takers were taking the lists of illiterates in 1910 the "moonlight school" as a remedy for adult illiteracy was being evolved. In 1911 the experiment was tried first in all of the schools in Rowan, one of the mountain counties of Kentucky. None is better prepared to witness the result of that experiment han the United States Bureau of Education, which heralded to the world its success in a bulletin entitled "Illiteracy in the United States and an Experiment for its Elimination."—"Chrisian Herald."

HUN SUBMARINES CANNOT STARVE GREAT BRITAIN

British Premier Makes An Encouraging Statement in House of Commons on Successful Manner in Which Nation Has Coped with the Plunger Peril

LONDON, August 17.—Premier Lloyd George, speaking in the House of Common yesterday afternoon, said that this time last year the wheat in this country amounted to 6,480,000 quarters, and that now it is 8,500,000 quarters. The stock of oats and barley, he declared, also was higher.

There had been a considerable saving in bread consumption, the Premier said, and owing to the closer milling and food economy there had been an addition to the wheat stock of 70,000 quarters per week. (A quarter is equivalent to 480 pounds).

More Acres Cultivated.

Mr. Lloyd George said the acreage under cultivated showed an increase of one million acres. If the harvest weather was good the condition of food supplies was very satisfactory. The Premier added that there had been an increase in the sugar reserve.

"The Government has come to the conclusion," Premier Lloyd George said, "that with reasonable economy there is no chance of starving Britain out.

"The Admiralty plans for dealing with submarines have been increasingly successful."

The Premier said that in the single month of April 560,000 gross tons of shipping were lost through Teuton submarines. In July the tonnage lost went down to 320,000 gross tons. This month there was a substantial improvement over that of July.

The net losses since the commencement of Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare were under 250,000 tons a month.

Premier Lloyd George said that in the first six months of this year the new tonnage built was 484,000, while in the last six months, including purchases, the new tonnage would be 1,424,000.

The Premier also said that a considerable addition had been made in the programme of naval construction.

With the co-operation of America, the Premier said, there would be sufficient tonnage for all of 1918, and, if necessary, 1919. Although tonnage had decreased during the last year, he added, more good had been carried from overseas.

The Premier said he agreed that the people of the country were all the better for being told even unpalatable truths, but they also must be told the truth even if it was palatable. They could not exercise reasonable judgment or come to decisions regarding facts unless both the cheery and discouraging sides were presented to them.

Premier Lloyd George said he proposed to deal with the food situation and submarines because special efforts were being made to create an impression not justified in the least by the facts. Earlier in the year he had called attention to the very anxious condition of the food supply. Since then, owing largely to the energetic efforts of Baron Devonport, the former Food Controller, and organization by the Shipping Controller, the situation had improved considerably.

Wheat under cultivation showed an increase of 1,000,000 acres.

Admiralty Successful.

The Premier declared that the net shipping losses were far from being what the Germans claimed. They were 250,000 tons monthly, and if the present improvement was maintained the net loss for July and August will be 175,000 tons each.

The figures showed that the Admiralty was meeting with considerable success. The Shipping Controller had so far organized shipping by means of better loading and hiring of ships more quickly and by taking ships off longer voyages, that although the tonnage was diminished they were carrying more tons. This was in addition to the large naval construction.

Premier Lloyd George said he believed the losses would grow smaller. He was sure construction would increase if more ships were still needed. If the United States put forward her full capacity, as he had no doubt she was preparing to do in her own thorough way, there would be sufficient tonnage not only or the whole of 1918, but, if necessary, for 1919.

GERMANS BLEED LORRAINE WHITE AS CHANCE LASTS

With the French Armies.—Alsace and Lorraine are being milked dry by the Germans while they still have the opportunity to do so, according to authoritative information that has just reached France by way of Switzerland.

So clean is the final sweep now being made by the Germans both of everything eatable and usable, that the condition of the civil population, despite the fact that Alsace and Lorraine still rank as German province, is little better than that of the inhabitants of invaded Belgium. All metal that could be used in the manufacture of war materials was long ago taken by the Germans, including the church and school bells, organ pipes, door knobs, sills and cooking utensils. Among the latest things requisitioned were the famous bells of the Strasbourg Cathedral, which were hung in 1805 to replace the historic bells destroyed during the German revolution.

Food restrictions and food requisitions are now being imposed. Not only are the Germans requisitioning all live stock, but the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine are under military orders, with military penalties attached, not to kill a single food animal.

Requisition is also being made of smoked meats, dried fruits, potatoes, vegetables, wheat and flour.

The restrictions have reached a point where the farmers are no longer allowed either to milk their own cows or collect the eggs laid by their own hens. All this is done by the German soldiers in order that every particle of food may be controlled and may go to the German authorities. As the farmers no longer have the use of their own milk, butter is no longer to be found. Oil and coffee are also no longer obtainable.

These conditions, coupled with the liquidation by the Germans of all properties owned entirely or in part by French capital and French people, have reduced the position of the civil population to one of half starved and abject misery.

"Mrs. Flubdub wants to borrow some sugar, some eggs and some flour. Evidently going to make some sponge cake." "Sponge cake is right. But why does she sponge entirely on us?" Too many "coming men" lack the ability to arrive.

TWO WOMEN IN COURT.

Charged With Improper Conduct Under Vagrancy Act.

Two women, one of them married, who have been living for a short time in the first floor rooms over 418 George Street, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of leading immoral lives under the general section of the Vagrancy Act. They were remanded for a week. Two little children of the married woman were taken to the Children's Shelter by Mr. George W. Powell.

BIG RUSSIAN ORDER COMING

MONTREAL, Aug. 17.—The Canadian Car and Foundry Company are negotiating with the Russian authorities for a large proportion of the big Russian order which will soon be distributed to the Canadian companies, totalling, it is said, 10,000 freight cars. The Canadian Car Co., is now working on an order for 2,000 Russian freight cars, which will be ready for delivery in October, and the order will be a big help in keeping up the present working capacity of the Canadian Car plants.

LETTER FROM PRIVATE BEAVIS

Peterboro' Soldier is Recovering From His Wounds

Mrs. Robert Beavis, 639 Roger street, East City, has received a letter from her son, Private Bruce Beavis of the 18th Canadians, who has been wounded and is now convalescent in England. The letter reads as follows:

Royal Infirmary,
Sheffield, July 26, 1917.

Dear Mother,—I've made several attempts this last while to write a letter to you, but I've been so sleepy and lazy I always gave it up as a bad job before I got fairly started. I've been up in a wheel chair this last week or so for about three or four hours a day. My leg is still on a splint. It is all healed over now, except for two small places that discharge a little yet. I have little or no pain now. I expect to be going round on crutches in about a month or so. Then all aboard for Canada. I received your letter about the parcel this morning.

July 28.—Received the parcel O.K. and had a great time feeding the boys here with olives. They'd never tasted any and you should have seen them spitting and sputtering. Everything else was O.K.

I've been up in a chair for the last week or more and am feeling fine. How are all the folks? I got some old letters yesterday from the P.O. I don't get any pay while in hospital. I drew £1 and have sent for two pounds more, but haven't got it yet. It's a hard job to get money when in hospital and there are so many things I could buy to eat. I've got a horse's appetite and the meals we get don't satisfy one.

Well, I'll say good bye now, with love to all from

Your loving son,
BRUCE.

The following report has also been received by Mr. Beavis, concerning the condition of his son:

Canadian Red Cross Society,
14-16, Cockspur street,
London, S.W.1.
Information Bureau, 30, 7, '17.

Dear Sir,—I beg to inform you that Pte. Bruce Beavis, No. 195664, 18th Canadians, who is now at The Royal Infirmary, Sheffield, Yorkshire, England, has again been visited by our representative. We are very glad to tell you that she found the patient going on very well. He is feeling much better and is allowed up each day in a wheel chair.

Hoping this progress will be steadily maintained.

Yours very truly,
E. BOVEY.

Pte. Bruce Beavis enlisted as a Signaller in the 93rd, in the year 1915, and was wounded at the Battle of Vimy Ridge, shortly after his twentieth birthday.

BUSINESS MEN HELP FARMERS

Mr. Joseph Wearing Has Joined the Labour Squad

Mr. R. V. Copping and Mr. Joseph Wearing spent several days this week harvesting in North Monaghan. They were drawing in hay yesterday afternoon when the rain interrupted operations. Next week they have promised to help a couple of farmers in Otonabee who are stuck for help.

PICNIC HELD AT THE RIVERSIDE PARK WAS A GRATIFYING SUCCESS

Over a Thousand People Participated in the Event—Large Number of Visitors From Peterboro'—Band at Night.

IN CHARGE OF THE BOOTHS

"Business as usual" was the slogan of Father Meagher's picnic held yesterday at the Riverside Park, Lakefield and notwithstanding the heavy down-pour of rain the picnic was a huge success in every way. From five o'clock the crowds began to collect on the gaily decorated grounds and by seven the height of the entertainment was reached, when a crowd of well over a thousand assembled.

CLERGY ATTENDED.

A large number of visiting clergy, who motored to the village yesterday attended. Included in the number were Dean McColl, Peterborough; Fathers McCauley, rector of St. Martin's, Enismore, Guiry, of Kinmount; Collins, Peterborough; Casey, editor of the Kingston Freeman; McFadden of Wooler; McGinnity, Parry Sound; Galvin of Downeyville; O'Brien, of Peterborough and Father Ferguson of Lindsay.

IN CHARGE OF BOOTHS.

The booths, which were attractively decorated, were manned by efficient staffs who knew how to sell. Young's Point sent her own staff for one supper table and Mesdames P. P. Young, Walter Young, James Carrol, George Ayotte, and William Brookes had a busy time competing with the Lakefield staff. Mrs. Dr. Gibson, Michael Ryan, A. Lawless and D. Maloney for who could keep the endless candidates for supper served best.

The ice cream and soft drink booth, always a busy spot at a garden party, was in charge of Miss Lottie Kearney, Mina Fortier, Mr. Frank Walsh and Mr. A. Lawless. The wheel of fortune an amusing diversion, was run by Misses Molly Young, Johnson and Sabatino. The fish pond by the Misses Geraldine Brooks, B Walsh and Loretto Young. Mr. George Lynch and Maurice Heins, auctioneers at the fancy work table kept the crowds in cheerful spirits by their clever manner of convincing everybody that each article was just what they needed. They with Mrs. J. S. Johnson, the Misses Molly Young, Corrinne McGurn and Kate Moore had a busy and strenuous evening.

VISITORS FROM PETERBOROUGH.

A large number of visitors from Peterborough motored out to Lakefield for the picnic, others came in by the 5.40 train. These included: Mrs. J. Corkery, Miss Maloney, Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. Leo Young, Mr. George Lynch, Mr. Maurice Heins, Miss Nell McCauley, Miss Gertrude McFadden, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Conroy and family, Mr. M. J. Hickey, Miss Vina and Mr. Jack McCabe, Mr. James Thompson, M. P.

MOTORED FROM THE POINT

The visitors at the Lakeview House, Young's Point also came down: Miss Byrne, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Morris, Misses Walker and Schofield, Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Remington Houck and Miss Paradise, Pittsburg, Mrs. C. V. Osborne, Toronto, Miss Mae Young, Mich., J. Fothergill, Mr. and Mrs. McDonald and family, Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford, Rochester and Mr. Jack Warmington, city.

Mr. P. P. Young's party from the Point included: Mr. Lang Maher, Eva Archambault, Peterborough, Mr. Harry Ayotte, Rochester, Mr. Frank Pope, Parry Sound and Miss Lizzie Pope, Peterborough.

BAND AT NIGHT.

In the evening the Citizen's Band, Lakefield attended and with an excellent programme added greatly to the general success of the affair.

FATHER MEAGHER PLEASED

Father Meagher expressed himself well satisfied with the evening in every respect and although as yet no correct estimate of the receipts could be given. He is confident his expectations in that line will be fully realised.

Lakefield House May Be Used For Convalescent Home

Government Architect is Looking Over the Property

The Lakefield House, of which Mr. Arthur Lawless is proprietor, will probably, in the course of a few weeks be turned into a military convalescent hospital. Mr. Lawless, through Mr. Sexsmith M. P., and Mr. Jas. Thompson M.P., has been in correspondence with the Hospital Board at Ottawa, as a result of which Mr. Bradley, government architect, arrived in the village to consider the advisability taking over the building and made a favourable report. On Tuesday night the Board of Trade and Town Council passed resolutions to forward the idea.

93rd Batt. Man Died of Wounds

Word has been received that Pte. Joseph Jamieson, Selwyn, N. Smith, died on Sunday as a result of gas poisoning in a clearing hospital in France. Pte. Jamieson enlisted with the 93rd from Peterborough.

Lightning is prevalent in the summer and autumn because of the great evaporation, the conversion of water into vapour developing electricity.

FORMER PETERBORO' BOY WRITES FOR MAGAZINES

Mr. R. S. Merrifield of Chatham Has Stories Accepted

Mr. R. S. Merrifield, Chief Clerk in the C.P.R. ticket office, Chatham, and a former resident of Peterborough, has written several very interesting stories, two of which have appeared in the "By-water Magazine".

One story "How I Got New Business" is a contribution from the Ticket Clerk's Point of View," is an exceptionally well written article. It won first prize, offered by that Magazine for a story on the subject.

The other article, appearing in the July issue of the same magazine, is entitled "The Battle of the Inland Seas," which is an imaginary story of the invasion of Canada by Germans in the States. It is also cleverly written and shows more than ordinary literary ability.

Mr. Merifield, who is a son-in-law of Mr. George Stevens, Ashburnham, is at work on other short stories, which he expects will appear shortly.

MEN AT WORK ON THE QUEBEC BRIDGE STRIKE

MONTREAL, Aug. 17. — Some thirty men working to finish the centre span of the Quebec bridge struck Monday evening, the foreman having decided to retain one hour's pay for their having left the works five minutes ahead of time. Attempts to settle the trouble are being made, for if the strike should last long the completion of the centre span would be delayed and if the span is not ready by a certain time to enable the contractors to benefit by the highest fall tide to raise the span in place, it may take months to make another attempt at joining the centre to the two cantilever arms. As it is, the placing of the centre span of the bridge has been set for the third of September next, the date of the highest tide.

SECOND ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SOUTH END RED CROSS ASSOCIATION

The second annual report of the South End Red Cross Asociation is as follows:

Another year has passed by, and during this year our society has done splendid work. The attendance has not been large, but those who have been out have proved themselves faithful workers. Therefore, we have a very encouraging report of the work. We also have met with troubles, but they have been taken in the right spirit, and instead of discouraging our members, have been incentives to more strenuous labours. At the very outset of the year, we were called upon to lose our President. Through the death of her husband at the front, Mrs. Barrie was forced to resign, and we thereby lost a good and faithful worker. A letter of sympathy was sent to Mrs. Barrie, and, in reply, she assured us that her heart and prayers were with us, though she was absent in person. After considerable difficulty in getting one willing to undertake the responsibility, Mrs. McKenzie was elected our new president. She very kindly consented, and proved a faithful and efficient worker. But in December, on account of the very sudden death of her husband, we were called upon to consider her resignation. After considerable discussion, it was thought wise to let the work go on without a new president until the election of officers, and Mrs. Ego, our vice-president, took charge of the work. A letter of sympathy was also sent to Mrs. McKenzie. We are pleased to know that while Mrs. McKenzie felt unable to undertake the president's work, she has still continued a faithful member and good worker.

During the year the society has raised money in various ways. Several generous donations have been handed in, and the society particularly desires to thank those who contributed to the work in this way. Through the Red Cross bags a substantial sum has been realized, and this has gone for wool and other material used at the rooms. Several teas have been held, and the ten cent charge for these has amounted to quite a little sum. Then there is the collection box, which brings in its bit each week. In June it was decided to collect a trench fund, the purpose of which was to buy yarn to knit socks for the boys in the trenches. This was to be a side issue as we are still to contribute socks to the Red Cross work. Early in the spring one of our most faithful knitters, in the person of Mrs. McCannon, was called to her home above, and the society surely miss her dear, kind face calling now and then at the rooms for a new supply of yarn. Mrs. McCannon knit 108 pairs of socks for our society.

The amount of work done for the year is as follows:

1467 Towels.
273 Sheets.
232 Many-tailed bandages.
206 Pairs socks.
124 Suits pyjamas.
37 Personal property bags.
21 Night shirts.
8 Pillow cases.
5 Ring pillows.
7 Slings.
255 Face cloths.
1000 Mouth wipes.

Respectfully submitted,
Mamie J. Laing, Secy.

Treasurer's Report.

Annual report of the South-End Auxiliary of Red Cross for year ending August 2, 1917:

Receipts.

Balance in Treasurer's hands, Aug. 2, 1916	$ 5 14
Sundry receipts	169 20
	$174 34

Expenditures.

Material for work	$122 05
Sundry expenses	2 50
Peterborough prisoners of war in Germany	25 00
	$149 55
Balance in Treas. hands	$24 74

We have received seven webs of flannelette, also three dozen suits of pyjamas cut from the head rooms in other ways. We have met our expenses, have made 273 sheets and 1467 towels for head rooms, and remembered those who are prisoners for our sakes, and have still a nice little balance.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. Wright, Treas.

Not in Collusion With Nationalists

Sir Robert Borden Dissociates Conservative Party With Their Propaganda

ARE NOT ENCOURAGED

There Has Never Been and Never Will Be Any Understanding Bourassaites.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 17.—Before the orders of the day were called yesterday afternoon Sir Robert Borden rose and read the following statements:

"My attention has been drawn to a statement that the Nationalist party in the Province of Quebec is about to put candidates in the field on its own behalf against Liberal and Conservative candidates, and I am told the suggestion is being made that there is some collusion between the Nationalist party of the Province of Quebec, and my Government or the friends of my Government, in regard to the campaign of the Nationalist party. The suggestion is also made that because the friends of the present Government and the Nationalist party both opposed Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the election of 1911 and there is now some connection or collusion and that my supporters and friends are in fact encouraging the Nationalist party of Quebec, in the course which they are adopting.

"I desire," said the Premier, clearing his throat, "to make a most emphatic, unreserved and comprehensive denial to this statement."

"There is not, and never will be, any collusion whatever between my friends and supporters and those of the Nationalist party of Quebec.

"I regard the attitude of the Nationalist party in Quebec in this war as unpatriotic, and I consider that it is the first duty of myself and my friends to assist in defeating that party and to prevent it, so far as we are able, from being in a position to exercise any political power in Canada." (Conservative applause.)

Adelaide Village: Woman Takes Life In Drinking Trough

BODY FOUND NEAR SON'S HOME THURSDAY MORNING.

STRATHROY, Aug. 17—Mrs. Jane Brooks, wife of William Brooks of Adelaide Village, was found drowned in a horse trough at the home of her son, Roy Brooks, near Adelaide Village yesterday morning. The woman who was 65 years of age and who had been melancholy for some time, took her own life during the night while, it is believed, mentally deranged.

Mrs. Brooks had been visiting at the home of her son and left in the evening presumably for her own home. She was not missed until this morning, her husband believing that she had stayed all night at the son's home. When a search was started the body was found in the drinking trough.

Dr. Thompson was called, but decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Mrs. Brooks is survived by her husband and son, Roy.

The funeral will be held this afternoon in Adelaide Village.

Scorch can be taken out by wetting and rubbing soap on the scorched places, then covering with thin cold starch and spreading in the sunshine.

MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF DIJON SENDS RESOLUTION TO DEPUTIES.

DIJON, France, Aug. 17—The municipal council of Dijon has adopted a resolution calling upon the Chamber of Deputies to pass a law requiring all children between the ages of 12 and 18 to work. The resolution also asks a law under which the populations of prisons and those convicted of crimes and misdemeanors may be sent to the front under guard, to work for the national defence.

The elusive G. A. Lubin is again heard from. It appears that he has made Montreal his camping ground where he is pursuing his cheque game unmolested.

The latest stunt credited to this affable young man is the issuing of cheques for the sums of $17.00 and $25.00 under the name of Lamont. He still retains "Lot 5 No 24," the two cheques being received at the Lindsay branch of the Standard Bank.

THRIFT WILL WIN THE WAR Rigid economy is necessary to counteract the unavoidable waste of war. But rigid economy does not mean to stop buying, but to BUY wisely and well—it means getting the most for your money—it means to make every dollar go farthest. Our Overloaded Sale offers everybody an opportunity to save money — in some cases only 10%, more often 20%, and frequently 30% and even 40% and 50%. Thrifty people will anticipate their wants and buy now, when prices are lower than they are apt to be for a long time to come. Thousands of residents of the Peterborough district have joined the great Thrift Army by concentrating their purchases at "The Big Store" — the store that helps its customers to cut down their living expenses by saving them money on everything.

The Deutschland Fitted As Raider For The Pacific

Big Commercial Submarine Is Converted Into a War Vessel

TOTAL U-BOAT LOSS ESTIMATED AT 20

Fleet of 300 Undersea Craft Has Suffered but Little Since New Campaign Began.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 17. — The German commercial submarine Deuschland, which went to the United States before that country entered the war, has been converted into a war submarine, according to German fleet gossip reaching the Associated Press. The Deutschland has a great radious of action and has been fitted with six torpedo tubes.

The submrine, it is said, may soon leave for the Pacific to operate against traffic from San Francisco. The U-boat was to have started activities some time ago, but an explosion on board while the vessel was on a trial trip made necessary repairs which took considerable time.

The German losses in submarines, according to the informant of the Associated Press, who recently had been at Wilhelmshaven and with the German fleet, have been twenty to twenty-two boats, that figure apparently covering the losses since the start of the unrestricted submarine warfare campaign. Four additional boats are said to have been lost in the Mediterranean.

Germany now has a most three hundred submarines, the newest boats being of the big sea-going type and armed with a six-inch gun. The armament appeared on board boats commissioned in the middle of June, the earlier boats of the latest or D E E type, and the preceding C E E type, and the preceding C E E type, being armed with a pair of 105 millimetre guns, approximately 4-inch guns fore and aft.

The three hundred submarines, however, include a large number of th so-called canal boat type, built for passage through the Belgian canals to Zeebrugge and which are of inferior armament and a smaller radius of action.

The German fleet, according to the informant, justifies its name of high sea fleet by running out from Wilhelmshaven with considerable regularity, sometimes two or three times a week. The fleet makes only short trips, however, and never goes very far out to sea.

The high sea fleet usually leaves Wilhelmshaven in the evening and is back by early dinner time, between eleven and noon on the following day. On a few occasions it has remained out longer, but only because thick weather set in, making a passage between the German mine fields dangerous and forcing it to remain in the shelter of Heligoland until the weather cleared.

A greater part of the time the battle ships and cruisers comprising the battle fleet are anchored in safe security behind mine fields and nets, and a triple line of pickets protecting the entrance to the base. Once in March the fleet had a considerable period of enforced repose when British mine-layers, taking advantage of thick weather, sowed the coastal waters so full of mines that the German vessels were unable to leav harbor.

The enlisted personnel of the fleet knew nothing of American preparations for active participation in the war. The men were told by their officers that America's declaration of war on Germany was only issued as a cover to preparations against Japan, and that American troops would not be used in Europe.

Mr. Ritchie In The City To-day

Mr. Ritchie, of the Aero Club of Canada was in the city and met the local Board this morning. He was pleased at the interest shown in Peterborough and made the statement that eighteen hundred young men would be required next year for this branch of the service. Boys who are not yet eighteen years of age can register and be placed on a waiting list and as soon as they are of age can have their applications dealt with.

Those who desire to enlist in the Flying Service, should make application to Mr. G. H. Logie, Bank of Commerce, Mr. C. G. Graham or Rollie Denne.

HAS RECEIVED UNOFFICIAL WORD

Mrs. D. O'Grady, Cricket Place, East City, received unofficial notification yesterday that Pte. D. O'Grady, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, had been killed in action. While the letter, which was from the chaplain of Pte. O'Grady's battalion, stated Mrs. O'Grady's son was killed, it is presumed it was in mistake for her husband, who has been officially reported missing since May 3rd.

"When I say a thing I mean it," exclaimed the emphatic man. "But sometime," replied Miss Cayenne, "that only makes it worse."—Washington Star.

Crisis Developes In The Farm Labour Situation

Many Toronto Manufacturers Refuse to Release Their Employees For Farm Work

GOOD WAGES PAID

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 17. — A serious crisis has developed in the camp again to secure farm labour to harvest Ontario's grain crops by the sudden refusal of many manufacturers of the city to release their employees for farm work. In government circles this is attributed directly to the influence upon manufacturers of the recent decision of the City Council not to meet the difference between the farm and city pay to corporation employees who may go upon the farms. Dr. W. A. Riddell, superintendent of the Trades Department, and Secretary Trimble of the War Production Club were in conference on the new situation. They looked glum, admitted the seriousness of the situation, and were likewise disposed to put the blame upon Toronto.

"The farmer cannot be accused of not paying good wages for labour," said Mr Trimble. "The farmer has done and is doing his part well. He is paying wages for farm help never before heard of in Ontario. The Ontario farmer is offering as good wages as the farmers of the west."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

LEAFS WENT 13 INNINGS TO WIN FROM PROVIDENCE

Strengthened Their Position as League Leaders in a Game Replete With Close, Fast Playing

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 16.—The Toronto Maple Leafs put over a tally in the thirteenth stanza to-day and checked the Orioles' effort in their rush for first place. The score was 4 to 3, and there was never a dull moment in the contest. There were fielding features galore, but the battle ended in a manner which did not please the home fans. There was a questionable play in the thirteenth and the umpires—Mullen and O'Brien—decided against the home club. That break won the ball game for the visitors.

"Bunny" Hearne was the fellow who pulled the stuff, and he won his own duel. The Toronto twirler opened the inning with a single to left. Truesdale hit to Fewster, who tossed to Shannon, at the bag. Hearne was forced all right, but he, no doubt, did everything possible to prevent a double play, just as most ball players do. As a result Shannon's throw to first was wild, and Truesdale took second. Then came another break. Jacobson swung hard, but merely rolled the ball toward third. Penham fielded it, and his throw hit the batter in the back as he was nearing first. Truesdale, always on the alert, turned third and kept going when he saw the ball strike Jacobson. Bentley picked up the sphere and hurled it wide of the plate, so Frankie scored with time to spare.

SENSATIONAL PLAYS.

The score would have been larger but for several sensational catches and stops. Bill Lamar dashed up the left field fence and pulled down a line drive from Whiteman's bat while Jacobson made two corking catches off his shoe strings. Schultz pulled a play of the same sort and Whiteman ran almost a city block to rob Bues, the batting hero of the day. Murray knocked down one line drive which was slated for an extra base wallop and cut off a run by stopping Shannon's hit as it was on its way to the outfield.

Rube Parnham really twirled much better ball than Hearne. He did not allow as many hits and actually grew more effective as the encounter progressed. From the seventh until the thirteenth the Leafs were set down in order. But, after all it must be admitted that Hearne had the heavy artillery of the locals lashed to the mast and always was steady in the pinches. The Birds got to him in the third and bumped his offerings, but after that he always was master of the situation when danger threatened.

Baltimore opened the scoring in the third when they tallied three runs. Acosta singled, took second on a passed ball and scored on Fewster's single. Lamar singled and Barber flied out, Bentley doubled counting Fewster, and scored himself on Bue's single.

The Leafs evened it up in the sixth. Hearne singled and Truesdale doubled, both scoring on Jacobson's single. The latter took second by Whiteman, and after Lajoie was hit by pitched ball crossed the platter on a liner by Schultz. The score:—

CUB PRESIDENT BOOSTS TORONTO

Wonders How American Retains Washington and Keeps Out Toronto.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16. — President Charles Weegham of the Cubs, returned to-day from Toronto, where he witnessed the exhibition game between the Cubs and Detroit. He was greatly pleased with the result and amazed at the size of the attendance.

"There were more than ten thousand paid admissions, and besides this number there were present many soldiers" said President Weeghman.

"It is my belief that Toronto is a real big league city. How the American League can retain a city like Washington in its circuit and keep out a place like Toronto is more than I can understand."

The Allies Will Defer Reply

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The Allies will not reply to the peace appeal of Pope Benedict until after a consultation, in which all of the Entente Powers will have a part at the game. There is some disposition in certain quarters to leave the answer to President Wilson.

BELLEVILLE CHURCHES UNITE.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 17. — St. Andrew's and John Street Presbyterian congregations have voted to unite and form one congregation. The proposal of union will be brought before Kingston Presbytery at its regular meeting in this city in September. In the event of union St. Andrew's will be used for worship and John Street for Sabbath school purposes.

Eskimo's Confession Is Put In Evidence

Told of Killing French Priests and Cutting Up the Body.

EDMONTON, August 17. — The feature of the murder trial of the two Eskimos, Sinnisiak and Uluksuk, was the confession which was put in evidence by the Crown prosecutor, C. C. McCaul, K.C. It was made by Sinnisiak. He said that he was at the Copper Mine River, and that Father Leroux asked him to pull his sleigh and he would pay him in traps. Both he and Uluksuk, the other accused, gave their aid. The next day, while they were still helping, it was storming and they lost the road. The two Eskimos found a cache, and were looking at it when the priests came. Father Leroux was angry, said the confession, and when asked if he was going to kill them, nodded his head. After some further quarrelling they became frightened, and Sinnisiak stabbed the priest in the back with a knife and Uluksuk finished him. Father Rouviere, the narrative continues, ran away and Sinnisiak took the rifle from the sleigh and shot the fleeing priest, and with the aid of an axe and a knife they both killed him. They then cut up the bodies, eating the liver.

Evaded Third Degree By Taking Own Life

MADRID, Au. 17. — Luis Correus, under arrest for seditious utterances, threw himself out of a window as he was being interrogated by a police official, and was killed.

The police assert they know the names of 900 persons who are implicated in the strike movement in Barcelona, which has caused serious disorders in Spain recently.

Several strikers have been injured in an encounter with troops at Sabadell, Catalonia. The Rio Tinto miners have struck.

Part Of Girl's Body Found Below Niagara

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Aug. 17. —Part of a young woman's body has been found on the shore of Niagara River about half way between Queenston and Youngstown, near Stella. It is believed to be part of the body of Miss Violet Seastrom of Jamestown, one of the victims of the Gorge Route tragedy of July 1. The girl's mother lost her life in the accident.

INSURANCE COMPANY OUT OF BUSINESS

Government Refused to Extend License to Canada Weather Insurance Co.

The Canada Weather Insurance Company which was incorporated in 1904 was yesterday wound up on its own petition by Mr. Justice Rose. Its policies have been reinsured with the Home Insurance Company, of New York. The company had a nominal capital of $500,000, of which $44,430.70 was paid up. It continued in business until last April when the Government refused to continue the company's license on the grounds that its surplus was not sufficient to protect its policy holders. The companys assets are $20,572, and its liabilities $3,664.30.

Dr. Brown accompanied the boy from Trent Bridge, and Dr. McNulty was called in the city.

Meatless Day At The Empress

Not One Complaint Was Reported — New Food Regulations

Not one complain was reported at the Empress Hotel to-day, where the meatless menu was in evidence for the first time to-day. Mr. Graham, the proprietor, has not yet received official notice of the new food regulations from the Food Controller, but, judging by the appended bill of fare, the new order-in-council declaring Tuesday and Friday meatless days, was pretty well observed. Several other places in the city did not observe the regulations, preferring to wait until next Tuesday, when a violation of the order will be severely dealt with.

Friday Meatless Day.

The following is the meatless bill of fare as provided by the Empress Hotel:

New Prices On Salmon Will Be High —The Market Situation

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week:

New prices on canned peas have been announced by the canners which will mean price on new pack to the retail trade will be $1.70 per dozen for standard peas. The pack has been very disappointing as hot weather cut short the pack much sooner than was anticipated as late as two weeks ago. The consequence is that canners claim they will be able to fill only 40 per cent. of their orders. New prices on canned salmon have not yet been named, but it is anticipated they will be high. Authentic advices from the coast state that the run has not been over 75 per cent. of what it was in 1913, the year of the previous big run. Canners had stocked up with cans in preparation for the run and their stocks of containers will be larger than their needs. Labour difficulties have furthermore added to the expense of packing. Only about 70 per cent. delivery on the other hand have been in good supply and 100 per cent. delivery will be made on these Outlook for canned tomatoes is yet in doubt. Weather conditions have been favorable within recent weeks, but wet weather of spring gave the plants a big growth and this may militate against heavy production.

Sugar Prices Firm.

Sugar has been a commodity of more than usual interest during the week. Two refiners have been unable to make deliveries of granulated for some days past, and the demand is keen on the part of wholesalers, indicating a good consumption. Prices have held firm at last week's advances in the face of a continued strong situation in Cuban raw sugars.

Advances have been recorded in meats of various kinds, butter, eggs, cornmeal, pickles, soap chips, castile soap, soups, condensed milk, lobsters, peanut butter. There is a disposition to look for lower prices in corn products, due to a big slump in the price of corn in the United States. Flour held in steady demand and the prices on millfeeds settled down somewhat during the week. Business in grocery lines shows some improvement.

INTRODUCED TO CAT.

Boy Was Unmoved by the Counsel of Chief Thompson.

Of the three boys who were remanded from yesterday's session of the police court in juvenile section, two of them were discharged with a warning. The third received an application of the corrective "cat," the effects of which will keep him a stranger to chairs for a day or two. This youth has quite a record on the police books. Repeated warnings failed to guide him.

The successful sponge cake depends on beating the eggs and sugar until all the sugar is dissolved.

ACTIVE CATTLE TRADE AND HEAVY RECEIPTS

Export Trade Becoming Active —Hogs' Sensational Advances to High Records

The week opened with a very heavy run of cattle, constituting a record for this season of the year. With over 4,500 head of cattle on sale, trade was brisk and active. It was inevitable, however, with such a heavy run that prices would fail to hold at all points. The total result was a general decline of about 25 cents on all grades of butcher cattle. A few lots of choice quality sold about steady with the previous week, but the average quality of the greater bulk of the receipts was poor. A few loads of choice heavy export steers were in a class by themselves, and prices on these were firm and strong. The demand for export to New York and Boston appears to be very active, and high prices are well assured for the right class of cattle.

After Mondays market, receipts for the balance of the week were light. It also became known that several buyers were in the market for other than choice heavy export steers. Fat cows were in request by these buyers, and quite a few of these were bought during the week for shipment over the line. With the lighter receipts and the outside demand, prices again stiened towards the latter part of the week, and by the closing markets Monday's 25c. decline had been fully recovered.

A strong market for choice weighty stockers and feeders characterized the week's buying. There is no call for the common light stockers, but for good breedy stock, there is a good active demand at firm prices.

Receipts of sheep and lambs have been fairly heavy, and the lamb trade fell off sharply early in the week.

ON THE MOVE.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Great hopes here for the present offensive in Flanders. It is believed Allies now have enemy definitely "on the move" if the weather holds good.

COUNTER ATTACK.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 18.—All new posts taken from the Germans are held firmly despite Germans' counter attacks.

Later there was a firmer feeling, and the market closed strong around $1.450 for choice lambs.

Calves are steady to strong for good veal.

Hogs, during the week, have made sensational advances, passing all former records. When the $18.25 fed and watered price was reached, speculation became rife as to where the advance will stop, and some wild guesses were made.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards.—Total receipts for the week: 50 cars, with 6,226 cattle, 770 calves, 7,457 hogs, $3,843 sheep and lambs, and $1,534 horses.

City Cattle Market—26 cars, with 257 cattle, 395 sheep and lambs, 47 hogs, 44 calves, and 201 horses.

FEEDING IN CITY KITCHENS.

More Than 180,000 in Hamburg Get Municipal Meals.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 15.—More than 180,000 residents of Hamburg are now being fed in the municipal soup kitchens, owing to the difficulty of obtaining food supplies for individual households. The number has fallen off recently, now that fresh vegetables are obtainable, it having reached the maximum in April, May and June, when between 230,000 and 240,000 persons visited the kitchens daily for their meals. It is expected that the number will increase again considerably during the coming winter.

These figures do not take into consideration the school kitchens, where midday meals are supplied for pupils, nor the canteens maintained at many factories and in shipyards.

The summer vegetable season has slightly lowered the death rate, which during the first week of June was 49 per cent. higher than the birth rate, 200 births being recorded to 298 deaths. The excess of deaths has fallen to about 30 per cent.

New York State Exemption Board Rejected 22 Out Of 23 Appeals For Exemption

No Discussion Permitted and No Time Wasted in Hearing Applications—Indispensibility a Condition Narrowed Down to Extreme Cases.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—It is not going to be an easy matter for a man of draft age, who is physically fit for service, to win exemption from service in the national army. This was indicated when the New York City District Board, of which Charles E. Hughes is chairman, handed down decisions in twenty-two cases, fifteen of which had been appealed from decisions of local boards, and seven of which were made direct to the board. The board denied the appeals in twenty-one of the cases and granted a conditional six months' exemption in the other case, which was that of a man who is employed in an important capacity in the munition industry.

The court-room on the third floor of the Federal Building, in which the Appeal Board holds its public sessions, was crowded when Chairman Hughes called the board to order at 10.30 o'clock. The board is a strictly business organization and permits no delaying tactics on the part of any one. The name of the man who appeals, his serial number, the board in whose district he lives, and his reasons for exemption, are read, and then the decision is announced. When the word "denied" or "granted" is uttered the case is at an end. No arguments, oral or written, are permitted, and, except in certain cases where exemption is sought for occupational or industrial reasons, the decision is final. In the exceptional cases referred to appeal to the President is permissible under the law.

William E. Hoffman appealed from the decision of Board 124, which had denied his claim for exemption on the ground that he is the sole support of a widowed mother. The papers in the case showed that the mother had two other sons who are in a position to assume her support, and the appeal was denied. Charles H. Katz was certified for service by Board 153. He appealed from the decision on the ground that his eyesight was defective and that he suffered from other disabilities. The distrjct board affirmed the decision of the local board.

Irving Shattan appealed from the decision of Board 169, which denied his claim for exemption on the ground that he was the sole support of his wife. The appeal was denied. Samuel H. Crittenden was found fit for service by Board 129, and appealed for exemption as the sole support of his mother. It was shown that the father had deserted the mother thirteen years ago. The board ruled that the son was not the sole support of his mother, as contemplated by the law, unless it was shown that the husband was not in a position to support her. The decision of the local board was affirmed.

James F. Kehoe, appealing from Board 124, based his claim for exemption on the ground that he was the sole support of his wife. The appeal was denied.

Jesse C. Gerowe, also an appellant from Local Board 124, claimed that he was the sole support of his wife. The local board had ruled that the wife could live with her parents in Binghamton while Gerowe was in the National Army. The District Board affirmed this decision.

Found No Physical Disability.

Joseph J. Heledson filed a claim with Board 124 for exemption on the ground of physical disability. The examining physicians of the board ruled that Heledson was physically fit, and the District Board upheld the decision and ordered Heledson certified for service. Robert M. Valverde also appealed from the decision of Board 124, on the ground that he was physically unfit for service. His appeal to the District Board was denied.

Max Goldenberg appealed from the decision of Board 34, in Brooklyn, which had found him fit for service. He declared that he was a victim of hernia. The examining physicians found no evidence of this, and the district board ruled that Goldenberg is fit for service.

Peter Gravitz, another appellant from Board 34, appealed for exemption on the ground that he was the sole support of a father and a stepmother. The local board had ruled that conclusive evidence of dependency was lacking and refused to exempt. The district board affirmed the decision.

Jesse R. Pike was refused exemption by Board 124. He claimed exemption as the sole support of a wife whom he had married on May 12, last. The local board held that it had not been shown that Mrs. Pike could not support herself. The appeal was denied. Andrew Paoli sought exemption from Board 124 as the sole support of a wife. The evidence before the local board showed that Mrs. Paoli is a strong healthy woman, who had been employed by a slot machine company at $18 a week, and later by a grocery concern at $8 a week. There was some argument on this case, but in the end the appeal was denied.

Nathan Green, appealing from Board 164, gave as his ground the support of dependent relatives. The appeal was denied. Leo B. Kreutzer was certified for service by Board 169. He appealed, stating that he was a victim of chronic appendicitis. The physicians reported there was no evidence of such affliction and the District Board denied the appeal. Harold M. Wall was passed as physically fit for service by Board 134. He was married on June 1 last and filed a claim for exemption as the sole support of his wife. The local board denied the appeal and the District Board affirmed the decision.

Samuel Stein, passed for service by Board 124, filed a claim for a ninety-days' exemption in which to put his business affairs in shape. The application was denied. Donald G. Davis, certified for service by Board 134, filed a claim with the District Board for exemption because he was employed by the Sperry Gyroscope Company, which manufactures compasses and other scientific instruments for the United States Navy. Davis insisted that his services are indispensable, but the board took a different view and ruled that evidence needed to justify the exemption was lacking. His application was denied.

Wesley T. Smith, passed for service by Board 12, in the Bronx, said in his appeal to the District Board, that his knowledge of the secret processes used in the manufacture of certain products rendered his services indispensable. The board ruled that the evidence to support the claim was lacking, and denied the application. Edward Aaronsohn, certified for service by Board 63 in Brooklyn, filed a claim for exemption with the District Board on the ground that he was employed by a company which manufactures delicate instruments used in submarines. He declared that his service, at the present time, was indispensable to the Government. Again the board ruled that evidence was lacking and denied his application.

One Gets Temporary Exemption.

Arthur I. Forst, passed by Board 124, told the District Board that his services as vice-president and general manager of the Metropolitan Paper Bottle Company are of such nature as to be indispensable to that company. The application was denied on the same ground as the others of similar nature. William C. Corbin, who was certified by Board 33, in Brooklyn, asked the District Board to exempt him on the ground that he was the manager of a factory manufacturing airplane ribs. This application was the subject of some discussion. Mr. Delehanty, one of the board members, thought the application should be granted because of the vital importance of the airplane in the war. Former Supreme Court Justice George L. Ingraham and Louis Marshall recommended the denial of the application. The application was denied. Mr. Hughes announced after the disposal of this case that arrangements were being made to have Government experts pass on such cases as the above.

A. O. Crocker, passed for service by Board 150, applied for exemption on the ground that his services in the employ of the Western Electric Company were indispensable. His application was denied. Louis W. Dunham, certified for service by Board 32, in Brooklyn, was granted a six months' exemption, which, however, is revocable at the pleasure of Provost Marshal General Crowder. Mr. Dunham is the supervisor of the shrapnel shells being manufactured for the United States Government by the American Can Company.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

Cholera Infantum is one of the fatal ailments of childhood. It is a trouble that comes on suddenly, especially during the summer months and unless prompt action is taken the little one may soon be beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets are an ideal medicine in warding off this trouble. They regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus prevent all the dreaded stomach complaints. Concerning them Mrs. Fred Rose, South Bay, Ont., says: "I feel Baby's Own Tablets saved the life of our baby when she had cholera infantum and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. William Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Work Of Years Matter Of Hours

It sometimes requires years of work on the part of an entire family in the Far East to produce one of the beautiful Oriental Rugs so much prized throughout the world. It has remained for Canadian invention to perfect machinery to produce in a few hours a rug that would defy an expert to distinguish it from the genuine hand-made article. The first of these machines has just been completed, and will be shown in full operation in the Process Building at the Canadian National Exhibition. Other process operations to be carried on there will be the manufacture of blankets and khaki cloth for the Canadian Army, while in contrast will be shown an old spinning wheel turning out rugs as grandmother did a hundred years ago. Then there will be shown also the blowing of delicate glass surgical and medical instruments and other equally interesting branches of manufacture.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns soft corns or any kind of corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

It was growing dark and he knew he must hurry; for going down would be far harder and more risky than climbing up. So he wasted no time in cogitation, but slipped the gun into his pocket. It was too good to leave it behind where it would be rusted by the night dews. He could find out later it whom it belonged.

He paused on that remote pinnacle and looked at the deepening glory in the west, and thought of Enid. He was not given to praying but his thoughts at that moment were not very much unlike a prayer—a man's prayer addressed to the sort of Creator who made both men and women.

Then with his laurel burden, he began the descent.

The air of the hills had suddenly grown cool and almost sharp. Scents and sounds, as is their way in mountain atmosphere, came out emphatically, fixing themselves poignantly upon the perceptions. Until that moment, it seemed to Radnor, all impressions had been merged into one mystic blend; now all at once he caught odors and echoes that he had not noticed in the equalizing light of the day. Does night really raise the pitch, increase the vibration of all things?

He was walking under crowding stooping trees, the perfume of which, wildwood-like and eloquent, made scent-music in his ears. Low rustlings spoke to his heart as actual vision might have done. The senses by being raised to their power, became interchangeable at will. The whole world was awake and living so keenly that his own blood pounded in response.

And at that moment he found himself confronted by a group of men still visible in the twilight, one of whom, tall, slim and muscular, came toward him with upraised hand.

"Hold on a moment," he said, and the voice sounded vaguely familiar, though Jack could not place it. "What are you up to on this trail to-night?"

"What the ——" Jack brought up short, and instinctively dug his hand into his breeches pocket.

"We've the drop," spoke up one of the men behind the leader. "Don't get fresh."

"We shall have to search you," said the slim stranger, advancing.

"Like —— you will!" rejoined Jack hotly. He had released his hold on the revolver in his pocket; now he flung aside his armful of laurel, and stood ready.

The slim young man promptly jumped for him.

"Thank the Lord!" said Jack with devout fury, and grappled. He did know something about wrestling, but so it seemed did his assailant. The men stood about in a very sportsmanlike fashion, without interfering, and after a stiff little scrimmage, Radnor succeeded in throwing his adversary.

The man, stumbling to his feet, advanced with an outstretched hand.

"I've an idea," he said, "there are only a few fellows that know that particular hold, and—if someone would give us a light——"

But already Jack had recognized him. It was Judge Denby's son.

"Ralph, by all the gods!"

Jack had known Ralph Denby since early Groton days: they had been at Harvard together, though in different classes and their fathers were old friends. Ralph was about Radnor's height, but a year or so younger, and slighter. He was, as he had always been, a trained athlete, and Jack remarked ruefully, "Hang you, you have not forgotten that old fall of yours, have you?"

Both men stood back and laughed at each other, though both were now breathing heavily. Then Jack picked up his flowers and Ralph turned to his troop of followers:

"It's all right; it's a mistake."

The others laughed, too, and then, as they all swung down the trail together, Ralph Denby said:

"What on earth brings you here, anyway, at this hour?"

"Mountain laurel!" answered Radnor, laughing again.

He was amazed at the effect of this simple statement.

"Mountain laurel!" repeated young Denby, and stopped short in the trail. "See here, are you——"

Jack interrupted him with some irritation.

"Really, I can't see why you should make such an ass of yourself, Denby! I came up here to get some laurel for Enid——"

"On the level?"

It was too dark by now to be sure, but Radnor felt that his friend's eyes were on him in searching fashion. In the twilight he flushed.

"What I say usually is," he rejoined stiffly.

Ralph seemed to relax, and put his hand on his arm.

"That goes, Jack!" he said, in a different tone.

"You see, I'm the deputy sheriff for the night——"

"The devil you are!"

"Yes! And old Heaton has put me on the job of patrolling some of these trails. There's something in the wind and we want to get a line on it before they get started."

"Just who are 'they'?"

"These mountain chaps—the fellows who go in for moonshining and road-agenting, and——"

"And supplying the moving-picture business with material!" said Jack. "I know! Don't believe in them myself."

"I'm not sure that I don't," said Denby. "The governor says there is a lot of lawlessness up here."

"Well, your father ought to know."

"You bet he ought, and you bet he does! As a Judge, he can't do very much himself, you understand, but has to depend on Sheriff Heaton, and I, if you please, am run in on the job! I don't know exactly what they think is on for to-night but orders have been pretty strict. Where are you going, by the bye?"

"To meet Enid at the Toll Gate," returned Jack who has just paused at the crossing of the trails.

Ralph Denby whistled softly.

"There's a den of thieves, if you like!" he said. "At least, that's the reputation of Four Trails. A sort of sounding-up place for all the mountain thugs and blacklegs. Well, take care of yourself, and good night to you—you and your 'mountain laurel!'"

"You've left me some nice looking specimens of it!" remarked Radnor resentfully. "We must have walked on it, up there!"

Even in the dusk it was obvious that the flowers had been crushed as well as wilted.

"Sorry!" said Denby, heartlessly. "My regards to Miss Forsythe. All right, boys."

He went off with his men and the lot of them disappeared in the dimness of the overhanging perfumed trees.

Within thirty feet, Radnor was challenged again.

"Hands up!" said some one.

"Not so you would notice it!" exclaimed Jack, who was beginning to feel thoroughly wrathful. He pulled the recently acquired revolver from his pocket. "I'm armed, so you can come on and fire, and be damned to you!" Then as no one accepted the invitation, he added: "This looks to me like some sort of a joke, and a confoundedly bad one. What on earth do you want me for, anyway?"

One of the men, only a shadow in the darkness, came forward.

"Name and password, please!"

"Not on your life!"

There was a sound of muttered laughter at this. Whatever else they were, these various hold-up men seemed of a genial disposition.

"Where are you going?" was the next question. It was pacifically given, but Radnor wanted to retort: "None of your business." Instead, however, he merely said, resignedly:

"See here, my affairs appear to be very much more interesting to you than to me, this evening. So let's save time by having the full particulars. My name is John Worth Radnor of New York, at present of Warm Sulphur Springs, and ——"

"Cut all that."

"With pleasure! I am at this moment supposed to be taking a ride."

The laughter was unrestrained this time.

"Where's the horse?" someone demanded.

"Hold on a moment! I am trying to tell you. The horse is at Four Trail Crossing, the Toll Gate, where I am going as soon as you get through asking me questions."

"Four Trail Crossing!"

The exclamation was general and deep, and there was laughter in it.

"That's different," said the man who had spoken first.

HARVESTERS! LOOK!

36,000 farm labourers are wanted in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, for the harvesting of the crop.

The Canadian Northern Railway will operate the first excursion trains for the West, leaving Toronto Union Depot at 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. August 21st, and 10 p.m. August 30th, and running through solid to Winnipeg.

The equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars, lunch counter cars, and, in addition, the railway will continue their last year's innovation of keeping a special car for the accommodation of single women and families, and of placing it in the train where the occupants will be separated from the other passengers.

The territory served by the Canadian Northern Lines offers the widest choice of employment with high wages, but regardless of where you may locate, remember we give the best service to Winnipeg, where you will re-purchase to final destination, no matter on what Line it may be.

For leaflet showing special train service, with dates, number of men required at various points and other information, apply to Thos. Mark, Town Agent, or General Passenger Department, Canadian Northern Railway, Toronto. t-t-s-tf-36

HARVESTERS READ THIS

The best way to the Harvest Fields of Western Canada is by the Canadian Northern Railway. Special through trains will be operated from Toronto to Winnipeg on excursion dates. The equipment will consist of electric-lighted colonist cars and lunch counter cars specially designed to cater to the needs of large bodies of men at moderate rates. West of Winnipeg the demand for labour is great along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway and the wages are correspondingly high. All particulars from Thomas Mark, Town Agent, or General Passenger Departments, Montreal, Quebec, and Toronto, Ont. w,s-tf.

THOUSANDS OF MEN REQUIRED FOR HARVESTING IN WESTERN CANADA

Thousands of men are required to help in the great work of harvesting the Western crop. Arrangements for transporting to the West this great army of workers have been completed by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated making the trip in about thirty-six hours without change or transfer.

Going trip West, $12.00 to Winnipeg.

Returning trip East, $18.00 from Winnipeg.

Consult C.P.R. Agents regarding transportation west of Winnipeg.

HOME DEFENCE
The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.
What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?
Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?
You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HAPPILY FOOLED

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

"My dear," said Mr. Phillips to his wife, "don't you think that Lucy should be thinking about providing for herself by marrying?"

"Lucy marry! Why, my goodness gracious, the child isn't four months past fifteen. She won't be thinking about matrimony for three or four years yet at least, and if she goes to college it's more likely to be six or seven. What put that into your head?"

"Why, I was thinking—you know how much money I have lost lately—this Tommy Harding who came home with her from school the other day will come into quite a fortune when he is twenty-one. If the kids could be united I wouldn't worry about Lucy. As it is I'm constantly wondering what you and she would do in case I should be cut off."

"You're not going to be cut off. At any rate, nothing can be done about marrying Lucy till she has got out of childhood. Why, she's scarcely left off playing with her doll."

"Well, I suppose you're right about it. Lucy is only a child, and she's got her education before her."

Nevertheless the husband's suggestion effected a lodgment in his wife's mind, and she regretted that the children were too young to be brought together. Tommy was a nice boy, and it was known that he would come into a substantial fortune. Mrs. Phillips would have liked to bridge over three or four years for her daughter, though, since Tommy was but a year older than Lucy, he would need even more time than this to develop into full manhood.

However, the matter of uniting the children when they should become older had got into Mrs. Phillips' head, and she couldn't let the matter alone. One day Mr. Phillips said to her:

"What's become of Tommy? I have not seen him around here for a long while."

"He's not coming so much now as he did."

"What's the trouble?"

"Well, it's your fault. You seemed to be so anxious that Lucy should secure his fortune that in order to help the matter out I sort of teased Lucy about him"—

"You mean in order to gratify your curiosity."

"Anyway, what I said proved that my claim that she was too young to think about such things is correct. A childish friendship has been broken by suggesting love."

"I see."

"If you hadn't got it into your head that a marriage could be arranged between two children it all might have come about in time of itself."

"Rather if you had stuck to your own opinion and let the matter alone Lucy might have in the end been provided for."

A month or two later another dialogue took place between Mr. and Mrs. Phillips about what the former called "scaring the children off."

"Pa," said the lady, "I think whatever damage I did when I spoke to Lucy about Tommy may have passed. I met them coming home from school the other day, and they were walking together. Tommy was carrying Lucy's books. She looked put out when she saw me. And Tommy handed her her books and went off in another direction. I'm sorry I said anything to make them feel embarrassment. Such things should never be suggested between children. It takes away the freedom, the sweet innocence of childhood."

"I expressed a wish, and you acted upon it, which was the worst thing you could have done. Don't think any more about it. By the time the kids get old enough to marry they'll both have changed and each will marry some one else."

The last conversation between these fond parents was in this wise. Mr. Phillips had arisen and was standing before the glass shaving. His wife had gone forth in a wrapper and curl papers to waken Lucy:

"Oh, my goodness gracious, pa!"

"What is it?' turning sharply with a razor in his hand and one-half his face lathered, the other side smooth. His wife staggered to a chair.

"Lucy is not in her room."

"Where is she?"

"She isn't in the house."

"Not in the house!"

"No" — pathetically — "she's run away."

"How do you know?"

The lady extended a bit of paper, from which she read:

Dear Mamma and Papa—Forgive us. We know we're doing very wrong, but we can't help it. We love each other just too dearly for anything.

"What does it mean?"

"I don't know. If Lucy wasn't so very young I would think she had eloped."

"She has eloped; of course she has! Don't you see she says 'We love each other' and all that?"

A maid entered with a telegram. Mr. Phillips, laying down the paper, tore off the corner and read:

We are married. Are we forgiven?
THOMAS HARDING.

Mr. Phillips as he looked up from the message was a model for a comic artist. His suspenders were down behind, half his face was covered with lather, and on it was the smile of one who had been sold, but to his especial satisfaction.

"Ma," he said, "I thought you said they were kids. But Lucy's got a fortune."

Ancient Greek Games.

Allusions to the athletic games of the Greeks are abundant in St. Paul's Epistles. These contests were divided into two classes, the pancratium, consisting of boxing and wrestling, and the pentathlon, consisting of leaping, running, throwing the discus, hurling the spear and wrestling.

Crushed Again.

"If I have a fault," said Mr. Henpeck, "it is that"—

"If you have 'a' fault!" Mrs. Henpeck broke in. "Ha, ha! Excuse me for laughing. If I have a fault it is that I sometimes permit my sense of humor to get the better of me."

Too Sensitive.

"What is wrong between that young engaged couple?"

"He didn't like it because when he told her that he would die for her she wanted to know how much life insurance he carried.'

No Case.

The old miser in the story, who dropped a five-dollar gold piece in the plate at church, mistaking it for a nickel, could get no great satisfaction out of the deacon, as will be recalled, but he was not the man to give up easily.

Accordingly he sought legal advice with a view of instituting a suit at law.

But the lawyer whom he consulted was one of those rare and gifted souls who would rather be witty than rich, or almost anything else, for that matter.

"Sir," said he at once, "you have no case. You are guilty of contributory negligence."

Spanish Doubloons.

Should one find a pirate's buried treasure he would have to dispose of his Spanish gold at its bullion value, for since Aug. 1, 1906, when the common crier made proclamation from the steps of the Royal Exchange of London that after that date the doubloon would cease to be legal tender in the West Indies, including British Guiana, the doubloon has not been the precious thing it was. In 1730 and for a century after it was worth $8, more or less. It has ceased to be coined in its native country, Spain, and since 1906 it has been unpopular in the West Indies, where for a long time it figured in a mixed circulation, embracing British, United States and Spanish coins. In the interest of romance, however, the name at least must survive. It signifies nothing more than that the coin was double the value of a pistole, but the "doubloon" was never such a mouth filling mockery as "pieces of eight," which suggests great riches, but means only Spanish silver dollars, pieces equivalent to eight reals.—Rochester Post Express.

Until a little while ago she thought them unavoidable. If you have corns don't blame yourself too much. Many an old person has had them fifty years.

YET they have done what you do—pared them and used old-time, useless treatments.

But what folly it is when nowadays about half the world keeps free.

The chemist who invented Blue-jay made corns forever needless.

Last year some 17 million corns were ended in this simple, easy way.

Just try one corn.

Apply a Blue-jay plaster in a jiffy. Then forget it. It will never pain again.

In two days take the plaster off. The corn will disappear. Only one corn in ten needs another application.

You will laugh at the old ways when you try Blue-jay. You will wonder why people ever let corns hurt. Please start tonight. You have suffered long enough.

IT'S COMING

EXAMINER AND MERCHANTS

$ Great DOLLAR DAY $
MONEY SAVING EVENT
Will soon be here

GRATIFIED by the enthusiasm of the people over the previous Dollar Days in Peterboro, and urged by the people from outside who were unable to attend the last one owing to bad roads, the Examiner is again co-operating with the Merchants in featuring a Mid-Summer Dollar Day.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 22

The date selected should be the most suitable of all the summer season, for a record crowd to attend from outside points. There's everything to come for, and only regrets if you don't. There's a company of hustling merchants preparing a feast unequalled in the history of the city. In any line of goods you want, you will find your Dollar has a buying power you would have thought impossible. As Dollar Day selling is just for one day, the merchants in order to add zest to the excitement, make their offerings look reckless, but it is because they have entered into the spirit of the thing, and they are bound to do their part at considerable loss.

Estimate the NUMBER of these Blanks that will be filled in and Dropped into the Ballot Box at the Examiner Office by 7 p. m. on DOLLAR DAY.

As a guide in estimating the probable number of blanks that will be used, the three previous Dollar Day results may be studied. On the first one, March 12, 1914, with good weather and roads, there were 16,000 blanks dropped into the box at the Examiner Office. On the next Dollar Day, in 1915, with bad weather and impassable roads, the result showed only 10,807 estimate blanks put in the box. On the last summer Dollar Day, held in August, 1916, when holiday season affected the crowd, there were 7,054 blanks dropped in the box. With these figures as a guide an intelligent estimate can be made if the weather and season are taken into consideration.

The Dollar Day crowd is the happiest gathering that meets in Peterboro in the year.

You can recognize all the stores where Dollar Specials are being given by the Red Lettered Pennants in the windows.

RAILWAY RATES Parties of Ten coming from any one point to Peterboro on Wednesday, August 22nd, Dollar Day, can secure a rate of FARE and ONE-THIRD by making application to the Local Agent.

ECZEMA

ECZEMA is not a disease of the blood, and therefore cannot be cured by internal treatment. The curative agent must be applied directly to the inflamed, itching skin. To know this is to save much time and suffering, for it is on this account that Dr. Chase's Ointment has been able to establish such an enviable record as a cure for eczema and kindred diseases of the skin.

Chafing and irritation of the skin is the usual cause of eczema. The irritation may be caused by the clothing or as the result of an injury of some kind. In some cases where the skin is extremely sensitive the frequent application of cold water or the use of impure soap is sufficient to set up an irritation of the skin which results in eczema.

But whatever may be the cause, of one thing you can be certain, that Dr. Chase's Ointment will effect a cure if used persistently. You are not experimenting when you use it, for it is known the world over as the most effective treatment for eczema.

AIRCRAFT SCOUTS.

Their Value In Naval Warfare In Locating Submarines.

NOT GOOD AT SINKING THEM.

While They Are Clever at "Spotting" the Submerged Boats, It Is Only by Great Skill and Good Luck That a Bomb Can Be Dropped to Its Mark.

In some ways an aeroplane is more effective in locating a submarine than a destroyer or a patrol boat, and it may even be able in exceptional circumstances to destroy the undersea vessel, says C. G. Grey, editor of the London Aeroplane.

There is a popular illusion, which is not exactly a delusion, that the observer in an aeroplane can see as far down into the water as a submarine is likely to dive. Up to a point this is true, for if the water is clear it is possible to see some twenty or thirty feet into it from a point vertically above, and if such water is only forty or fifty feet deep a submarine is not likely to dive beyond the visibility point.

It is quite another matter, however, where the water is a kind of leaden gray in color and where ten feet of water over the periscope is enough to hide a submarine as effectually as if she were twenty fathoms down. Therefore it is fairly obvious that the scouting air craft have to depend on surface vision quite as much as the patrol boats. Where the difference does come in is in the angle of vision from which that surface view is obtained.

For instance, a patrol boat might well miss seeing a periscope half a mile away, especially if the periscope were between the boat and the sun, so that the reflection of the sun off the water was dazzling the lookout men. The aircraft observer, on the other hand, perched up aloft, would have a far better chance. The periscope, cutting through the water, makes a very distinct wake which spreads out on each side so that it makes a light but quite distinct "broad arrow" of foam.

When the periscope is above water the top of the conning tower is not far below, so that this also is visible unless there is a heavy breaking sea. And probably the bubbles from the exhausting air can also be seen.

Thus an escort of seaplanes should have a far better chance of spotting the presence of submarines than could any escort of surface ships. At the same time it is well to remember that an escort of destroyers or some similar type of armed ship is necessary, because the aeroplane or airship of today is not capable of carrying guns big enough to sink submarines with certainty, and the art of bomb dropping from aircraft has not become sufficiently a science to make the certainty of the bombs reaching their mark as great as is the certainty of a shell from a four inch gun doing so.

Therefore the aircraft by themselves can only hope to keep submarines submerged by dropping bombs at them, though they may sink one here and there by a combination of personal skill and good luck, whereas by acting as "spotters" for the highly trained gunners of destroyer flotillas they can co-operate very materially in the actual destruction of enemy submarines.

Where the naval air craft really do come in is in the immense surface of sea which they can cover in a very short time and their ability to take enemy submarines by surprise while lying on the surface "airing" themselves and charging up their batteries. A small fast scouting aeroplane does anything between eighty and a hundred miles an hour, and at a height of 7,000 or 8,000 feet it is fairly hard to see. On land one is generally warned of an aeroplane's arrival by the sound of its engines, but at sea the lapping of the water and the whistling of the wind through rigging or a thin superstructure drowns the sound of the aeroengine till it is fairly close. Consequently a seaplane has more than a sporting chance of getting within a mile or so of a submarine before it is seen, and if it gets within that distance it should be able to make things very unpleasant for the submarine, even if it has not the luck to sink it outright.

Even at night in moderately fair weather, which is naturally the best for submarine operations, aeroplanes with searchlights could do much to keep submarines under water and so add to their troubles by preventing them from stopping on the surface long enough to air their interiors and to charge their storage batteries.

Resistance of the Wind.

Tests on a model of the naval collier Neptune made in the wind tunnel of the Washington navy yard by Naval Constructor William McEntee show that if this vessel were steaming against a thirty mile wind at 14 knots an hour it would require about 770 horsepower to overcome the resistance of the wind. This is about 20 per cent of the power necessary to propel her through the water.

Very Formal.

"Are you on very friendly terms with your neighbor in the apartments?"

"Well, no. She's rather formal—always sends her card when she wishes to borrow flour, and if she wants both flour and sugar she sends two cards."

One must fight as an archangel for freedom, but in freedom we must live as a saint.

Books in Brazil.

In Brazil, as throughout South America, French is almost universally read. Editions of the classics are found in most homes, and bookstores are filled with modern French writers of prose or verse, sometimes in translation, and as frequently in the original.

Went Further.

"Didn't I tell you that when you met a man in hard luck you ought to greet him with a smile?" said the wise and good counselor.

"Yes," replied the flinty souled person. "I went even further than that. I gave him the grand laugh."

Best Way of Taking Iron.

When anemic persons have to take iron the best form in which to administer it is spinach, cabbage, green chicory, asparagus, lentils, carrots and peas, all of which contain much iron.

About the Same Thing.

Let us teach people as much as we can to enjoy, and they will learn for themselves to sympathize.—Stevenson.

SAILORS SAVED THE WORLD.

What Would Happen if British Fleet Should Fail.

Edward G. Lowry, writing in The World's Work, asks consideration of this dramatic fact: There are between 25 and 40 fighting ships, with their auxiliaries, flying the British flag, now lying at naval bases along the North Sea coast of Great Britain, that control the food supplies of millions, the rate of exchange all over the world, the political destinies of hundreds of millions, and the growth or decay of democracy on this planet.

If by hook or crook the German could destroy the British heavy battleship fleet in a night the whole direction and destiny of humanity would be changed.

The downfall of the Roman empire was a momentous event in the history of the world, but it was gradual. Society had opportunity to accommodate itself to its change. But the fate of this world as it is organized to-day hangs on that little group of engines of war off the north coast of Scotland and the men who control it. They mean more to us and to posterity than anyone quite realizes. Verdun and the Berlin-Bagdad ideas, great conceptions as they are, dwarf into trivialities.

Should this little group of floating gun platforms fail in its appointed task, the people in the United States would feel the effects, next to Great Britain, more than any country or people in the world. It would mean that England would be starved into submission. It would mean a financial panic such as the world has never seen. Credit would dry up. Exchange would break down. All the fabric of international commerce would be destroyed. All the relationships that have been established between nation and nation, and people and people, would have to be reconstructed on a new basis. It would mean nothing less than the reconstruction of the civilization of the whole world. Every trade route, every financial arrangement, every political agreement, and every international policy would have to be modified and shaped to meet the new and unreliable conditions.

No finite vision can comprehend in definite, actual terms the extent and full effect of such a calamity. It is worth thinking about and worth speculating about here in America, remote as is the possibility, if it brings home to the people here how closely our destinies in the world are linked with Great Britain's. It also shows that the United States and Great Britain are indissolubly bound together in this world. Their fortunes cannot be separated. They must fail or prosper, rise or fall, together. Neither can go ahead at the expense of the other. Every day since this war began has proved that.

If the United States had not supplied Britain and her Allies from their financial, industrial, economic, and agricultural resources the war against Germany could not have been waged as it has been.

If Great Britain, through the employment of her sea power, her fleet, had not kept the sea lanes open, the condition of stagnation that came at the outbreak of the war would have prevailed, only to a lesser degree today. You can draw the black picture for yourself of what would happen if the British fleet were destroyed.

Picture Records of War.

A large proportion of the pictures made in the European war are not intended for public exhibition. A rigid censorship is exercised over all photographic work by the governments, exactly as in the case of the mails, and printed matter. The films may be developed in the field or in nearby cities, but they are not permitted to leave the country until they have been passed upon. A board of censors sits in a darkened room at headquarters and scans every detail of the movies as they flash past. Should some secret, valuable in any way to the enemy, be revealed, it is erased or the film is destroyed.

The presence of the moving picture men in such numbers at the front does not mean that the governments are going into the show business. The photographs thus secured, at enormous expense, become matters of official record and are, of course, invaluable. In no previous war has such complete photographic reproduction been possible, and the Government officials have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity. It is estimated that upward of 10,000 films have been prepared by the army movie men in Germany alone. They are intended mainly for educational work in the military training schools.

As illustrations for text books and lectures, the war movies will have a unique value in the classroom. A lesson in strategy, for instance, may be illustrated by a moving picture showing the advance or retreat of troops in an actual engagement. Every phase of military instruction may thus be illustrated. The motion pictures showing the construction of bridges will help to train still more efficient engineers in the future than in the past. A careful study of their value will make the great expense and risk involved in securing these interesting war pictures seem trifling.

Peanut Butter Soup.

In these days of high prices it may be useful to housewives to learn how to make a delicious, nourishing soup, a quart of which may be made for a nominal cost. This is a puree of peanut butter or cream of peanut soup. It can also be made in less than ten minutes, thereby costing very little for fuel.

The ingredients are three cupfuls of milk, a cupful of boiling water, half a cupful of peanut butter, a teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of nutmeg, a tablespoonful of cornstarch, a dash of pepper and a tablespoonful of cut parsley.

While the milk is heating mix the peanut butter with the boiling water and work it smooth, then add to the boiling milk. Mix the cornstarch with a little cold milk and add to the hot milk. Add the salt, pepper and nutmeg. Boil for three minutes and sprinkle with parsley. Serve with little crackers.

All Fixt.

A Brighton mother, on hearing that her sister had received a new little girl, said to Lillian, her little daughter:

"Lillian, auntie has a new baby, and now mama is the baby's aunt, papa is the baby's uncle, and you are her little cousin."

"Well," said Lillian, wonderingly, "wasn't that arranged quick?"

MISUNDERSTOOD.

For the first three years of their married life the wife's mother had lived with the young couple. Then, one morning, without even stopping to pack, hubby fled.

The young wife rushed upstairs and told the news to her mother. "I suppose some nasty low woman is responsible for his leaving you," said the latter.

"Yes, mother," said the sorrowing wife, "there was a woman in it."

"Her name?" demanded the good lady, palpitating like an enraged motor-omnibus.

"You, mother," came the whispered reply.

MONTREAL Aug. 17.— The police yesterday afternoon detained a man they believe knows something of the attempt to blow up the house of Lord Atholstan. The man they say is an anti-conscriptionist orator, and is charged with stealing an automobile. The police think the car was used to convey the dynamiters to Lord Atholstan's house at Cartierville.

This picture shows gunners taking cover under a hot bombardment. They are just entering the dug-out as a shell bursts almost on the 18-pdr.

The King at the front, on Wytschaete Ridge. His Majesty wore Field-Marshal's service uniform and a steel helmet—a necessary precaution in view of the fact that he was frequently within range of German shells. Some, indeed, fell not very far away, but the King was indifferent to danger.

Above—Monitors on the Tigris. H.M.S. "Sedgefly" (at Sheik Sa'ad). Sir Stanley Maude tells, in his recently published despatch, of the fine work done by the Naval forces on the Tigris towards the capture of Baghdad.

To the right—His Majesty's personal interest in the work of his soldiers. The King talking to an infantryman at the front.

Above—Between the battles, fishing; and aboard a "boat" of oil-drums. The war-worn men on the Western Front must welcome with a zest unimaginable by those who know nothing of "war's alarms" the rare intervals of rest and change which the fortune of war allows them. To the right—In a dressing-station at the front. A V.A.D. worker.

Breezy Bits From the Briny Deep and Other Phases of the War

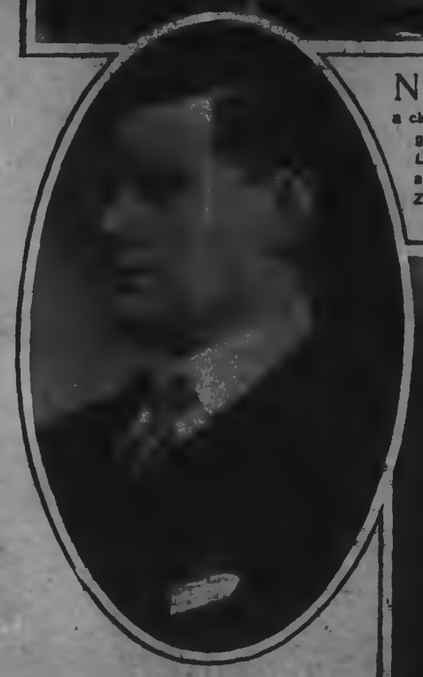
These interesting old people belong to the Leukerbad district, in Switzerland. Here all the old women delight in smoking a pipe; whether the fact that the district has now been opened by an electric railway will change the habit, remains to be seen. What may happen in case of a German raid through Switzerland or France or Italy—is another question. This couple is thoroughly neutral. The man is half French, and half German by descent. The woman is part English and part German.

Canadian women war workers are fast adopting the practical overall costume. This group of workers was photographed during lunch hour at the shops of the Canadian Pacific Railway works at Montreal, where a large number of women are now taking the places of men. They claim the new garments are not only more convenient in their work, but comfortable and—becoming as well. These young ladies are French-Canadian extraction.

Homage to a brave Frenchman: Serge Basset, dramatist and war-correspondent—A brilliant war-correspondent and dramatist has been lost to France by the death of M. Serge Basset. Mr. Philip Gibbs writes: "It was to the sound of guns that the war-correspondents—English, American and French—with the British armies in the field, walked behind a gun-carriage bearing the body of a good and gallant comrade who had died . . . on the field of honor. It was the body of Serge Basset. . . . I knew him as a kindly giant of a man, with a fine gift of laughter and a most gentle courtesy, and I knew his distinction as a dramatist. . . . The church is still a target for the enemy's fire, but near by was a little Salle de Theatre, turned into a chapel. . . . They pinned upon the tricolor that covered him, his Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre."—(Official Photo.)

HAPPY NEW ZEALANDERS

NEW ZEALANDERS convalescing find it very comfortable to take a classic glide down the Thames in a gondola tug lent by the Port of London authorities. The flag is apparently the red ensign of New Zealand, quite appropriate on water.



HERE'S another new man, a new type—the new First Lord of the Admiralty succeeding Sir Edward Carson. Sir Eric Geddes looks like a man who would last his job longer than the average. When the war began he was obscure; though he was forging up in railroad circles. He is a Scotchman, born in India, spent a year in the Homestead mills at Pittsburg, Pa., and three years in the Baltimore and Ohio; went to India in 1897 and built railways in the jungles. When Lloyd George became Minister of Munitions, Sir Eric was his director-general. He was sent to France to loosen up traffic congestion behind the British lines and he became Director-General of Military Railroads. If he does as well on sea as he has on land—but there we leave him. Since the war began there have been more changes at the British Admiralty head than in any other. We began with Winston Churchill as First Lord and Louis of Battenberg as First Sea Lord. Since that we have had Lord Fisher, Sir H. B. Jackson, Mr. Balfour and Sir Edward Carson. Now it is Sir Eric Geddes at the Admiralty with Sir John Jellicoe as First Sea Lord.

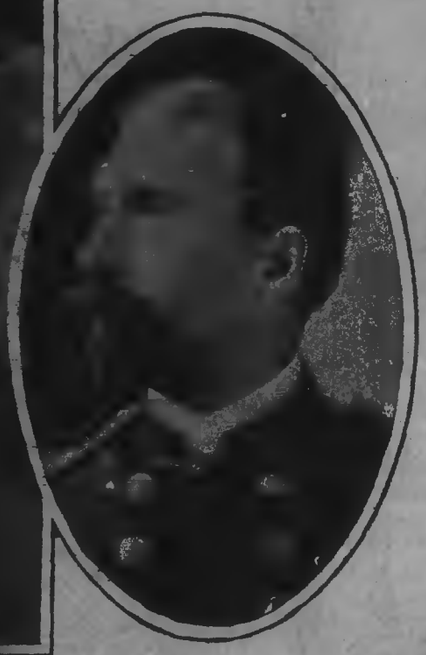
"NOW, then, little folks," says the Secretary of the Whitechapel Art Gallery—no less—after he has shown the tots all the regular war pictures of the Exhibition, "do any of you know who is this great saHor-man. Eh? Who was the man that walloped the Germans at Doggerbanks and again at Jutland a year ago last May? Ah! That's it. Admiral Sir Da—vid Bea—tty.



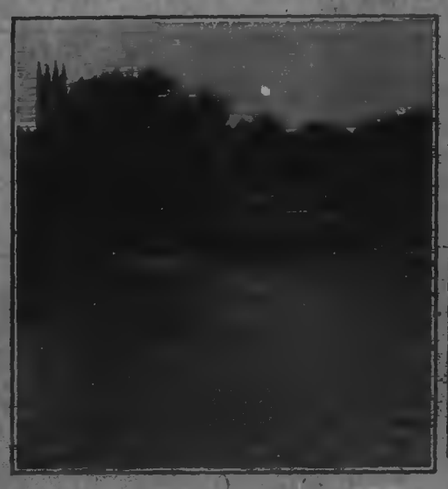
REAR ADMIRAL CAPPS, chief constructor U. S. Navy, succeeds General Goethals, as G. M. of the Emergency Fleet.

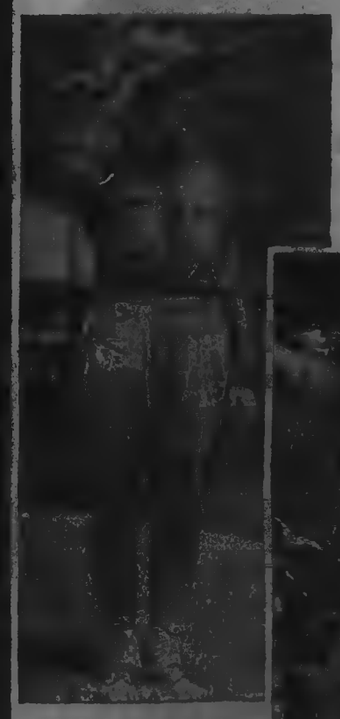
A tank on the British front: One of the monsters which "turn over on their backs and catch the Huns in their caterpillar feet!"—Marvellous tales have been told of the tanks, but hitherto nothing quite so wonderful as a humorous description written recently by a private of the Bedfordshires in a letter to his fiancee. The first paragraph indicates an acquaintance with printing and publishing. "They can do up prisoners," he writes, "in bundles like straw-binders, and, in addition, have an adaptation of a printing machine, which enables them to catch the Huns, fold, count, and deliver them in quires, every thirteenth man being thrown out a little farther than the others.

In the News of the Day - A Real People's Playground

CHARLES DANA GIBSON, photographed above in the act of getting ready to draw an American warposter, has done a lot of interesting faces since he came out with the Gibson girl. He has never made any study more humanly interesting than the little comedy over to the left. Father, with a shrapnel wound in his head, does his best to look like a real nice "comfy" daddy to the little one, who as plainly as words could make it seems to say, "Please go 'way, I want my daddy." The father seems to appreciate the humour of the situation. He will get that youngster to smile yet, even if she is too young to be caught with candy.

Stratford, Ont., can boast of a beautiful man-made park, the equal of which can hardly be found anywhere. It combines scenic beauty and facilities for practically all popular outdoor sports. The three photos shown here will convey some idea of its attractiveness. It is a combination of land and water than can be used by the citizens for recreation at all times. The lake is over a mile long and averages 150 yards in width. A Normal School, football and baseball grounds, tennis courts, a bathing beach, a regular boat and launch service, skating rink, etc., are some of the features that go to make it an ideal People's Playground.





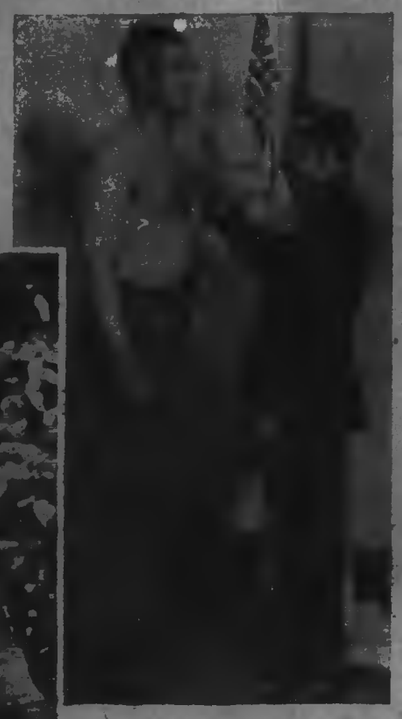
HANDSOME young American soldier this. He was just ready to embark for Europe with the first American contingent when some officer, eavesdropping, overheard him talking. Pte. —— was at once placed under arrest.

"You are charged with—being a woman" was the crushing indictment.

"I plead guilty," was the reply.

Identity was disclosed. Pte. —— was Mrs. Hazel Carter, from Arizona, who wanted to stay with her "hubby."

DO you remember the tragedy of Mrs. Steinhell, the Paris woman who was accused of helping to kill her husband? She came within an ace of conviction. But testimony proved that she was tied and gagged in the house by a posse of masked men who did the murder. When the trial was being on Lord Abinger, an Englishman, was present. He married her before the court pronounced her innocence. A while ago he married her.



JOE COX, the heavyweight prize-fighter, was determined to go into the ring against Germany. He tried nearly every arm of the service, but was turned down every time as physically unfit, because he was too big in every dimension. At last he decided to go up in the air. But he didn't go. The aviation experts said he was inches too tall and several pounds too heavy. So what does Joe Cox do but say to himself, "By gum, I'll get into it yet." So he enlisted as a first-class fireman in the Naval Coast Defence Reserve. Here he is being examined by the Naval doctor.

PRESIDENT WILL REPLY

Pope's Peace Offer May Afford An Actual Working Basis For Hastening the End of the War

CONSTRUCTIVE POLICY

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent) — President Wilson's reply to the Pope's offer may afford an actual working basis for hastening the end of the war. Germany and Austria have already moved in this direction, despatches from Rome say to-day. The belief grows that the President, in courtesly declining the Holy See's suggestion now, will offer a constructive policy in which the liberals of the world may find real encouragement. The opinion is strong here that the decision of the scope of the allied answer has been left to the President. No official announcement, however, has been made as to the answer, but Wilson's advisers say he will make the United States position and the position of her allies clear before the world. The President will be deliberate about his course, but his reply will be thorough and conclusive.

CLOSING WEEKLY MARKET LETTER

The question of peace has been the chief subject of discussion this week in the world's markets, but it came in a way that threw incertainly into the situation. Real peace with guarantee of safety for democracy with restoration and restitution, even without indemnity such as in the past was was exacted by the victor would be distinctly favourable to securities. Any considerable prolongation of the war is unfavourable because of the great losses inflicted and the sinking deeper and deeper into National debts. Public utterances by Allied statesmen indicate that peace along lines suggested by the Pope would carry no guarantee that militarism would be crushed. Hence it would play into Germany's hands. Thus we have uncertainty, and uncertainty is detrimenfal to stocks, probably in a week we shall have a clearing up of the peace talk. The chances of a socialistic stampede for peace, as some put it, are not likely, although in Russia the German propaganda will be more active than ever. But as the war is now conducted, little help is expected from Russia.

Stop Trading.

A cause for some hesitation is found in the increasing Government control of products with food administrator Hoover now in the saddle. The suggestion to stop trading in sugar futures, pending action to control coal, the various plans with regard to wheat and even bread with lack of information as yet about price fixing tend to check trading in stocks until matters are cleared up. President Wilson has caused some surprises in the past and he may announce more in the future. Hence many are not disposed to take very seriously the talk about "Liberal profits" on Steel and Coppers, but the fact stands out clearly that in the war must be financed, and it cannot be financed successfully until sentiment is kept cheerful. Britain and France adopted the liberal policy towards business and we have no doubt but that our Government will do the same.

Crop Outlook.

Our Industrial and crop outlook is good, and when the time is auspicious this will be made the basis for another forward movement in stocks. Prices are relatively low. We hear much talk about the mbarket being "sold out." about speculative accounts carried in loans being very small, and about the bulk of stocks being in strong hands. The underlying position is strong and we think before long the market will resume its advance.

The foreign outlook is improving. The Uboat warfare is losing ground, according to Premier Lloyd George's latest statement, and the British food position is better. The Allies are making progress on the Western front which prevents the withdrawal of any large force for use against Russia. The Russian situation is a difficult problem which can only be judged by day to day developments. We favour purchases of the best stocks on the setbacks, but for the present think it will be well to take profits on firm spots.

STEAMER LOSS ONE MILLION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—The Japanese freight steamer Koto Hira Maru went ashore on an island of the Aleutian group near Dutch Harbor, Alaska, July 27, and vessel and cargo, valued at $1,000,000, will be a total loss according to a message received by the Chamber of Commerce. No details regarding the fate of the crew were received.

AEROPLANES DESTROYED

One Hundred and Fourteen German Planes Were Accounted For During the Week

A CHECK UP

(By William Philip Simms, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Special to The Exmainer:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, August 18.—A total of one hundred and fourteen German airplanes have been brought down during the past week in the fierce fight which has been in progress in connection with Allied offensive. Many of these exploits are attributed to the Canadian members of the Royal Flying Corps, who are credited with being absolutely fearless in their work. Sixty-two of these enemy machine were destroyed outright, and fifty-two were driven down out of control. The aerial operations were carried out despite unfavourable weather and were marked by extreme determination. A check up to-day shows forty British machines missing following the week's fighting. The Prussian fliers took great chances in their efforts to communicate with artillery ranges back of their lines. It was learned they had orders to get the ranges or die in the attempt.

Market Pirates Join Cold Storage Men In Hold Up

Christmas market prices were asked this morning for farm produce. Asked the reason of the abnormal prices, one woman explained that the buying power of one dollar has been lessened in proportion with the rise of market prices. What could be purchased ten years ago for one dollar costs two to-day. While the farmer applies this probable influence to the price of his produce, he stubbornly refuses to consider the hired man's wages in the same light.

Contrary to the usual order of things the market opened decidedly lower than it closed probably because of the fact that the farmers found the public willing to be held up.

Eggs varied from 43c to 48c per dosen.

Butter sold for from 44c to 48c lb.

Chickens, 80c to $1.60 pair.

Ducks, 80c to $1.15 each.

Potatoes sold at 50c per peck, and $2.60 to $3 a bag.

The outside market was very large and should be the end of the small fruit season, and a beginning of the plum and tomato crop.

It may not be assuming too much to ascribe the unseasonable prices of butter and eggs, for instance,, to the absorption of the normal supply by cold storage plants. In the face of recent official reports of cold storage receipts of produce and the prospect of their retention for speculation now and during the lean winter months, consumer stands helpless. It is a case of stand and deliver, and his official guardians with the loud-sounding titles, appear as straw men or don't appear at all, and the term "speculator" is purely ironical in this connection. From past experience and the buccaneering character of the "speculators" butter and eggs will soon be exalted to a station of equality with pork in the field of new record prices. The wolf may not howl when the snow flies next winter but he may be expected in a woolly garb, demanding a toll for the necessities of life that will probably reach the interior of the homes more effectively than his ululations through the keyhole. But wait till the Food Controller gets busy.

PULPWOOD IN WAR TIME

One of the Canadian industries which has gone on increasing rapidly during war time is the production of pulpwood and the manufacture of pulp. The total quantity of wood manufactured into pulpwood in Canada in 1916, was over a million and three quarters cords as compared with one million four hundred thousand cords in 1915. The value of the pulpwood made into pulp in Canada and exported for making pulp abroad was nearly twenty million dollars. Very much more wood is now manufactured into pulp in Canada than is exported in the log form to be manufactured in other countries. A few ears ago, the reverse was the case. All the essential facts about the pulpwood and pulp industry in Canada in 1916 are shown in a bulletin issued by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior. Copies of the same may be had free upon application for the "Pulpwood Bulletin for 1916," to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

New Positions Have Been Consolidated By British Troops

The Full Force of the British and French Drive in Flanders May Be Determined Within the Next Twenty-four Hours ---All German Counter Attacks Have Been Repulsed ---Engagement Between British and German Scouting Ships.

ENEMY DESTROYER HIT

LONDON, August 18.—For the third day German troops continued throwing masses of men against the new British positions near Lens today. All counter attacks were again completely repulsed after sharp fighting, Field Marshal Haig reported. A few prisoners were taken, the British Commander reported. "To the northwest of Lens, early this morning, the enemy again counter attacked our new positions," Haig's statement says. "They were completely repulsed after sharp fighting. A few prisoners were taken here and northwest of Ypres. There was considerable artillerying during the night."

FULL FORCE OF DRIVE.

The full force of the British and French drive in Flanders may be determined within the next twenty-four hours. Aside from the German counter attacks which have been repulsed there has been a let-up in fighting on this front. Positions beyond Langemarke have been consolidated by the British while the French have made good their new ground along the Steenbeck. A continuation of the general assault will mark the offensive in an effort second in power only to that of the Somme.

SCOUTING SHIPS CLASH.

LONDON, August 18.—An engagement between British and German scouting ships in which one German destroyer and several mine layers were damaged was reported by the Admiralty to-day. The biggest type of British vessels engaged in scout work took part in the fight when they came upon the enemy. The British opened fire on a German destroyer damaging her, but she escaped as did the mine sweepers, the destroyer was convoying. Several of the latter were damaged. The Germans for some time past have been sending mine sweepers into the North Sea from Heligoland under escort of destroyers, They have been sighted several times by British patrol war vessels, but this is the first clash reported. This diligence of the Germans in their mine-sweeping work has given rise to speculation in England as to whether enemy fleets intend to come out again.

MILITARY CAMPS BOMBARDED.

LONDON, August 18.—Many tons of bombs were dropped on German military establishments in Belgium during another raid by British naval aeroplanes, the Admiralty announced to-day. Thourout railway station was raided Thursday night the statement says. Fires were observed in ammunition camps and the railway station was hit and damaged. The British machines returned safely.

Proposed New Schedule For Sewers Passed Last Night

If the Council Decides to Change Frontage Rate of Apportioning the Cost of the Work—Other Business Before Board of Works

A bare quorum of the Board of Works last night was completed with the arrival of Ald. McIntyre. The other members present were Ald. Weir presiding, Aldermen Dobbin, Smith, Saunders and Worth.

A report from the City Engineer recommended a cement walk for the south side of Southerland street instead of the north as asked, and a crossing to the north side near the end. Mr. Perdue, who resides on the north side, is satisfied with this proposal. On the south side there are two houses.

Ald. Smith thought that a four foot walk would be sufficient, but the committee favoured the usual width of five feet.

Ald. Dobbin moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that the walk be laid on the south side, also a crossing.

The Engineer's report vetoed a proposed walk on the south side of Smith from Reid to Downie street, and the Board was satisfied to shelve this request until after the war or longer.

At Ald. Saunder's request the cement walk on the north side of Chamberlen will extend from Park to Lafayette avenue.

J. S. Revoy, Toronto, offered to paint the incinerator smoke stack for $58. It was properly a matter for the Property committee, and therefore turned over to them with a comment that the price was higher than the stack.

Confined to Home by Dust.

Mrs. Jos. McMillan, a tenant of the city's at 1,001 Water street, wrote that she was ill and the dust carried by a stream of automobiles prevented her from resting on the verandah and forced her to keep the windows shut. As a result she was virtually shut up in her own home.

The Board received the letter quite sympathetically, but Mr. Parsons pointed out that three blocks of roadway would have to be oiled to reach the McMillan house and the road would have to be repaired. Because of the expenses involved no action was taken.

Oiling Park treet.

Ald. Saunders made a modest plea for relief from the dust nuisance on Park street, north of Romaine. He asked for water but he got oil and the sprinkler will give the De Laval road frontage another squirt of the Standard product.

New Sewer Schedule.

The Board of Health's recommendation to construct sewers on Romaine street from Park to the Monaghan road, also on De Laval street and on Gilchrist street, from McDonnel to London street. The new schedule of frontage tax for this work will apply if it is changed.

A petition for a sewer on Dufferin street, between Concession and Ross streets was not properly signed. To expedite the procedure the Board of Health will be asked to recommend it.

To Remove Trees.

Permission was granted Mr. M. Comstock to remove three birch trees in front of his residence on Sherbrooke street. He is substituting four maples. Approved was also given to the removal of a maple tree in front of Mr. Jas. Lewis house on Stewart street, between Hunter and Stewart streets. Another tree will be planted nearby.

PRIVATE STEADMAN WRITES A LETTER

H. Dearle, Esq., Sec. Overseas Club, Peterborough, Ontario, Canada.

Dear Sir,—I just thought while I was sitting down here, writing, that I would send you a few lines in a letter, instead of the card that was with the cigarettes that we received to-day, and I must say I hardly know how to thank you for them. I hope you will get this short note, and if you like, you may answer it. I would be very glad to hear from you. I remain,

Yours sincerely,

CITY'S COAL ON THE ROAD

Sixteen Cars in the First Order Have Been Shipped and Are Expected Here Shortly

TO RETAIL AT $10

Sixteen cars of coal are on the way to Peterborough, representing the first consignment for the municipal fuel yard. In making this announcement at a meeting of the Fire Water and Light committee last night, Ald. Dobbin stated that they were ordered and will be received here on selling basis to the consumer at not more than $10 a ton. The shipment comprises egg, nut and stove sizes. No definite information of the date of the arrival of the cars in Peterborough is available. They have been forwarded from the independent coal dealers and on their arrival in Toronto Ald. Dobbin will receive the invoices and immediately arrange for the receipt of orders from citizens and for local delivery from the cars. This coal is known as the Scranton Red Ash. It costs $6 at the mines, the freight to Suspension Bridge is $1.14, and from the bridge to Peterborough $1.30; local delivery is estimated at 80 cents a ton, and bagging and weighing 30 cents, making a total of $9.45 a ton. It will be sold to citizens at cost price, and should this fall under $10 a ton the difference will be returned to purchasers. However this possibility should not arouse much hope of its becoming a fact. The Council disavows all intention of competing with retail fuel dealers, but it is hoped that sufficient coal may be sold through Ald. Dobbin's arrangements to preclude a shortage of coal here next winter. Such is the object and it will be carried out as far as possible.

"We are not trying to break the market. The people should understand that," asserted Ald. Dobbin.

Ald. Saunders—A lot of people are depending upon the city for coal this winter.

Ald. Smith—They simply want to be sure of a supply.

Ald. McIntyre said he had been told that independent coal was being sold here at $9.50.

Ald. Weir declared it impossible. "I would close up and quit at that price."

Will Order More.

Ald. Weir, as a coal merchant, has tried to be neutral in the city's coal affairs, but in reality he has helped the movement instead of being a mere bystander. His advice has been freely given and has been of assistance to the committee.

The question of placing further orders will stand over for a few days, probably until the first coal arrives.

Ald. Dobbin said he would keep the committee informed of every movement. The responsibility rested with every member and not upon himself alone.

Shotgun Threat For Motorists

Nocturnal Visitors Will Not Be Tolerated in the County

No longer will certain Toronto "joy riders" be able to draw their automobiles alongside the roads of York county in the late hours of the night or the early hours of the morning. They have incurred the ire of the farmer. The peaceful farmers of Agincourt in particular are insistent that the tone of rural Ontario shall not suffer from the conduct of these nocturnal visitors. Some weeks ago they warned the High Constable that the rusty shotguns would be brought into action once again. Since that time other complaints have been sent to the High Constable's office, it is stated, until a certain portion of the motor traffic from the city is now mildly described as a "nuisance."

The Lapello murder served to draw attention to the position of the county and the necessity for a larger county police force, on a strictly salary basis. The High Constable has placed at the disposal of the county force a number of automobiles.

The policing of the suburbs of Toronto to the county officials resolves itself into a question of dollars and cents. Yesterday, while discussing the question, a County Magistrate contended that the county should not be compelled to bear the burden of are administration of Justice, when the offenders did not reside in York county, but came from the city.

Sunday School is held at Braundport at 11 a.m. and campers on the river below the city are invited to attend. There are sessions for both children and adults. Mr. R. C. Braund states that many campers have been present on former Sundays and all others will be cordially welcomed.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION WRECKS IMMENSE MUNITIONS PLANT

At Least Twenty Lives Believed to Have Been Lost in the Destruction of the Curtis Harvey Company's Plant in Quebec.

LARGE NUMBER MISSING

Special to the Examiner.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18. — The immense munition plant of he Curtis-Harvey Company, with employees from the villages adjoining, at Dragon, Quebec, forty-five miles from here, is in flames, and practically destroyed, and, it is feared here that there has been a very heavy loss of life among the five thousand workers of the Curtis Works and in houses nearby. Hospital trains have been rushed from here with full equipment of nurses and surgeons. The Curtis plant covers five square miles. The fires followed a series of terrific explosions. In addition to the Curtis Works there are extensive cheese factoris, foundrys and sash mills at Dragon. All telegraphic and telephonic communication is cut off. A section of the C.P.R. main line has been destroyed and all trains are cancelled.

Later Reports.

Later reports of the explosion at Dragon received from passengers who arrived from that vicinity on trains place the number of lives lost at twenty, with a large number missing. It was stated that when the explosion occurred most of the employees fled for cover and as the explosions continued making the vicinity one of great danger the majority have not returned, so that no accurate estimate of the killed and injured is possible at present. No one knows how many lives have been lost. As soon as the C.P.R. Company heard of it Sir George Burr and several officials went to the scene in a special train. Another train bearing doctors and nurses left shortly after the noon hour.

Monetary Loss.

The monetary loss will be particularly heavy; estimates running at from five to ten million dollars. The Curtis plant covers about five acres and there were upwards of one hundred and fifty buildings. There was a huge stock of costly materials used in the manufacture of the explosives, as well as a large quantity of stuff all ready for shipment. In addition to the damage to the homes of the workmen, as well as to the village, itself, will add appreciably to the total. At noon hour the C. P. R. received word that their main line to Ottawa had been opened again to traffic. This led to the belief that it had been but litle damaged in the explosions and that the running of trains past Dragon had been stopped because of the danger of further explosions. Credit is due to the crew of an engine for getting several cars, loaded with explosives, out of the way. Despite the grave danger to themselves they ran their engine in, coupled, and hauled the cars to safety.

SIX CANADIANS WERE KILLED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, August 18. — Six Canadians were killed and twenty three injured in the accidental explosion of a mine during a mimic war at the camp at Hampshire on Thursday, according to the Daily Mail.

French Troops Continue To Make Progress

Germans Driven Out of All the Positions They Took From the French on August 16th and 17th

MUCH DAMAGE DONE

Special to the Examiner.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—French troops continued to advance in Flanders today, capturing strong positions east of Steenbeck. Progress was made north of Bixechoot, along the road to Langemaark. A brilliant counterattack on the right bank of the Meuse also threw the Germans out of all the positions they took from the French on August 16 and 17, in Caurieres Wood, the War Office announced. North of Aisne, German raids were repulsed, and in the Champagne, near Massiges, a German attack was broken up by artillery fire. In Alsace, lively artillery exchanges were reported, with a German attack near Steinbach repulsed.

An air raid, in which one hundred and eleven French seroplanes participated, dropping 35,100 pounds of projectiles on German military establishments, was reported by the War Office to-day. Much damage was done. Two French air machines were lost. The French aviators went within eleven miles of the Rhine on their raid, reaching Freiburg, which is in the Grand Duchy of Baden, seventy-five miles from Karlshrue, and eleven miles from the Rhine. It has a population of more than 60,000 inhabitants. Colmar and Frescati are in Upper Alsace.

MET TO CONSIDER CRIMES OF GERMANY

LONDON, Aug. 18.—"To consider the crimes committed by Germany and seamen of German U-boats," was the official description of the purpose of the gathering here yesterday of representatives of seamen's organizations of several allied and neutral countries. France, Italy, the United States, Canada, Australia, Holland, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries were represented by masters mates, engineers, sailors, cooks and stewards.

J. Havelock Wilson, head of the British Seamens Union, presided. In his speech Mr. Wilson said:

"It is not worth while calling on the Government to protect us, but the people of the world must do something for themselves. The war will not last forever. After the war the Germans again will have to come among the seamen of the civilized world. Then there will be a great many accounts to settle.

"As seafaring men, we should express in no uncertain language, our opinion of German brutality. Suppose the seamen of the world made up their minds that after giving Germany fair warning they will, independently of all Governments, shown the Germans that the seafaring men of all nations wil not permit themselves to be disgraced by working in a boat in which Germans sail? Not only will be punish German seamen, but German shipowners as well."

Mr. Wilson proposed that the seamen after the war set up an international commission to try commanders and crews who have murdered inoffensiv eseamen.

WHAT IS THE MODE?

Without disparaging the importance of conscription, it may be remarked that the academic and rhetorical plaudation of conscription as an abstraction, bears a large disproportion to conscription as a concrete entity. Conscription as an abstraction is nothing: its application is everything. Yet we do not find the laudatory press and orators expending much gray matter, or much enthusiasm, in giving the public information as to the main thing. We have conscription in theory. What is it to be in practice? It is safe to say that the government has not decided upon any definite concerted plan—has not decided on the machinery of application of a compulsory act, which the Minister of Militia has declared is to be immediately put into force. It is supposed to be used to bring 100,000 more soldiers into the ranks of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. We have, perhaps 150,000 to 200,000 men of the classes to be first selected from. What is the modus operandi of getting the men to be taken, and the men to be left? Conscription is the biggest thing in its way we ever had in Canada. If its very adoption—its principle—has split the country, what will be the national effect of its application? We should be told something about that. Is its application to be partisan, or non-partisan, fair or unfair? We have had mere partisanship the rule of war administration, so far; and now?

President Wilson has appointed Charles E. Hughes, his political opponent at the last presidential election, chairman of the New York District Board of Appeals for exemption under the selective draft. Will Premier Borden be guilty of a similar magnanimity?

INDEPENDENCE—FOR "THE OTHER FELLOW."

Many Conservative journals have been almost abject in their praise of those Liberals who took an "independent stand" in Parliament on conscription. It is impossible in this case to return the compliment. The Canadian Northern Railway outrage was "railroaded" through parliament by the solid party vote of the Conservative members. Not one was found to take an "independent stand" and oppose a costly deal, in the interests of a few financiers. It is true that Mr. R. B. Bennett of Calgary criticised the measure as to details, but he stood by the main thing. He voted with the government "crowd"—on the "principle" of the bill, as if there were any principle, as principle is generally understood in a railway, if not highway, robbery of the public chest. In this time of war stress, when every dollar of the public money is demanded for national purposes, in helping win the war; when our discharge of war duty constrains us to amass financial obligations, that will, as one of the prices and sacrifices of the country in winning the war, be a burden for generations to come; when the waste of a dollar in private or public life, is a crime—with all this in existence, the government selects this time to take over the Canadian Northern Railway on terms that will mean the pledging of at least thirty million dollars of the peoples' money, in face of the fact that the statute passed by the government in 1914, permitted the foreclosure of the mortgage and the acquirement of the railway without the expenditure of a dollar of public money. Yet we find no Conservative members of parliament emulating those "noble" Liberals who rose above party and from principle voted side by side with their Conservative fellow members. "Independence" in politics is a fine thing to praise but a hard thing to live up to.

England has nobly met the call to greater production with 360,000 more acres of potatoes than ever before — averaging, at 150 bushels to the acre, 57 million bushels of potatoes—more than a bushel per head of the entire population of the United Kingdom.

THE RETURNED SOLDIER.

If a man had $424,456 and found on taking count of it that his "pile" was $76,068 short, he would naturally like to know where the money went. Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia, presented figures to the House the other day showing that the total enlistments of Canadian soldiers had been 424,456; and that there were at presented in an official return? The valescent soldiers:

Troops in France	142,779
Troops in England	124,399
Troops in Canada	22,419
Killed, died, captured, missing	31,955
Discharged abroad or returned for discharge at home	26,000
	347,552

The above figures show the number of 76,068 short of the total enlistments to be accounted for. The official return which places these missing soldiers under the general heading of "discharged, etc., in Canada," is not quite satisfactory. Can it be that we have as many as 76,028 returned soldiers in Canada, and have no details presented in an official return? The government, it seems, keeps close tab upon the records of the government's line, keeps close record of their disposition and condition. Is it possible that the proverbial ingratitude of nations and governments towards the returned soldier, who has done his bit, and retires, wounded or broken in health, is held in so light regard that they have not an individual place upon the records the government? People seeing in the official statement presented to parliament, figures that account for part of our enlisted soldiers—figure 76,000 short of the total enlistments—do not feel that the curt dismissal by the phrase, "discharged, etc., in Canada," satisfies the right of the people to know where, and in what condition these "discharged, etc.," soldiers are. In one sense these missing 76,000 men should be a matter of graver concern to the country and the government than the soldiers abroad, in respect of whom exact account is kept and exact returns presented. We are kept somewhat in the dark as to the condition and whereabouts of the Canadian soldier, who deserves our best consideration—the returned soldier.

Nobody will talk peace to a rattlesnake till its fangs are drawn—till it becomes harmless.

HOW LONG?

How long shall we have to worry along under the heavy load of high prices? Some time ago we were told by Commissioner O'Connor, the prober into high prices—whose probe-ity we have reason to question—told us that the cold storage concerns of Canada were beneficial institutions, taking care of the food of the country—so carefully that the people could not waste it by getting it at fair prices.

He has just issued another report, giving some significant, if not startling figures, relating to the charitable work of the cold storage philanthropists. Mr. O'Connor's statement informs us that in only 96 per cent. of the cold storage warehouses of Canada, there are hoarded the following enormous amounts of food:

Eggs, 13,001,751 dozen.
Butter, 12,250,124 pounds.
Cheese, 19,019,693 pounds.
Pork, 13,367,331 pounds.
Bacon, 6,062,366 pounds.
Ham, 2,301,799 pounds.
Smoked meats, 218,963 pounds.
Beef, 6,015,772 pounds.
Mutton and lamb, 604,101 pounds.
Pickled beef, 1,896,913 pounds.
Pickled pork, 19,549,533 pounds.
Fowl, all kinds, 3,468,854 pounds.
Fish all kinds, 13,993,170 pounds.

It is impossible to make the ordinary citizen believe that there is not some more or less direct relation between the high prices for food he or she is compelled to pay, and the millions of dollars worth of food withheld from the markets in Canadian cold storage plants.

It is claimed that these mountainous hoards of food—in daily demand in Canada—are accumulated to meet the demands of the export trade. Of course there is a large export trade, whose demands must be met; but one is inclined to doubt the activity of an export demand that can afford to wait for the accumulation of, say, 156 million eggs, or 12 million pounds of butter, or 90-odd million pounds of other food articles.

It is not too much to claim that the storage of these food articles has an effect in raising prices, and keeping them raised. In the matter of eggs, it is easy to see how the prices of eggs may next winter reach 50c, 60c, or $1.00 per dozen—with the hens laying low and the cold storage operators releasing just enough at a time to keep up, or accentuate, the prices.

Cold storage is a good thing, when it is used for legitimate purposes, but it seems that it can be made not so good a thing when it is used, as it seems sometimes to be used, to influence prices of the necessaries of life by withholding them from access by the people in an open market.

It is not difficult to meet Food Controller Hanna's call for meatless days with some 45 million pounds of meat in cold storage—out of public reach. If he would call upon and conscript the cold storage people to a few near meatless days, there would be less need to tie down the people to meatless days.

There seems to be something wrong when, with the food cost of living at the top notch; with the government demand for he closest economy and the highest production; with popular indignation at white heat over the extortion of food manipulators; the quantity of food articles in cold storage in Canada is about forty per cent. greater than at the same date a year ago.

Hon. Mr. Hanna is the official food controller, but the cold storage magnate is the real food controller.

WELDING THE COMMONWEALTH.

The following extracts are from the editorial columns of the Toronto Telegram:

Austro-German military reservists are good enough Britishers to get on the list of delegates to the Laurier convention at Winnipeg.

Organied ecclesiasicism in Canada is prepared to fight conscription at the polls. Quebec's State Church and the branches of that Church in the other provinces will throw all their power into the fight against Sir Robert Borden and in support of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

We are glad to see the Telegram working overtime to weld this British Empire into one harmonious whole. It's great work.—Hamilton Times.

WATCH THE BIG INTERESTS

Conscription will be the main issue at the coming election, but at the same time it will do no harm to keep an eye on the big interests. They've had a whale of a time since they elected the government in 1911.—Guelph Mercury.

THE CAT A BIRD KILLER.

We find the following in the Canadian Journal of Forestry:

In every land, in every tongue, the cat has been noted as a slayer of birds. Maister Salmon, who published "The Compleat English Physician" in 1693, describes the cat as the mortal enemy of the rat, mouse "and every sort of bird which it seizes as its prey." The French and Germans particularly have deplored the destruction of birds by cats. M. Xavier Raspail in an article on the protection of useful birds written in 1848 says that though cats are outside the law and therefore may be killed with impunity their numbers are renewed from the villages incessantly to such an extent that not a night passes without traces of these "abominable marauders." Of 67 birds' nests observed from April to August only 26 prospered; at least 15 certainly were destroyed by cats and others may have been. Baron Hans von Berlepsch, the first German authority on the protection of birds after forty years' experience, says that where birds are to be protected the domestic cat must not be allowed at large. The above are but a few citations many of which might be made to show that the cat always has been recognized as a menace to bird life. Many present day cat lovers, however, claim that their cats kill no birds, or very few, "not more than one of two a year," and that the destructiveness of the cat to-day has been exaggerated to the last degree. The claim of cat lovers that cats kill comparatively few birds is a false claim. Any citizen who loves birds for their joyous, chirruppy presence for their cheerful companionship, who well-treats, feeds, waters and fosters birds for their priceless work, in keeping down insect pests in our gardens—every citizen who notes these things also notes with pain that the prowling, sneaking cat lurks in the shelter of shrubbery, intent of killing birds, and actually catches and kills scores of birds, especially young birds new to the dangers of the new world in which they have just come and are giving the first clumsy trials to their wings. Who has not seen, and many times repeated, the whole brood of a robin or other birds nesting near the house entirely wiped out by the predatory cat? And some times even the wary mother birds is caught, so that it results, thanks to the cat and curses on the cat, that we have fewer birds about us at the close of the season than when the parent birds came to us in the spring, to raise—and actually hatching—ten times the original number, as a matter of fact, almost exterminated by cats.

There is no doubt that the domestic cat is the archenemy and greatest destroyer of bird life; and one cannot understand the moral temperament, that to indulge a selfish taste for a pet, keeps, fosters and harbours an animal whose kind destroys bird life by the million and defeats the patriotic call to increased production by removing the greatest ally of the farmer, gardener and fruit grower, the greatest destroyer of insect life injurious to or destructive of vegetation and fruition, necessary to man's sustenance. The importance of birds in this country is so great that it is recognized as a significant fact that if the entire bird life of a country were removed the inhabitants would starve.

Variety the Spice of Summer Fashions

Service Suits in Military Style Make Their Entry

Organdie Trims Silk Frocks

NEW YORK, August 18.—"Variety is the spice of life," said some one at some time so long ago that the saying has become a proverb. It is true, whether it be in scene, environment, in fashions, or in food. Variety is one thing which we possess in fashions this season. variety in silhouettes, in materials, in trimmings. Smart clothes range in design from the high waisted styles of the First Empire, through fluffy frills of the Mid-Victorian era and draperies almost pannier-like, "peg-tops," and last but not least, straight hanging models which are compared to the Egyptian garments of a very ancient dynasty. They range from the smartest of low-necked evening frocks of silk and satin to the simplest of ginghams, and from these to the trimmest of service suits.

Under the name of service suits come a number of military models of which the sketch illustrated is a good example. Instead of being made of khaki this suit is made of heather jersey, which is a colour mixture in which brown is flecked with deep pink, green and lavender. An inverted pleat in the back of the coat adds to its style.

Heather Jersey Develops This Military Model

Another military model which I saw very recently departed widely from the military in its development, for it was made entirely of balsam-green tussur, a reminder of green leaves and cool breezes in a Robin Hood forest.

Although every one's mind is running more or less toward serving the country and very naturally toward costumes which would be practical for any task that one might choose, there are also charming frocks for other occasions.

Taffeta and Foulard Frocks.

Taffeta and foulard frocks are a requirement of every woman's wardrobe whether she has a large or a small one, for a dress of either of these materials is always ready to wear; it does not go to the laundry and is not feazed by fogs and daws. Although taffeta and foulard can not in themselves be said to be new this season, their trimmings of organdie make them so. Frills, bands and facings of organdie give an airiness to these frocks which is summery and cool. Satin is also being trimmed with organdie. In fact this might be called an organdie season, for it does its "bit" on silks and satins as well as on the humble gingham.

In the second skitch is shown a frock of soft plaid taffeta with collar, lapel facing and pockets on waist and on skirt of white organdie. The collar is trimmed with rows of hand-run stitching of heavy silk in the colours of the plaid.

Low-Heeled Sports Shoes.

With sports clothes, service suits and simplicity frocks comes suitable footwear. Low-heeled half shoes with sensible lasts are worn for sports. Some of these shoes have spring heels, others have heels three-quarters of an inch high, and often the soles and heeds are of rubber. This does not mean that the foot comes in contact with the rubber, however, for there is a thickness of leather between the ourside sole and the foot. White is worn a great deal for summer. Gray is very fashionable, and, of course, brown and black are standard.

For wearing with elaborate afternoon frocks are low shoes with high heels, either French or Cuban-Louis. Hobbins was groomsman.

AROUND THE WORLD

To have gained first place as the largest selling gum in the world means much. It means that WRIGLEY'S is liked above all others.

That its quality, lasting flavour and its package are the kind most appreciated.

Back of all this—the enormous sales of WRIGLEY'S show that people have learned its benefits: refreshment—aid to appetite and digestion—soothing, antiseptic influence to mouth and throat and the advantages of sweet, clean breath.

The soldiers and sailors are calling for it daily.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Applying Treatment at Home—I get many letters from people that suffer with backache and stiffness, soreness of the muscles and a complaint that they seem to be getting old before the evidences of old age should be manifested. A little inquiry brings out the fact that these people are themselves to blame for the pains. They are loyal and patriotic, seeking to do their share in the tremendous work of feeding the world, while the young, strong men and women are fighting for our nation's honor and democracy.

The man or woman, boy or girl, that fights weeds potato bugs and cut worms are deserving of "honourable mention," and when this work is done by those not accustomed to strenuous physical exertion the usual result is that their enthusiasm leads to extraordinary effort with exceedingly tired muscles as an after effect.

You, I take it for example, are doing more physical labor this summer than ever before. At nigh, you are tired; the backbone seems to have too many joints and they all ache. Your muscles are sore and stiff; you want to do even more work to-morrow or next week, but how can it be done? I am going to answer the question for you and the simple, practical home treatment can be applied by you or anyone.

There is a certain principle to be observed and it applies to all animals, horses, mules and men, yes, women, and boys and girls. It is this:

When tired, keep warm.

When very tired, keep very warm.

If you have ever attended a horse race, you probably observed that as as soon as the horses come to the end of the race, the owner or caretakers at once covered their dripping, wet bodies, with warm, dry blankets, even though the day was exceedingly hot and but little air stirring. Their heads, it is true, were quickly sponged with cold water and they were allowed just a little to drink, but they were kept warm, never allowed to cool off quickly. As a rule the man that cares for and works with beasts of burden uses more good judgment in their care than in the case of himself. I have many times seen him come from plowing and other hard labor wheer the coat of both man and beast were saturated with perspiration, and he would stop in the cool shade, then immediately cover the horses so that they would not chill and "stiffen up," while he would throw off his hat, open his own collar, drink a lot of ice water and sit where the breeze was the strongest. I have even seen him under such circumstances take off his coat and lie on his back upon the damp ground. I have seen him put the team in the barn, cover them, let them stand until cool before watering and feeding, cover them to prevent chill ,then later remove the blankets and rub them dry, while of himself he took no such care, but instead washed his head and hands in cold water, and sat in the cool evening breeze, and then wondered why he was so stiff and sore the next morning while the horses were fresh and active.

If he had taken off his wet clothes, sponged himself with hot water, and put on dry clothing, and just a little heavier than those he took off, a coat or some kind of top garment, or had dried his clothes quickly by a fire, while covered over them with a dry coat, blanket or even a linen duster, he would have prevented much suffering.

If you have the facilities and want to feel just as good to-morrow as you did before you got stiff and sore or the backache, take off all the clothes wet with perspiration and take a hot bath. Put on dry clothes and a wrap or coat, then enjoy the cool evening breeze and rest with the assurance that you will feel ready for another round to-morrow.

A thorough hot fomentation applied in the manner described in the Home Health Club book, Vol. II., will very quickly relieve backache, even of the kind called lumbago. Try it.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from the readers of this publication, if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents in postage.

Dear Doctor: I would like o ask you about a friend of mine. Her daughter, 17 years old, has always been healthy, but only a little more than a year ago they noticed that her left hand was much thinner than the right one, and she could not lift or carry in that hand like the other. They took her to a local doctor and he said it was the rarest case he had seen. He advised her parents to take her to a specialist and have an X-ray picture taken in order to locate the trouble. They had two X-ray pictures taken, but found nothing. The local doctor then got them an electric battery to use and they massaged her hand every day for about 9 months but it does not seem to help any. The hand just seems to be wasting away and the arm is also somewhat smaller than the other. The girl is well developed and big for her age. Her mother asked me to write you. I told her about you and how many cases you had helped and cured.

Mrs. A. R.

Answer: From the information you furnish me of the condition of the girl I am inclined to think that she had had either a light stroke of paralysis or what is known as infantile paralysis. I have no doubt as to that. The symptoms indicate that if the right kind of treatment had been given a once she would probably now have been all right or nearly so. Now it may take a long time before the trouble can be overcome. Frequently the local doctors do not seem to understand more unusual cases. They do not look for the cause of the trouble, look more to the symptoms. Very likely there is some spinal affection, in fact it is almost certain that there is. An X-ray picture may not always show anything unusual. What the parents of the girl should do is to take her to a good osteopathic physician and give her treatment, but it must be a skilful and experienced osteopath. It is useless for them to massage her hand alone: it is not in the hand that the trouble originates but in the spine, and all the massage on the hand and arm would not improve matters unless proper treatment is given. Only by removing the cause the trouble will be overcome. I believe that much can be gained by hydro-therapeutic treatment as described therein, there will be good results noticed before long. The price of the Vol. II. is $3. I do not consider any internal treatment necessary for such a condition.

CONSCRIPTION OF WEALTH IN U. S. NOW ADVOCATED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15. — Conscription of wealth to pay for the war and exemption of the earnings of the nation's workers are urged in a report of the Senate to-day by three members of the Finance committee, who disagree with the revenue raising methods proposed in the pending $2,000,000,000 War Tax Bill.

The report, signed by Senators Lafollette, Gore and Thomas of Colorado, was presented by Senator Lafollette when the Senate resumed discussion of the Bill. The minority asserts that the sum the committee bill proposes to raise is only half enough to meet Governmental needs for the present fiscal year. In addition to the $5,917,878,347, which quoting Mr. McAdoo, the minority says is needed for Government expenses, the report says that to take care of loans to the Allies, and interest on bond issues, this country must raise more than $13,000,000,000 this year.

The committee bill, says the minority has ignored Mr. McAdoo's estimate and would leave the country without a sound policy for financing the war.

Lessons From Britain.

"We claim to have profited by the military experience of other warring countries, particularly Great Britain," say the minority report, "and have adopted the policy of drafting men into the army from the very start. Why, then, should we not profit by their financial mistakes, and draft wealth, in the form of taxation, into the service of the country from the very start?

"The British Income Tax yielded for the last fiscal year one billion dollars. On that basis, similar income tax rates in this country would yield about two and a half billions.

"From two sources, the war profits tax and the income tax there can be raised without submitting the country to serious financial strain, more than double the amount raised by the committee bill."

The Minority points out that Great Britain now is taxing war profits 80 per cent., while the committee bill, in its graded scale, goes no higher than 50 per cent. Amendment to the committee bill, to bring the war war profits tax figure up to 75 or 80 per cent., will be submitted by Senator Lafollette. He will also introduce amendments greatly increasing the income tax schedules, and will seek to strike out of the committee bill taxes on tea, coffee, sugar, pullman berths, increase in the letter postage and other rates which directly hit the consumer.

TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Self Styled International Spy Arrested by U.S. Officers in Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, August 18. — Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves, self styled international spy, who came into some prominence in 1914 after the publication of a volume of his experience as "the personal spy of the Kaiser," was arrested by Federal agents at the Union Station, for being in a zone, closed to enemy aliens, without permits. Graves told the authorities he was working for the Department of State. After his arrest he gave out statements that he was on his way to Denver in an effort to obtain papers that would prove the "illegitimacy of the Hohenzollern family."

MR. BOOZE LYNCHED BY MACHINERY CLUB

Two Hundred at Long Branch Clambake Either Drink Water or Suffer from Thirst.

LONG BRANCH, N.J., Aug. 17. — The Machinery Club, of New York city, at No. 50 Church street, did two things at their annual outing and clambake here this afternoon. They swung the colours to the breese and hung "Mr. Booze" in effigy. The colours were unfurled by Captain Reimer, U.S.A., after a march around the field, while Chester Arthur's band was playing the "Star Spangled Banner."

After the colours were hoisted, William H. Van Winkle, chairman of the Outing Committee, spoke. The hanzing of Mr. Booze, "on a sour apple tree," in sight of the two hundred diners informed the members of the Machinery Club they were going to have a clambake without liquor.

After dinner, toasts were offered by George A. Post, President of the Railway Business Association, who presented a punch bowl to Charles A. Schieren, past president, of Brooklyn.

Making Good Progress At The Quaker Oats Plant

Brickwork is Being Laid on the East of the Main Building

Fairly good progress is being made on the construction of the new plant of the Quaker Oats Company. The foundation walls of the main building have ben re-built and reinforced, and the bricklayers have started the brickwork on the east side next to the river. Piers for the supporting columns dot the foundation, and in a few more weeks the main building will assume more material form. The timber work of the mill section of the building is up a couple of storeys, and the huge mechanical concrete mixer is daily churning up a mixture of cement and sand that goes to make up the foundation of a battery of eighteen concrete elevators. A fleet of five-ton trucks are hauling sand for this purpose. The old six-storey warehouse, which has been a difficult job to demolish, will soon be a thing of the past. Nothing but the basement and the first storey remain and another week or two will see the finish. The whole work presents a scene of activity and interest.

New Floor On Hunter Street Bridge

One of the most important public works being carried on by the Board of Works Department is that of laying a new floor on the Hunter street bridge. During the past few days Sreet Commissioner Evans has had a gang of men employed on this work and the result has to be seen to be appreciated. The old plank flooring of the structure was rotted beyond repair. The new floor is composed of two by four scantling set on edge, in place of the old plank, which was laid on the flat side. The new floor will last longer and wear better, according to those who are responsible for the work. Another year or two will, in all probability, witness the erection of a new overhead bridge at this point, in accordance with the provision made in the agreement under which the Quaker Oats Company re-established their plant in Peterborough.

FRENCH EDITOR ENDS LIFE RATHER THAN FACE COURT-MARTIAL

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The death in a prison infirmary of Miguel Almereyda, editor of the Bonnet Rouge, which was attributed first to hemorrhage of the lungs, was said to-day by the ministry of justice to have been occasioned by strangulation. The autopsy showed strangulation to have been brought about by the use of a thin cord such as a shoestring.

M. Almereyda was under arrest on a charge of sedition. His apprehension was a sequel to that of another member of the Bonnet Rouge staff, upon whom a suspicious check for 150,000 francs was found on his arrival from Switzerland. A charge was preferred of having dealings with the enemy, and it is stated this is to be changed to one of having treasonable relations with the enemy involving transfer of the case to a court-martial, with the possibility of the infliction of the death penalty.

The case, which is being investigated by Magistrate Drioux, has developed considerably in the last few days. Search has been made of the houses of a number of persons connected with Almereyda and of the offices of the Transche Republicaine, an ultra-pacifist newspaper, and Les Nations, a publication of similar character. It is also reported that the authorities will examine a bank with a Russian name which is alleged to have drawn funds from a Berlin bank. One of the principals in the Paris institution is said to have been a close friend of Almereyda.

The First Line of Defense

Pure blood is the body's first line of defense against disease. Strong, healthy blood neutralizes the poisons of invading germs, or destroy the germs themselves. That is why many people exposed to disease do not contract it. Those whose blood is weak and watery and therefore lacking in defensive power are most liable to infection. Everybody may observe that healthy, redblooded people are less liable to colds and the grippe, than pale, bloodless people. It is the bloodless people who tire easily, who are short of breath at slight exertion, who have poor appetites, and who wake up in the morning as tired as when the went to bed. While women and girls chiefly suffer from bloodlessness the trouble also affects both boys and men. It simply affects girls and women to a greater extent because there is a greater demand upon their blood supply.

To renew and build up the blood there is no remedy can equal Dr Williams' Pink Pills. They tone up the entire system, make the blood rich anr red, feed and strengthen starving nerves, increase the appetite, put colour in the cheeks, give refreshing sleep and drive away that unnatural tired feeling. Plenty of sunlight and wholesome food will do the rest.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Limited To 25 Millions

Which Government May Expend Upon C.N.R. Without Consulting Parliament

OTTAWA, August 18.—Sir Thomas White moved an amendment to the Canadian Northern bill yesterday afternoon, limiting the amount which the Governor-in-Council could spend without consulting Parliament, on operation, maintenance, etc., to $25,000,000.

He also moved in amendment that should the arbitrators base their estimate of the value of the C. N. R. stock on the cost of reproduction they do not take cognizance of increase in materials, labour, etc., since the war commenced.

In further amendment he moved that the amount which the arbitrators decided must be said for the stock should be paid out of consolidated funds.

Sir Thomas referred to information asked for by the Opposition regarding the owners and pledges of bonds and stock, also securities. He thought he might be able to secure some of the information requested, and would suggest that in order that some progress might be made on the rest of the bill Section 1 should be allowed to stand.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier thought that the Minister should provide the House with a statement regarding the charters, etc., of the affiliated and subsidiary companies. Sir Thomas stated that he had such a statement, which he read and tabled.

TAFT HASN'T PATIENCE WITH PEACE TALK

Declares in Montreal that the United States is in the War to Its Finish

MONTREAL, August 18. — "The United States is in this war to stay," was the emphatic declaration of William Taft, ex-President of the United States, when interviewed yesterday.

"We realize that it is as vital to us as to England or France to win. We realize that they have been fighting our battles for us. Now our turn has come, and we are bracing ourselves to face it.

"I have no patience with this talk of peace. Peace is not possible until the Prussian military caste has been driven out of power and awakened by the German people into a truthful and clear apprehension of the futility of the policy of Germany, and the burden that Germany and the world carry in the kaiser and his military party."

Mr. Taft arrived en route to Murray Bay from Kansas, where he has been seriously ill with acute indigestion.

"I am feeling much better," he said.

THE FIRST "ENDLESS CHAIN"

If you want a professional opinion on the "endless chain" system of sending letters, ask your postman, or, if you want still a stronger opinion, ask a postoffice official. Both of these gentleman will tell you, individually and in chorus, that the "endless chain" is the worst pest they know of, and that they would rather have the measles, even German measles. The first of these endless chain" schemes that have proved such an annoyance to postal officials in all countries was launched on June 27, 1898, by a young girl, Natalie Schneck, of Babylon, Long Island. Her project was purely benevolent, and was animated by a spirit of patriotism. Desiring to raise a fund for the aid of the American soldiers then fighting Spain, she originated the "endless chain" idea as an adaptation of a scheme that had had a vogue in England until it was stopped by an act of parliament. The "chain" was started with four letters written by Miss Schenck to as many girl friends. Each was asked to contribute ten cents and write four similar letters to other friends. A few days later the Babylon postoffice began to get busy and as the days went by the postal officials got busier and busier until they were fairly buried under the weight of mail which snowed upon them, or rather, descended upon them like an avalanche. By the Fourth of July all hands were ready for extra help, and mail was delivered to Miss Schenck by the truck load. Now that young lady began to feel the effects of her scheme. Her home was littered from cellar to garret with letters, letters and more letters, all containing dimes. Before the thing "died out" of its own accord she had received over a quarter of a million dimes. The scheme was more successful than she had ever dreamed of would be. It didn't take long for certain persons to detect the possibilities of imitation for causes that were not worthy. Fakirs all over the world heard of it and, as fakirs will, they immediately got busy. Hundreds of thousands of people were swindled out of money in this manner, until the postal authorities put an end to it. The famous "endless chain" prayer, which threatens endless punishment to any person who breaks it, has been one of the hardiest survivors of all.

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

THE FOOD VALUE OF MILK

In Wartime it Can be Conserved Best as Cheese, Says Dr. Campbell

Commenting on the food value of milk, the Medical Record says:

"Although views with regard to the food value of milk are fairly definite, that is, the majority of medical men are agreed as to its great importance, there still are those who believe that the use of milk has not been an unmixed blessing. Dr. Harry Campbell, writing in The Lancet of April 1, 1916, offers the opinion that the child, as distinguished from the babe, does not need milk and would not suffer greatly if wholly deprived of it. He points out that milk, affording as it does a peculiarly favourable soil for the growth of germs, has carried disease and death to thousands of children.

"He argues that it is only since man first domesticated the cow and goat, and this from the point of view of his evolution was but as yesterday, he has been supplied with any milk other than human, and it is absurd to suppose that before that time his health suffered from the lack of cow's or goat's milk. Even to this day many peoples are without any.

than the United States Bureau of Ed

"Campbell does not make the point that dairy milk is a useless food for man, but merely that it is not essential to him after the nursing period. Its chief value to the human race, he says, is as a source of butter and cheese, two highly concentrated and agreeable foods, admitting of prolonged storage. He, therefore, thinks that it would be wise during the period of war, at least, to reduce the consumption of milk to a minimum, and to make as much butter and cheese as possible, especially the latter, on account of the large amount of protein it contains."

Many Children Die From Summer Complaint

When They Could Be Saved by Using

DR. FOWLER'S

Extract of Wild Strawberry

There is not a Summer passes without thousands of people, especially infants, being attacked by Summer Complaint.

The prostration, often verging on collapse, which sometimes accompanies this disease makes it one of the most serious and dangerous we have to contend with during the hot months.

A remedy which will quickly offset the vomiting, purging and the profuse diarrhoea is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. Thomas M. Theriault, Grand Anse, N.B., writes: "My three children were very sick with Summer Complaint during the hot days last Summer. I thought one day that they would die, and I didn't know what to do to cure them. I happened to have one of your almanacs in the house, and found by reading about Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry that it was a good remedy. I at once got two bottles, and they perfectly cured them. I recommend everybody to use this wonderful remedy."

When you ask for "Dr. Fowler's" see that you get it.

It has been on the market for the past 72 years.

You don't experiment when you buy it.

Editor, Examiner:

The ladies of Ashburnham who have loyally contributed much to the various patriotic funds, have had one of their principal sources of revenue cut from under their feet, in quarters where it should be least expected.

Amongst other devices for raising funds they had inaugurated one for the collection of waste paper, and by diligence and much hard work made a success of it, whereby they derived a revenue of about one thousand dollars by three collections at stated periods. No sooner had they made a success of it than inroads were made upon their modus operandi, which stopped further operations. They found that collection could only be made a paying proposition where they could collect enough to ship it by the carload, hence their success up to a certain period, but once others "butted in" to reap the benefits of their scheme, then it became a failure.

I there no way of appealing to the loyalty of the transgressors to abstain from further encroachments, for I take it they are not pro-Germans and will listen to the voice of reason, and let the Ashburnham ladies revive their good work of patriotism?

The collections made by the intruders were for purposes other than for patriotism, which makes it doubly culpable. Now, Mr. Editor, your advocacy along the line suggested would not only be appreciated by every soldier in the trenches, but also by every loyal subject of his Brittanic Majesty King George.

Yours truly,
LOYALTY.

Recruiting Posters From the States

Some very interesting recruiting posters have been received from the United States. "I want you for the U. S. army" is the inscription on one poster, the effectiveness of which is enhanced by a typical sketch of Uncle Sam by James Montomery Flagg. "Columbia Calls" is the appeal on another striking poster. The posters resemble in style the series that was produced in Great Britain at the outbreak of the war.

POTATO MARKET IS BECOMING A JOKE IN HIGH PRICE ASKED

Peterboro' Pays $3 a Bag and Kingston $1.50, Indicating the Unenviable Strength of the Local Market.

WOMEN OBJECT TO BUTTER PRICES

"I think its a disgrace," declared a woman coming from the market this morning, "that these farmers should be permitted to demand 48 cents a pound for butter. I believe we should stay away from the market for a while. The merchants wouldn't treat us worse and I'm sure we could do better."

To say that this woman and her two companions were irritated by the high prices is mildly describing their feelings.

But Peterborough citizens have little of the spirit of resentment or rebellion that they will continue to pay top prices whether on the market or elsewhere.

Consider Potatoes.

Potatoes held their $3.00 a bag price this morning as if it were immovable. In Kingston the Wednesday the market price of potatoes was $1.25 a bushel and they were expected to drop to $1.00 to-day. On that basis they would be $1.50 a bag, or just one hundred per cent. less than the price Peterborough pays so complacently. It seems strange to the man on the street that the Food Controller has been unable or unwilling to exct a decline in the prices of staple goods.

Referring to the dairy products market a prominent citizen remarked, "You can't eat cows and have their milk too."

Worthless Bills In Peterborough

Mexican Money is Being Circulated Here

Peterborough merchants are warned to be on the lookout for Mexican money, which is being circulated in the city in the form of bills. The money is worthless and will not be accepted by any bank. Mr. L. Potvin, confectioner, 425 George street, has in his possession a Mexican bill, which he received over the counter for a five-dollar bill. The figure five is plainly marked on the bill, and in general appearance the bill resembles Canadian money. At the bank, Mr. Potvin was informed that the bill was worthless, and at the present time, only gold and silver is in circulation in Mexico.

Police Were Mistaken In Their Man

Lindsay Warder: A party, whose home is in Peterborough, created a slight sensation this morning when he was discovered endeavoring to realize some cash on a razor which he was offering as security. It was noised abroad that he might be the man wanted in Detroit for which a reward of $1,000 is offered, and the police got busy. The fellow was located in short order and on being interrogated, said he was a returned soldier and only endeavouring to raise the price to get back to the Electric City, whereupon one of the officers offered to oblige him with the necessary train fare without putting up his shaving outfit.

STRANGE DISCOVERY IN SOUTH VERULAM

When Mr. Moss Killaby was working across one of the light sandy fields on his farm the other day, he discovered a skeleton lying there with arms outstretched, and the face upturned. The neighbours have been viewing the skeleton and wondering what might have been the reason of the burial there, if it was a burial. One would not suppose that had the body been buried, that the arms would have been placed as they were lately found. The skeleton is of a man about six feet tall or a little more and the skull and jaw bone are unusually large, and though in an advanced stage of decay the bones lay in the position that they were in the dead body. The opinion, generally, is that these bones are of an Indian, for in the past Indian relics have been found in the immediate vicinity of this spot. The stumps of mighty pines are the silent witnesses of mystery which will remain unfolded. Had an arrowhead or tomahawk been found to form a missing link, the story would have been told. — Bobcaygeon Independent.

Boy Gardener Unearths A Carrot Curiosity

Master Earl Barrie, a member of the Y.M.C.A. "Boys' Garden Club," last evening in sampling his carrot crop, unearthed a curiosity or rarity, a strangulated carrot as the surgeons would call it. The carrot had grown downward into the neck of a broken bottle, and as it grew, its enlargement was restricted by the walls of the bottle, and it bulged out above and below, assuming an hour glass form. It's a win-the-war vegetable, the part in the neck representing the hemmed-in Hun, and the expanded parts the growth of allied strength, helped by just such patriotic production as that represented by Earl Barrie and the "Boys' Garden Club." Every little helps.

"Why are you so sure the man isn't her husband?" "Because," replied Miss Cayenne, "he referred to her bathing suit as 'stunning.' If he was her husband he'd have said shocking."—Washington Star.

Some young men would get along better if they had a little less point to their shoes and a little more in their conversation.

MAKE EVERY EAR OF CORN DO ITS BIT

There is bound to be a great waste of fruit and vegetables this season unless people are forwarned in time. In the towns and cities where the backyard garden movement was most successful, the danger of waste is most imminent.

Early in the spring Canadian city folk betook themselves to the backyard with hoe and spade to convert that "slacker" into a back garden. Their faithful work is bringing results in fine crops of fruit and vegetables. But the problem of taking care of those crops before they spoil is now pressing for solution.

The Food Controller has said that waste and defeat are synonimous at the present time and surely this end of the fight rests on the shoulders of the women. Every bean and pea, every ear of corn, every berry, and every other ripe fruit and vegetable gazes reproachfully from the new gardens and demands to be popped into some place where it can stand in line and do its bit.

Unlike their sisters in the country, who harvest their garden crops in boxes and bottles against the long winter months, city women have not been trained to store vegetables and fruits. Through the Women's Institutes of the various provinces the countrywoman has in her hand bulletins which give the latest, simplest and best ways of canning and preserving. Her city cousin, to whom these bulletins are to be had for the asking, does not know of them. All that is necessary is a request to the Department of Agriculture in any of the provinces. Printed information as to the methods of canning and preserving best suited to the particular locality are available. Whether it be preserving or canning or drying ways and means are covered by the various bulletings.

To mention a very few of these, one from nearly every province is included in the following list:

Prince Eward Island, Women's Institutes Annual Report for 1916 has information on canning of fruits and vegetables by H. L. Sterns.

New Brunswick, Bulletin 10, "Food and Diet."

Quebec, "La Bonne Menagere."

Ontario, Bulletin 252, "The preservation of food."

Manitoba, "Agricultural College Bulletins on Home Economis."

Saskatchewan, "Report of Convention of Homemaker's Clubs."

British Columbia, Bulletin 37, "Preservation of food."

Those who are interested in food conservation and methods of canning, preserving, drying and storing should write for information to the Domestic Science Supervisors of their own Provinces, of whom the following list gives the address in each case.

Questions For The Farm Editor

An amateur editor, doing emergency duty on a farm paper, is credited with some amusing answers to correspondents. For example: "Please tell me how hash is made?" "Hash is not made; it accumulates." "Is it all right to feed hogs corn in the ear?" "No. Put the corn in the trough and let them help themselves." "My hair is beginning to fall out. What can I get to keep it in?" "A paper bag." "Our old bull is chasing me round a forty-acre field. What shall I do?" "I don't know. But hang on. The Editor will be back in a week."

ANOTHER HOME GUARD DECIDES TO DISBAND.

Townspeople Laughed at Its Drilling Manoeuvres.

HIGHLAND FALLS, N.Y.—Because curiosity seekers laughed at them drilling, the Home Guard of New Paltz, Orange county, after taking a vote of its members, announced it has disbanded.

Captain Gregory had 300 recruits. The membership gradually dwindled to less than thirty, because, it was explained, the townspeople who gathered to watch the drills, laughed at the way some of the awkward volunteers drilled and "jollied" them until they got huffy and quit.

What to Use and Avoid On Faces That Perspire

Skin, to be healthy, must breathe. It also must perspire—must expel, through the pores, its share of the body's waste material. Certain creams and powders clog the pores, interfering both with elimination and breathing, especially during the heated period. If more women understood this, there would be fewer self-ruined complexions. If they would use ordinary mercolised wax they would have healthy complexions. This remarkable substance actually absorbs a bad skin, also unclogging the pores. Result: The fresher, younger under-skin is permitted to breathe and to show itself. The exquisite new complexion gradually peeps out, one free from any appearance of artificiality. Obtain an ounce of mercolised wax from your druggist and try it. Apply nightly like cold cream for a week or two, washing it off mornings.

To remove wrinkles, here's a marvelously effective treatment, which also acts naturally and harmlessly: Dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel and use as a wash lotion.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

The sufferings and glory of the Redeemer, and the security and happiness of the church having been fully declared. Here follows an invitation to the sons of men to come and share these blessings. All are welcome to the blessings of Salvation, to whom those blessings are welcome, Observe 1st, who are invited: Ho! Everyone, not the Jews alone, but the Gentiles. In Christ there is enough for all, and enough for evermore, for in Him all fullness dwells; ministers are to make a general offer of Salvation to all. 2nd, What is the qualification required in those that shall be welcome? They must thirst. Those that are satisfied with the world and its enjoyments for a portion; those that see no need of Christ and his righteousness do not thirst, they are of no use examen about their future happiness, therefore, will not be beholden to Christ, but all that thirst are invited. Where God gives grace, He gives a thirst after it, and where the grace is used He will give more grace. Psalm 81-10-3rd. Whether they are invited: Come ye to the waters, come to Christ for He is the Fountain of living waters. He is the smitten Rock. Come to holy ordinances to those streams that make the heart glad and gladdens the city of God. Come to them for to those who believe on Christ they will be abundantly refreshing. Come to the healing waters. Come to the living streams, whoever will may come and take of the water of life freely. Rev. 22-17. Our Saviour referred to this John 7-37. If any man thirst, let hi mcome to Me, any man thirst, let him come to Me, to do? Come and buy. Make it your own, by the application of the grace of the gospel to yourselves upon Christ's terms, stand not hesitating or delidebating. Come and eat, make it still more your own. When we have what we need, let us not deny ourselves the use of it, but let us enjoy it, 5th. What is the provision that they are invited to? Come and buy wine and milk, which will not only quench the thirst, but nourish the body and revive the spirits. The world comes short of our expectations. We promise ourselves pleasure and enjoyment, but we are not satisfied when we have tried them, but Christ satisfies in every way. We come to the waters, and would be glad of them, but we find there wine and milk. 6th. The free communication of this provision: Buy it without money, and without price. This intimates that the gifts offered us are such as no price can be set upon. He who offers them has no need of any returns we can make. the things offered are already paid for Christ purchased them at the full price of his own blood. 1st Peter 1-19 Sin and misery are all we can call our own, all we can offer, our service and all that we have belongs to the Lord and is all His own. Our wants are innumerable, and we cannot supply them, where then shall we find money or price to supply them. In Christ we have all things, and if Heaven be ours, we are forever indebted to His free grace. We are earnestly pressed to accept this invitation. Hearken diligently; bow the ear, and let our hearts stoop, to the loving call of the gospel message. not only to come, but accept God's offer. Wherefore do ye spend your labour and toil for that which satisfies not. See here the vanity of the things of this world, they afford no nourishment for the soul. they satisfy not, nor yield any solid comfort. they flatter, but they do not fill see the folly of the children of this world, they spend their money and labour for that which gives no lasting comfort and true enjoyment—God's good word and promise, a good conscience and the comforts of God's spirit, are a continual blessing to those who hearken diligently and obediently to the message. Here the invitation is not, come and buy, lest that should discourage us, but come and eat, and feed upon that which will be an abundant blessing. Hereby we are to secure our everlasting happiness. Hear and your soul shall live. On what easy terms is happiness offered to us. The great God graciously secures all this to us, He says, Come to me and I will make an everlasting covenant with you. They are the sure mercies of David, covenant mercies, suited to our case by Jesus Christ, purchased by Him, treasured up in Him, promised in Him, and out of His hand are dispensed to us. He is the Mediator of the new covenant. Acts 13-34. In Christ the promises are, All the promises they are, all yea and come. Jesus Christ is promised for the assuring of all the other promises we are here invited to accept. There was nothing in us to merit such a favour. We were under condemnation and guilt; but Christ is the gift of God. We want one to attest the truth of the promises of which we are invited to take the benefit of, and Christ is given to confirm the promises made to our fathers; that we may venture our souls upon these promises. We know not how to find the way, but Christ is the life, the truth, and the way. No man cometh to the Father, but by Him. He is the door of the sheepfold, and also the Good Shepherd of the sheep. He is given to us for a leader to show us the way, and for a Commander to guide us to the land of promise, and our business is to follow Him. The feast which He promises is to be furnished with guests, for the provision which has been made shall not be lost nor made in vain. The Gentiles shall be called to this feast, a nation not formerly called and owned as thy nation, as Israel. The Gentiles shall come at the call. The Gentiles will thus flock to Christ, because those who are brought to be acquainted with God, and to understand the relationship between them and Him, cannot but come to Christ, who is the Mediator between God and man, and there is no way of coming to God, but by Him. He is the Holy One of Israel, true to his promises, and He has promised to glorify Christ, by giving Him the heathen for his inheritance. Then follows a gracious offer of pardon and peace and of all happiness to poor sinners upon gospel terms—seek the Lord while He may be found, seek for Him—and inquire after Him, seek Him earnestly as your ortion and happiness, call upon Him, pray to Him to be reconciled to you, ask Him for everything else that you need. It will not be in vain to seek God, now His patience is waiting on us; His word is calling to us, and His spirit is striving with us. Let us now improve our opportunities, for now is the accepted time. But there is a day coming, when He wil not be found. There may come such a time in this life; it is certain that at death and judgment the door will be shut. Luke 16-26 and 13-25-26. Mercy is now offered then judgment without mercy will take place. Here is a call to the unconverted, to them is assurance given that penitent sinners shall find a pardoning God. If they repent, that is, to turn from sin, to forsake it. The wicked must forsake his evil way as that way leads to destruction. There must be a change of the mind and a change of the way—the unrighteous must forsake his thoughts and alter our judgment, concerning persons and things. We must break off evil practices and strive against evil thoughts. To repent is to return to the Lord our God, to the Fountain of life and living waters, which we had forsaken for broken cisterns that could hold n water. If we do so God will have mercy. He will abundantly pardon and give a welcome to all that come to Him. This is great encouragement to all to accept God's offer and be reconciled to Him. He says his thoughts in this matter are not as ours, but as far above them as Heaven is above the earth. God meets returning sinners with pardoning mercy, He forgives freely and upbraideth not. We forgive and cannot forget, but when God forgives sin, He remembers it no more. Wherever the word of God comes with Divine power, and receives blessing from God. it reaches the heart and conscience and prevents them fro mebing barren and unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savious, Jesus Christ. This beautiful image conveys a just idea of the beneficial blessed effects produced by the Divine Word, still the similtude comes very far short of what it is designed to illustrate; for the Sacred truth which proceeds from Jehovah, produces a spiritual change in the minds of men. This word is said to go forth out of God's mouth, and it shall not return unto Him void.

Yours sincerely,
JAMES SUTHERLAND,

New Drug Puts On 8 oz. of Flesh a Day

Turns the Food You Eat Into Fat

Most people who are thin or run-down eat plenty of good nourishing, fat producing food and still do not put on an ounce of flesh, while you will notice that a plump, stout person eats hardly half as much as you do. They digest their food while your system is in such a run-down, wrecked condition your blood fails to supply the stomach, liver and kidneys with enough strength and consequently your food is not digested and you are receiving no nutriment from it.

After every meal and at bedtime take from one to two tablets of Bentsel Phosphorus with iron. These tablets act directly on the blood and nerve system, increasing the corpuscles in the blood and these run directly to the stomach, liver, kidneys and nerves. Doctors say they can take a person who is all run-down, tired, nervous, weak and build their system up to above normal strength in 10 to 14 days. Do no be taking all sorts of laxatives and poisonous tonics, go to the root of all the trouble and strengthen your blood, restore your nerves and then your stomach will digest and give you nourishment from what you eat. After taking the first few doses you will notice you are getting fatter, stronger, more robust, eating better, feeling fine, and digesting everything you eat. F. C. Webber dispenser. INCREASING THE FLOW OF MILK

Make Each Cow Pay—Testing Grade Cows

A grade cow, eight years old, near Woodstock, Ont., that freshened last November, has given in eight months 13,092 pounds of milk, average test over 3.2, spot cash value, $288.57; she is still giving 34 pounds of milk per day, and is due in November again. Such a cow is a source of perennial pride to her owner; he weighs the milk from each cow he has, because he finds it pays.

But is it not curious that many dairymen never bother to weigh, and so remain quite hazy as to each individual's performance? It is curious, too, when you come to think of it, that so many are content to bother with a herd not one of which has any remote chance whatever of giving in a year, even one-half of what this fine cow gave in eight months.

The immense possibilities for an increased flow of milk from cows selected on their actual records, bred right, fed well and handled sensibly, seem, curiously enough, entirely undreamed of as yet by some dairy farmers in all provinces.

Milk record forms will be gladly supplied free of charge by the Dairy Division, Ottawa, to any one curious enough and enterprising enough to find out what each cow does actually produce in return for all she eats. Make each cow pay.

Letter From Lieut.-Col. Scobell

Officer Commanding 235th Battalion Has Been Transferred to the Imperial Forces.

The following letter has been received from Lt.-Col. Scobell, late commanding officer of the 235th Battalion who has just received a commission with the Imperial forces and retains his rank. Col. Scobelel made a host of friends during his residence in Belleville.

Royal Overseas Officers' Club,
London, July 24th, '17.

I am leaving for France Sunday, having been loaned to the Imperial Army. I hold my rank, but my pay is reduced. I had the opportunity of returning to Canada, but refused absolutely and fought hard until I landed this position. I am still and will continue to be paid by the Dominion Government, but will be attached to the Imperial Army for duty.

All the Belleville boys are well and will be leaving for France in the near future. The 235th Batt. was the best disciplined battalion that ever came into Sandling Camp. I was highly complimented on the physique and discipline of the men. Some of my officers are already in France.

I have been in three air raids since I landed. Was in the big one in London a few days ago, and while it is a pretty sight to see 25 or 30 machines in the air in perfect formation, yet you feel so helpless you want to get under the earth. You see the bombs falling and you imagine the next one will hit you. I fancy they have been checked from coming over London again. I sincerely hope so at any rate. To see little children and women blown to pieces makes you blood boil.

I don't know yet what battalion I will be attached to or whether I will be in France or Belgium, and won't know till I arrive there Sunday.

We often think of the good people of Belleville and of all their kindness while in their midst. Every man has a warm spot in his heart for Belleville.

Your truly,
S. B. Scobell, Lt.-Col.

CANADIAN SOLDIER FLED FROM GERMANY

LONDON, Aug. 18.—After two years in captivity Private (868) A. Nelson, belonging to Winnipeg, has reached England. He was one of the original "Black Devils" taken prisoner at Ypres in 1915. Most of his time was spent at Munster, from whence he escaped. He was working with a large party of British and Canadian prisoners in a stone quarry and wandered away unobserved with two men of the Black Watch in the dusk. They had watched others being gathered up to go back to the internment camp, and the trio had stinted themselves of rations to have something for the eighy-mile trip to the Dutch frontier.

It took eight days to journey, which shows how carefully they had made arrangements, as they could only travel at night, avoiding villages, highways, and lying the whole day in ditches and under hedges. "Many times German women working in the fields passed so close we could hear them talk. We had to guess the direction in the dark, but were always lucky. I think we made almost a straight line without once being stopped. Dogs gave us the most worry. One night the Scotties with me had to kill a dog with a stake, as he was making so much row. The British Consul at Rotterdam gave us an outfit of civilian clothing. I am going to the Canadian depot and shall be jumping into khaki to-morrow."

Nelson's chief complaint about his captivity was its monotony, although he says the prisoners make capital efforts to amuse themselves.

Fast Sprinter Killed At Front

Lieut. D. J. T. Jamieson Ran Dead Heat With K. G. McLeod in 1903

LONDON, August 17.—TThe latest list issued shows a welcome falling off in the casualties among well-known British sportsmen on the Western front. Captain H. K. Ward, reported wounded and missing, is the famous Oxford and Australian oarsman. He rowed in the Sydney University eight in 1909 and 1910, and stroked the New South Wales eight in the Interstate race in 1910. Entering New College, Oxford, in 1911, he rowed in the New College eight for the Grand at Henley in 1912, and later in the year was in the Australian crew beaten by Leander in the eights at the Olympic Regatta at Stockholm. He was given his "Blue" in 1913 when he rowed in the University boat race against Cambridge, and was again in the crew in 1914. He was in the New College eight head of the river in 1912 and 1913, and the New four which won the Varsity fours in 1913. Captain Ward was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous bravery last year.

Lieut. D. J. T. Jamieson, killed, was a first-class sprinter while at Fettes College. He ran K. G. McLeod a dead-heat in the 100-yards in 10 4-5 secs., in 1903; won the 120 yards football handicap and was also winner of throwing the cricket ball.

Captain E. Dobson, killed, was famous as a Rugby footballer in the West of Scotland. He was a younger brother of the Scottish Internationals, J. Dobson and J. D. Dobson. He played for Glasgow Academicals in the 1912-3 championship fifteen, for Glasgow against Edinburgh in 1912, and the West of Scotland in 1913-4.

E. E. Salway, the famous soccer player of the Southampton Club, has been severely wounded in France and now lies in a Belgian hospital. He has suffered the loss of an eye and an arm. Joining the famous "Saints" in the season of 1912-3, he was a tower of strength as a half-back.

Lieut. T. B. Wilson, killed, was the well-known Cambridge University and Harrow cricketer. Lieut. W. C. Hands, the Warwickshire County cricketer, has so far recovered from his wounds to enable him to enjoy some cricket occasionally. Lieut. A. D. Denton, the Northamptonshire County cricketer, has been badly wounded, which necessitated the amputation of one of his legs. Lieut. C. W. R. Pantling, the famous London Irish Rugby player, has also been severely wounded. He played for Middlesex County, Munster and in the Irish trials, and was picked as reserve for Ireland in the International games.

Lieut. F. L. Davies, killed, obtained his colours for cricket when at Haileybury College.

"TERRIBLE TERRY" POSES AS ORATOR

Terry McGovern, former feather-weight champion — "Terrible Terry" of old—was the principal speaker at the meeting of the "Midday Minute Men" at 57 Chambers street, New York, last week. His speech follows:

"Ladies and gentlemen: We're all here for a purpose. We want to lick the kaiser. And I'll tell you right now we've got to go out determined to beat him. Here I am willing to give everything I've got to go out and fight. I never was a coward yet and I hope I never will be. We must enlist as American citizens under the Stars and Stripes of America. I thank you."

NEXT CANADIAN WAR LOAN SHOULD BE MADE POPULAR

As the Canadian government's recent short-term loan in the United Statese was for only $100,000,000, it is probable that another domestic war loan cannot be postponed longer than the end of 1917. There may be ways and means of financing our heavy war expenditures for the remaining five months of the current year and for a month or so next year, but at present it looks as though the fourth domestic war loan would have to be issued soon after fall, possibly December, when the greater part of the crop movement financing has been accomplished. The experience with the marketing, to the ultimate investor, of the third war loan particularly, makes it imperative that much more effective arrangements should be made to insure the success of the next domestic loan. This is not a reflection upon the excellent work of the finance minister and his staff. It is a reminder that a much bigger task is ahead.

A greater number of subscribers to the next loan must be obtained than the 40,000 who subscribed to the third loan. To do this, considerably more organization work will prove necessary during the months preceding the issue. The United States sold $3,000,000,000 of 3½ per cent. bonds to 4,000,000 people. That was the first war loan and paid a rate of interest 1½ per cent. less than the Canadian loan and at least that much less than the average man could get on his funds, with a reasonable amount of safety. In other words, without any previous education in domestic war loans and at a rate of interest which was far below normal for the ordinary American, the government reached 4 per cent. of the population. To have secured equally wide distribution the last Canadian war loan should have been sold to 280,000 people. Instead, it reached only 40,000. While the Liberty Loan subscription lists were open, the appeal to patriotic necessity and self-interest was proclaimed in every newspaper, on every bill board, in every window, at the movies, in the theatres, on the street corners, throughout the length and breadth of the land. As Mr. R. D. Bell, Montreal, stated in an exceptionally interesting contribution to The Monetary Times the other week, "no man, whether he was a capitalist or a labourer, could go through a day's work without having the Liberty Loan impressed upon him, not once, but twenty times. Every inducement was offered to the people at large to subscribe. The facilties of the periodical payment plan, whereby the bonds could be paid for on easy payments out of income were advertised energetically by practically every bank and security house in the United States. In Canada only those who habitually read the financial page of the newspapers came in contact with the war loan advertising; in fact we know of one firm which had great difficulty in persuading one of our leading newspapers to allow them the use of the first page. Only one house actively brought to the attention of the public the fact that they could buy the war loan on easy payments out of income. The security houses did most of the work of actually distributing the loan, but the work was confined largely to the restricted clientele that always buys bonds. So far in this war we have lost a splendid opportunity to make this country a nation of bondholders. Certainly our war loans are attractive enough and our people are prosperous anough."

The finance minister and his colleagues will undoubtedly make effective plans to endeavour to double the number of subscribers to our next war loan. The effort will cost money and considerable labour by the finance department and by various organizations throughout the country. If effectively planned and carried out, these efforts should make a great many more citizens bondholders as well as taxpayers.—Monetary Times.

French Bombardier, Driven Insane By Shell Fire, Shot By Own Men As A Deserter

PARIS Aug. 17.—One of the saddest stories of the war telling of martyrdom of a brave French bombardier, Eugene Bourete, who by a tragic error was condemned for cowardice before the enemy and suffered the extreme penalty, is told by Mr. de Maiziere, the Petit Parisien's special correspondent.

On August 29, 1914, Bouret was at his post when a German shell hit his battery and hurled him a distance of ten metres, half blinded and unconscious. The field hospital surgeon reported him suffering from nervous derangement endangering his reason.

Half demented, he escaped from the hospital and wandered into the country, where a detachment of chasseurs found him and handed him over to the military as a deserter. Despite his incoherent protests, which they considered guilty simulation, on September 9 Bombardier Bouret appeared before a rude improvised court martial such as are now not existent.

Without proof and without witnesses despite his vehement protestations, Bombardier Bouret was condemned to death for abandoning his post before the enemy and shot the same evening. Left to mourn the poor poilu were a young widow and child. His parents were brave honest peasants, strongly imbued with patriotism.

The grief of the widow and the old folks was tempered by the thought that the bombardier had fallen fighting bravely at his post. The townsfolk of Dijon, where the Bourets lived, knew the truth, but succeeded in hiding the awful story from the relatives of the victim.

Now after three years the dead poilu's name is rehabilitated and justice has made tardy amends for the wrong committed. When Bourets colonel heard of his fate he said: "It is impossible. I am sure of my men. None would have abandoned the post."

An inquiry which the colonel instituted has now cleared the dead man's name. A special decree has dealt severely with those responsible for the court martial and proclaimed Bouret's innocence. Mr. Painleve, Minister of War, has written to the widow, saying:

"I wish to express my deep grief, and that of the whole army, for the deplorable error which deprived you of your husband and made your child an orphan. The memory of Bombardier Bouret is cleansed of all reproach. Though I cannot repair the irreparable, the bearer of this letter will tell you how we will do everything to alleviate the situation in which the bereavement leaves you."

Mr. de Maizlere, who accompanied the officer representing Mr. Painleve, says: "I saw the widow, the old folk and the child. The old mother took from the wall over her bed a photograph painted in colours by an inexperienced hand. It was blurred with the tears it had often caused to well up in the eyes of those who loved to linger over it.

"'A deserter!' As if it were possible," she said. Simply turning to the child, she said:—'It was the Prussians who killed your daddy, do you hear? Ask these gentlemen. They know.'

"And in the desolation of the sad little home, filled with sobs, the sublime falsehood of the old French peasant rang out with the pride of pardon."

English Soccer Opens On Sept. 1

Several Changes Have Been Made In Two of the Three Competitions

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The fourth season of war football will open up in England as usual on Sept. 1st. Several changes are made in two of the three competitions by clubs withdrawing from soccer this year owing to the many difficulties in travelling.

The Lancashire Section of the English League will be the same as last season, but in the Midland Section three clubs—Bradford City, Leeds City and Huddersfield Town—have decided not to take part in competitive football, while Chesterfield Town is also expected to follow their decision.

The London Combination will be strictly confined to ten London clubs. Southampton, Portsmouth, Luton Town and Watford have all been forced out of the competition owing to the trouble and expense the London clubs had in travelling last season.

The clubs forming the three principal soccer competitions for the coming season are as follows:

Lancashire Section — Blackpool, Preston North End, Burnley, Oldham Athletic, Bury, Everton, Liverpool, Bolton Wanderers, Manchester United, Rochdale, Burslem Port Vale, Southport Central, Blackburn Rovers, Stockport County, Stoke and Manchester City.

Midland Section—Barnsley, Grimsby Town, Birmingham, Bradford, Hull City, Lincoln City, Chesterfield Town, Sheffield Wednesday, Rotherham County, Leicester Fosse, Notts Forest, Notts County and Sheffield United.

London Combinations—Chelsea, Arsenal, Millwall, West Ham United, Fulham, Tottenham, Hotspur, Brentford, Queen's Park Rangers, Crystal Palace and Clapton Orient.

THE SAFE way to send money by mail is by Dominion Express Money Order.

MORE FOOD FOR THE FRENCH

Plan to Triple People's Ration—May Seize Wine Crop.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—Deputy Thierry-Cazes yesterday addressed an urgent request to Maurice Violette, Minister of Subsistence, to increase to 500 grams instead of 300 the daily quantity of food to be allotted to the population. With two additional 200-gram allotments already provided for, this would make a total of 900.

The Deputy said that the majority of peasants lived in the open air and ate principally soup and bread, and they would regard it as injustice if they were not allowed to eat their fill of grain which they themselves raised.

Confiscation of the wine crop is contemplated by M. Violette as the result of complaints from growers and dealers that speculation by a few who buy up in advance is solely responsible for the prevailing high prices.

280 LIQUOR PLACES CLOSE.

Real Dry Zone Surrounds Troops in Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15.—Two hundred and sixty saloons and drinking places were closed voluntarily by their proprietors when representatives of the United States District Attorney's office began collecting evidence against liquor establishments situated within the half-mile dry zone surrounding military camps.

Included among the places closed were two breweries, the bars of virtually all the large hotels and restaurants, and dozens of downtown saloons.

Various units of troops stationed here awaiting entrainment to concentration camps brought the majority of saloons in the city within the area. A detachment of artillery is quartered temporarily in Convention Hall, only a few blocks from the heart of the hotel district.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL HALL.

Samuel Hall, one of Peterborough's oldest and best known citizens, died this morning at the family residence, 195 Rubidge street.

Mr. Hall has been ill for a long time, but has been up and about until yesterday, when he took a turn for the worse. He was born in Cavan County, Ireland, and came to Peterborough when a young man, fifty-one years ago, and has resided here ever since. In religion he was a Presbyterian; in politics, a staunch Conservative. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Margaret Hall, and two daughters, Annie and Sarah, at home.

The funeral, to the Little Lake Cemetery, will take place on Monday afternoon, at 3.30. A service will be held at the house at 3 o'clock.

ALFRED J. GADDYE.

Alfred John Gaddye died last evening at the family residence, 717 George street, after an illness of several months' duration.

Mr. Gaddye was born in England, eighty-three years ago, and came to Peterborough when a young man, where he has resided practically ever since. He was, by trade, a bricklayer; latterly, however, he took up farming in Otonabee. He was predeceased by his wife eight years ago. Mr. W. J. Outram, 198 Edinburgh street, is a nephew.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery, from the family residence.

BLINDPIGGER FINED $200 AND COSTS.

Two Peterborough Men Drunk at Millbrook, Fined $10.00 Each.

License Inspector Gooderich had two convictions last week. At Hoard's Station, in the township of Seymour, George Brady, who runs the store and postoffice, was fined $200 and costs for having liquor in other than his own residence. When the license inspector got off the train, Brady was making off with a consignment of liquor he had received, and hid it under a stump. He has been suspected for some time of running a "blind pig."

At Millbrook tw young Peterborough men were fined $10.00 and costs each for being drunk at a patriotic dance.—Cobourg Star.

Levels of Crossings To the Quaker Oats Will Be Altered

Mr. W. H. Denham applied to the Board of Works last night for permission to alter the levels of the sidings across Hunter street into the Quaker Oats property.

Ald. McIntyre moved a motion that his request be granted. "We shouldn't be small with these people," he remarked.

When the motion was finally patched up by the Board it read in the following effect: "That the grade at the bridge may be raised not in excess of two feet, and that the west siding be lowered not more than two feet below the present level, and that the surface of the street be graded as far west as Sheridan street; that the walks be rebuilt of wood on both sides of the street; that they be not less than six feet wide, and that they be rebuilt by the Company under the supervision of the City Engineer; that the Company assume the maintenance of that section of the street to the bridge until the permanent bridge is erected, and that the Company bear all the cost of the work.

Ald. Dobbin seconded the motion, which carried.

The eastern siding is twenty-five feet from the bridge and the raising of the grade two feet in that distance was not regarded too sharp an incline. Some of the Aldermen expected a double bump at the crossing as a result of the changes.

Ald. Weir, commenting on the motion, said it sounded rather drastic.

Ald. Smith—"They are the people who want the changes. As it is they are costing the city $200,000; they surely can pay for the cost of this work.

PEEL REGISTRAR HAS RESIGNED

Action Followed on Mr. Charters' Acceptance of Conservative Nomination.

TORONTO, August 18.—Hon. I. B. Lucas, Acting Premier, announced at the Parliament Buildings yesterday that the Provincial Government has received and accepted the resignation of Samuel Charters from the position of Registrar of Deeds for the County of Peel. Mr. Charters received the nomination as candidate for the Dominion House at the Conservative conference held at Brampton last Saturday.

Butter Was 1½ Oz. Per lb. Under Weight

One woman on the market this morning could scarcely dispose of her butter fast enough to keep up with the demand. Buyers clustered around her in an effort to take advantage of her comparatively reduced price of 45c a pound. One of the buyers on reaching home weighed the butter and found each print one and a half oz. under weight. It was then too late to return to the market, hence she called up the Examiner to warn other householders to be on their guard in future purchases.

"My scales are very accurate," this lady declared, "and there is no question of this butter being short weight. The woman could well afford to undersell the market price of 48c when she was giving only 14 1-2 ounces, instead of 16."

Many of the buyers were indignant at the prices to-day, but there is not much satisfaction derived from indignation.

CHINESE GIVE HUNS FIVE DAYS TO LEAVE

Declaration of War Makes No Mention of Pact With Allies.

PEKING, Aug. 14.— (Delayed) — China's declaration of war on Germany and Austria-Hungary, beginning at 10.00 a.m. to-day, and the other documents relating to the conflict do not mention the association of the Chinese Republic with the Entente powers. They indicate that Chinas action will be entirely independent.

The declaration of war created little excitement in Peking or in other North China cities, the long discussion of the question having discounted its effect.

The Netherlands Minister to China to-day took over the Austrian interests and received the arms of the Austrian Guard. The doors of the Deutsche Asiatische Bank have been sealed.

Chinese troops at Tien Tsin took over the Austrian concession and the German Bank and German barracks here without incident.

Regulations issued to-day by the Chinese Government permit the departure of Germans and Austrians within five days. Registration within ten days is required to permit Teutons to continue doing business if it does not affect Chinas welfare. Enemy subjects are forbidden to travel without permits. The regulations also provide for the internment of troublesome enemies.

Police Apparently Cleaning Up Youth Who Annoy Girls

The activities of the police this week appear to indicate a concerted drive against an element among the city's youth who have been making themselves objectionable to girls. It is interpreted as an evidence of Chief Thompson's directing his force to curb and curtail this practice, which has been noticeably developing and becoming more flagrant during the past summer. Four young men have appeared before Magistrate Dumble this week on charges involving girls.

Norman Bruce was charged with disorderly conduct, which proved too include his accosting girls and attempting to "see them home." On this technicality he was dismissed.

On a serious charge Leo Phelan was committed for trial.

This morning two more were bagged, Edgar Alcombrack and Max McClelland were held for vagrancy and generally interfering with, accosting and otherwise annoying girls on the street. They were remanded until Monday, and in the meantime were put through a third degree with Detective Newhall as inquisitor.

If this is a general action, and not merely a coincidence, the action of Chief Thompson will be generally applauded by every parent who has daughters and every citizen who demands that the streets be kept safe to girls. It has been asserted that since the war began the number of oglers on the street corners, the automobile scouts, and the amiable gentlemen who are anxious for the safety of girls on their way homeward has been increasing.

SLAVS PLAN BLOW TO THE TEUTONS

Petrograd, August 18.— Lieutenant General Korniloff, the Commander-in-Chief, has arrived here and had a long conference with Premier Kerensky.

Lieutenant-General Korniloff, the Commander-in-Chief, in an interview to-day, said that in consequence of the energetic measures which had been taken, the normal fighting capacity of the army had been considerably strengthened. He hoped for complete regeneration of the Russian forces.

The General predicted complete operations on a vast scale on the Roumanian front and also elsewhere, especially in the north, where he indicated there was a possibility of a combined land and sea action. He expressed the opinion that another winter campaign was inevitable.

Conscription Bill Is Ready For Governor-General To Sign

Amendment Provides That Attorney-General Must Approve Certain Convictions—Measure Has Been Through the House and Awaits Only Sanction of the Crown.

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—After over a week's absence the Military Service Bill reappeared in the Commons this afternoon with amendments appended by the Senate. For the most part these amendments are interpretative and unimportant. One only is of importance, namely, that which provides that no conviction on account of criminal jurisdiction for infringement of provisions of the Act shall be made without the approval and consent of the Attorney-General of the Dominion.

Why the Delay?

"What is the reason," asked W. E. Knowles, "why this measure has not come up before this? It is nine days since it left the Senate. Why the delay?"

"I was not aware," replied Sir Robert, "that there was any particular reason. Other business was engaging the attention of the House. In any case, there is no particular delay, because it has to be assented to by the Governor-General."

The first two amendments were carried without much discussion. On the third important amendment, John Sinclair thought the word "prosecution" should be substituted for the word "conviction." A man might be apprehended and held in jail, and might even have to go through the bother of prosection while waiting for the consent of the Attorney-General.

Sir Robert stated that it was important that in some cases a man might be immediately apprehended.

Some History.

"This provision reminds me very much of proceedings taken at the Macdonald by-election, during which men were arrested without warrants and after election allowed to go. It is the most extraordinary of all the features of this extraordinary bill.

"I don't know about that," replied Sir Robert, "the amendment is similar to a suggestion made by a member of the other side."

Mr. Murphy declared that it would be possible under the clause to arrest men all over the country and keep them in jail for an indefinite period.

D. D. Mackenzie declared that he had suggested something along the lines of the amendment. What he had proposed, however, was that no prosecution should be instituted without the consent of the Minister of Justice.

He did not for a moment suggest that a man should be taken to the stage of conviction before the Attorney-General should decide.

Reduced to Absurdity.

The thing had been reduced to an absurdity, said Mr. Knowles of Moose Jaw. It was desirable that people should be protected against vexatious proceedings. But this amendment permitted such vexatious proceedings up to the very point of conviction. The amendment was absolutely absurd.

"Put it the other way," suggested Mr. Benneett of Calgary. "Say that there shall be no trial."

The Prime Minister decided that the suggestion of Messrs. Mackenzie and Knowles, if put into effect, might lead to failure to apprehend. He did not think that any abuses would arise. It was not possible, under summary trial, to keep a man in jail for an indefinite period.

The amendment was carried without division, and Parliament has now finished with the measure.

It is now only for His Excellency the Governor-General to affix his signature.

After that, all the penalties provided for incitation against its provisions will immediately become effective.

38,000 American Soldiers In Next Force To France

First Representation of the National Guard—Sufficient Shipping Being Arranged to Carry Two Divisions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20. — Two army divisions, instead of one, comprising at least 38,000 men, probably will make up the first contingent of the National Guard to go to France.

Although no official confirmation was obtainable, there was evidence to-day the composite Forty-second division, whose orgnization recently was announced, will be accompanied abroad by the Twenty-sixth, made up of New England militiamen. No New England States are among the twenty-six States having representation in the composite division.

The commander of the Twenty-sixth is Major General Clarence Edwards, now acting as commander of the Department of the Northeast, and it is presumed he will go to Europe with the division. The Forty-second is commanded by Major General W. A. Mann.

A report was current to-day that sufficient shipping will be available for forwarding two divisions within the time fixed for the departure of the Forty-second, and that the Twenty-sixth had been selected to go because it comes from a compact area, and is composed, for the most part, of regiments of high rating, and representing States whose troops were left out of the composite division.

The Fory-second division is being mobilized at Mineola, L.I., under the new European standard, which requires that the strength of the individual infantry regiments be increased more than fifty per cent. Thus hundreds of men have been transferred to fill up the regiments selected to go.

The War Department announced to-day the final allotment of State troops among the national army cantonments and made public the list of colonels assigned to regimental commands in divisions of the National Army and the National Guard.

FRANCE MUST EAT WAR BREAD OR NONE

He Is Regarded as a "Comer" Despite His Early Pacifist Leanings.

(By Charles H. Grasty.)

PARIS—Throughout France the only bread one can now get is "war bread," darker in colour than ordinary white bread, the latter being absolutely prohibited. The war bread is palatable enough, and in fact corresponds closely to what we call brown bread or the English standard bread, that is, it is made from the whole meal rather than the fine white flour from which all the coarser part of the meal has been extracted.

Formerly the white flour ground by millers only contained from 60 to 70 per cent., of the wheat, the remainder, bran, etc., being set aside for the feeding of stock. But the regulations now provide that all millers must grind flour containing at least 85 per cent. of the wheat, and, furthermore, introduce into their flour a proportion of substitute meals such as barley meal, oatmeal, cornmeal, or even rice meal.

At present but a small quantity of such substitutes is being used, but it is understood that the authorities reserve the right to increase the proportion, according to local or national requirements.

I have been able to get one of the best recipes for preparing and baking baguettes or sticks, as the long French rolls are called:

Take 250 grams of yeast for five quarts of water, mix into a smooth paste without salt and allow to rise during an hour and a half. Then pour thereon 50 quarts of water and add 100 grams of yeast, (previously make this yeast affervesce in a little warm water.) Add 500 grams of salt and mix well with enough flour to make a consistent dough. Knead dough for twenty minutes by hand, (or ten minutes with a mechanical kneader,) leave it to rise for half an hour, then twist into rolls (baguettes) and put in oven twenty minutes afterward (heat of oven 180 to 200 degrees centigrade) until cooked.

Secretary Newton D. Baker has created a universally good impression among the army people, and in all circles abroad the talk about him is favourable. His association with Tom Johnson in Cleveland, his supposdd pacifism, and an unfortunate slip in a campaign speech combined to start a kind of hue and cry against him. Parenthetically that is a kind of American specialty. We laud a public man to the skies or send him hurtling in the other direction largely as our mood moves us. Over here I find much optimism about Baker. He is regarded as a "comer." His background of radicalism(his imagination, his intellectual quality, and his openmindedness line him up with men who are doing things on this side like Lloyd George and Painleve. Incidentally, I have heard from more than one sources that whatever Secretary Baker's bent of mind may have been with regard to war back in Cleveland, in Washington and in the new conditions he is a war man to the hilt.

One of the miseries of Paris is the telephone. They are not speeded up here on that particular item of life. Or perhaps it is the scarcity of help owing to the war. One blames everything that is out of joint on "la guerre." The telephone girls who sit where they are visible to all are gentle, dovelike creatures, gowned in fluffy materials, who speak French as on the seage at the Comedie Francaise, but they do not hustle. Therefore it is well, when caling up a number, to take your book or newspaper with you to put in the time of waiting.

I learn that there have been tremendous economies in both France and England in slaughtering cattle and marketing meats. It is estimated that the saving amounts to ten pounds in each hundred. It is mainly conserving and recovering fats. Among other economic methods, plates from which meats have been eaten contribute what is left on them in fats through a process by which the grease is drained off of the dish water and utilized for appropriate purposes.

Although the American regiments in France include a proprotion of recruits they have made a fine impression. They are as smart as the smartest. It my be said of them as it was by one of their officers of the Anzacs at Gallipoli: "They are in the pink of condition and don't give a damn for anybody." American youth, health, and pluck will make a soldier very quickly in these times These youngsters are so keen that they will almost round to by smelling the trenches in their sleep. Mind training was never so necessary as now. A few things must be learned and learned well. But remember, too, that the first gas attack at Hill 60 at Ypres was turned by green men from Canada, who thus saved Calais. It is almost as bad to have a lot of old-fashioned before-the-war notions in a soldier's head which have to be pulled, cut with a forceps, as it is to be innocent of all notions whatsoever. This latter State gives the drill master a fresh, clean and keen mind to work with.

The hotel where I am stopping is packed full, and other houses are doing fairly well. But the manager here tells me that it is a money-losing business. The same prices and the same service prevail as before the war. A hotel with a fine established clientele prefers loss to any lowering of standard and consequent risk of losing the good will of its public. The shops are pegging along; indeed, some are doing normal business, and better high-class shops are unable to get fine materials, and workmanship has deteriorated as well. As an example, khaki goods of excellent quality are unobtainable. The best haberdasher will not undertake to make shirts to order of that material. Khaki socks cannot be found in the stores. Landlords are easing strained conditions where necessary by concessions in rent. Some merchants are paying nothing; others half, and still others full rent. To give an instance, my tailor, who is located on the Boulevard Montmartre, enjoys a reduction of 50 per cent. in his rent. And, of course, he is stlill not happy, though tremendous busy.

In the belligerent countries it is not those who suffer, but those who are comparatively safe and comfortable who make a row over the war. The indignant storekeeper in London, who has never been anywhere near being bombed from the sky, but who shouts for sanctuary for London at all costs, is a type of the element which constitutes the real source of danger in this war. The knowledge of this general condition which proceeds out of the depths of human nature centres attention on civilian Germany. The pinch in that country is more severe than there is opportunity to find out, and students of war conditions are looking for an eruption any time in spite of the iron discipline which so far has held Germany as in a vise.

Paris is at its prettiest. The yellow of decadence is just beginning to streak the horse chestnuts in the Champs Elysees, but there is still the freshness of Spring. To stand at Cleopatra's Needle, in the centre of the Place de la Concorde, and turn toward the four points of the compass ,one after another, is to renew oneßs vows of loyalty to the allied cause. It is the most beautiful point of view in the world, the place itself, with its statues to the French provincial capitals being one of the finest in the world. To the south, across the Seine, is the Chamber of Deputies; to the North, the arcades of the Rue de Rivoli and the Rue Royale, ending in the noble facade of the Madeleine, to the west the Champs Elysees, leading up to the Arc de Triomphe; to the east the storied Tuileries' gardens, terminating in the still more storied Louvre. The Boches in Paris! The very thought is a profanation.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Mike Chaplin

He walked up to Jack, struck a match and scrutinized him closely. His inspection was brief but Radnor felt as though he had never been looked over so thoroughly. The investigator was a small man, with a noticeably brown and wrinkled face. Now as he frowned in a puzzled way, his skin seemed to form in a hundred creases, and he seemed like a gnome.

"May I have a look at that gun of yours, stranger?" he asked.

"Certainly!" replied Radnor, with exaggerated politeness.

A second match light flung the outheld revolver into sharp relief, and for the first time Jack saw engraved upon it the initials "M.H."

One of the other men, phantom like among the trees, spoke at the same instant:

"What's that you're carrying—beside the gun?"

And another added quickly:

"Any one to vouch for you in the Valley?"

"I can only answer one question at a time," said Jack, who was becoming more at ease in the general madness of the adventure. "What I am carrying beside the revolver, which I should very much like to have back, by the bye, if you don't mind—oh, thanks!—is mountain laurel. Probably the best known man in the Valley will answer for me—Judge Denby—and see that you answer, too, if necessary," he added significantly. "Anything else that you would like to know gentlemen?"

"Nothing else at all," said the small leader, thoughtfully. "A date at Four Trail Crossing, Martin Hale's gun, mountain laurel, and—Judge Denby—" he paused just a second—are good enough for us!"

"Are you more of Heaton's men?" demanded Radnor.

"Not a chance," returned his last est challenger in an amused tone. "Don't you worry a mite, stranger: we're with you! Good night and good luck!"

They melted into the odorous darkness as noiselessly as they had appeared and Radnor put his hand to his head, wondering he had dreamed of them entirely.

Four Trail Crossing—Martin Hales—Martin Hale.

—these things seemed natural enough in combination. Mountain laurel, as he saw clearly enough now, was evidently the password for the night. But where did Judge Denby come in? What was his conection with this mysterious outlaw company?

With his head very full of conjectures that were but the baseless fabric of dreams after all, and irritated him by their absurdity and unreality, he tramped around a bend and came in sight of the Toll-gate House.

With his arms filled with the dawn-pink blooms set in the darkness of their glossy leaves—and they were still lovely in spite of their adventures!—he went along the little rocky trail that led to the Toll Gate at Four Trail Crossing.

And against a beryl sky he saw Enid, standing crisply outlined with a big, splendidly proportioned form bending before her. Martin Hale was kissing her hands, first one and then the other.

For one moment, Jack thought of hurling him into the gorge below; then of hurling his trophies in the same direction. But something harder in him sent him into the Toll-gate House; just, in fact, as Enid entered by another door.

He did not even look at her, but walked straight to Polly Mason.

"I'm afraid," he said, in that gentle, courteous way, that was so new to her and so seductive, "that you have too many of these as it is, and—they are rather tired-looking, aren't they? But they've had quite a bit of a trip. You see, I went to Gray Crag this afternoon and found these, and I thought perhaps—wilted as they are—that you would accept these few extra ones—just as a very great favour to a stranger."

CHAPTER VIII.

ENID IS LEFT BEHIND.

Ladies, like variegated Tulips, show;
'Tis to their Changes half their charms we owe.....

—Alexander Pope.

"Are you ready to go home now?" Jack asked formally, turning at last toward Enid.

Her small face was colorless and her golden eyes were flames. A thing of fire she seemed; she almost burned him with the look of her.

"No," she answered in a level tone. "I do not expect to be ready for some time."

Jack Radnor stood and looked at her. Polly and her father had moved away, and were talking together in low tones.

"I quite understand your willingness to stay in this charming place," said Jack, with fiendish politeness—fiendish because neither of the others was listening, and he knew it. "But——"

She interrupted him with a blazing look even more golden.

"I've noticed that you find it charming!" she snapped.

Jack raised his eyebrows, smiling slightly.

"You have the advantage of me there," he said. "I personally have been here such a very short time that, of course, I am no real judge."

"One can judge some things very quickly!" she flared at him, detesting herself for feeling sick and shaky all over as she spoke.

"Yes," Radnor said quietly. "I've noticed that. But what I'm trying to get at at present is this: why should you spend so much time here now, when it is so entirely easy to come back whenever you like?"

"I can't walk all the way," she remarked, and turned her head away.

Jack Radnor was frankly bewildered.

"But your horse—" he began.

"Martin Hale has him!" she said sharply, and fell again silent.

"Martin Hale?"

Jack stared at the back of her yellow head blankly, then he said in rather a low, restrained tone:

"What happened?"

Silence.

"Where has Martin Hale gone with your horse?" he went on.

"I can't tell you."

"You will have to!"

"I won't!"

Radnor thought rapidly. If Enid had indeed been idiot enough to lend Hale her horse for some nefarious and secret doings the question resolved itself into something close to simplicity.

"Then you will have to go back on my mount, postilion-wise," he said, without attempting to argue.

Enid turned upon him and he nearly recoiled before the fury of her eyes.

"I wouldn't ride postilion-wise with you—to Heaven!" she declared; and there was no doubt that she meant it.

Mason and his daughter approached at this point.

"If you want to go back to Warm Sulphur Springs, you will have to go alone!" proceeded Enid.

Again Jack thought. There were two bands of fairly unceremonious men upon the range that night. He himself had encountered them. Could he take the chance of putting Enid's saddle upon Champion, and trusting her alone down those dark and mysterious ways?

Unexpectedly the old Toll Keeper came to his rescue.

"What's the trouble, sir, if I may ask."

"The lady has lost her horse," said Jack, too angry to be diplomatic.

"Lost her——" Richard Mason's expression was so astounded that Jack exonerated him from any complicity in whatever was on foot. It made him strangely enough, the more enraged against his fiancee.

"The problem is simply of getting her to the Valley," he went on.

"There isn't any way by which I'll go to the Valley!" said Enid, with her eyes flashing.

The Masons were people of few words and rapid understandings:

"Why don't you leave her here with us, sir" he said.

And Polly came quickly to Enid, and put her arm around her waist.

Jack's eyes searched the older man's deeply.

"It's all right, sir," Mason said, with a smile that would have reassured anyone. "We will look after her, Polly and I."

Radnor drew a deep breath.

After all, he had to trust them; there was no other way that he could see. And surely Enid would be safe here, with an old man of Mason's sterling type, and a girl like Polly.

"All right," he said briefly. "Thanks. I won't be long." He swung about and looked at Enid.

"I'm going," he said casually.

Enid did not even look around.

"Good-night," she said, and he could not see that her face was working inexplicably. "I suppose I'll see you in the morning, some time?"

Radnor laughed, not particularly pleasantly.

"You'll see me to-night," he said. "I'm merely going down to the hotel to set your mother's mind at rest, and to get you another horse. It ought not to take me more than two or three hours. You can't get rid of me as easily as all that—not to-night, at least. To-morrow you may do just what you like. But I'm going to get you a horse first—and believe me, you won't be able to give this one away so easily as you did the other."

He turned to their hosts, shook Mason's hand hard, and bowed low over Polly's. In another minute he had gone.

"Say," said the Toll Keeper, gazing after him in a way that was almost affectionate, "I could love that boy!"

But neither Polly nor Enid said anything at all.

The door closed on Jack, and no one spoke. A sound in the stable sent old Mason out to help. Still no words in the Toll-gate House. The two girls stood motionless, without facing each other, without addressing each other.

A rattle and rush of hoofs, a shout of farewell from the Toll Keeper; then came his boisterous entrance, which somehow seemed to break a sort of spell.

Jack Radnor was galloping down the trail when Enid, suddenly transformed into a young fury, confronted the father and daughter in the centre of the room.

For the time she appeared to have gone mad and to have completely forgotten where she was and who were listening to what she said.

It was of Jack that she spoke; savage, eternally feminine sentences, panted, gasped, broken by heaving pauses more eloquent than any of the most fluent words. And now and again tears rained down her white face—tears that instinctively one knew must burn and scar her as they fell.

"And he said that he loved me!" she breathed, very low—and then her voice rose to a harsh and strident key. "Love me! And he could leave me like this! He could talk as though I were something to be carried about—a copy of a woman, just as he is a copy of a man!" She turned furiously upon Polly, who, being of frailer fiber, in spite of her appearance, shrank towards her father. "He gave you m, flowers!" she gasped, with that strange yellow blaze in her eyes. "Mine do you hear? That I wanted! He gave them to you! He——"

The mountain girl was frankly terrified, but the old man seemed to sense some emotion that was not unfamiliar. He put his daughter aside with a big, gentle hand, and went up to the half-crazed girl.

"What's it all about?" he asked in the soft, great rumbling tones that bring such rest to women. "You love him, and you think that he doesn't love you? Is that it?"

"Love me!" shrilled Enid. "He does not know how to love—it isn't in him. He—oh,—" She seemed to stretch upward like a thin, gleaming flame, until one wondered whether she were not a living column of fire. "I hate him! I hate him!" she cried desperately. "I hate him!—I hate him!"

She dropped in a heap on the floor.

"Poor little kid!" said the Toll-keeper gently, looking down at her.

"She doesn't appreciate him!" said his daughter hotly. But she was on her knees beside the unconscious girl, and was loosening her high white riding stock, even as she spoke.

It was an odd paradox that the very faults which Enid found with Jack, recommended him the more strongly to Polly. The mistake which Enid had made in believing him a bloodless sort of automaton, was in time to bring Polly into risks which neither of them were likely to take into account—for the time being at all events.

Enid moved, breathed deeply, opened her great yellow eyes, and stared wonderingly at the faces of the Toll Keeper, and his daughter.

At this moment, a rap sounded on the door, and without waiting for a response a large red-and-white-haired and sloppy-looking woman of the hills entered. She was dressed in a sort of sordid and squalid finery that did not particularly harmonize with her fat, rather vacant yellowish face and supermature figure.

"Dear, dear! What's wrong here?" she exclaimed in a sort of heavy consternation, lumbering forward.

Polly scowled and retreated. She detested the Widow Short, their nearest neighbor. She was convinced that she had designs on her father, and she knew that Mrs. Short was one of the most shiftless of female mortals. But widows and widowers have a way of drifting together in the high ranges. Polly foresaw but dreaded the day when Mrs. Short and her slovenly efforts towards finery and her jackadaisical Southern ways, should enter the Toll-gate House as its mistress.

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

FAST TRAINS SCOOP UP WATER WITHOUT STOP

Possible to Lift 2,000 to 3,000 Gallons in About Fifteen Seconds, Depending on Speed.

Cecil J. Allen, chief of the civil engineers' department, supplies in the "Great Eastern Railway Magazine" some interesting facts on "the picking up of water" by trains at full speed on long journeys. Locomotives, he says, are exceeding bibulous creatures. The engines of one large British railway alone consume some 12,500,000 gallons of water per annum

An express engine under normal conditions of running, will consume from thirty to thirty-five gallons of water for every mile covered, taking a general average. On such a journey as that made by the Cornish Riviera limited express, of the Great Western railway, from London to Plymouth, 225 3-4 miles — the longest daily nonstop run in the world—some four tons of coal are consumed against an average of no less than forty tons of water.

The troughs, Mr. Allen explains, have usually a length of just over a quarter of a mile and are laid perfectly level in the centre of the "four foot." Water is taken from them by means of a movable shovel shaped "scoop" under the tender, which is lowered into the trough as the train passes over it at full speed.

The sharp edge of the scoop cuts off, as it were, the "top layer" of the water, which is forced up into a large vertical pipe and delivered through a mushroom head or an elbow at the top of the tender int othe water tank. As soon as the water gauge on the tender indicates that the tank is full the scoop is raised again. According to the speed at which the train is travelling it is possible to lift from 2,000 to 3,000 gallons in about fifteen seconds.

WALLACHS ASK PROTECTION.

Reassert Their Roman Origin in an Address to Italy.

ROME, Aug. 17.—Wallachs residing in Southern Albania and Northern Epirus have sent an emphatic address to Italy strongly proclaiming their Roman origin and their desire to be kept under an Italian protectorate and expressing hope that their soldier brethren in Italy have forever broken the chains wherewith the Mussulmans first and Greeks afterward "attempted to destroy their Latin rationality."

The Wallachs declare that if they are not allowed to live in freedom under the "protection of the great mother Italy" they will fight until they are exterminated.

The Wallachs are descendants of Romans colonized in the Balkans by the first armies of ancient Rome which penetrated that region. One of their best known groups claims descent from Pompey's legionaries.

The remains were sent on to Pembroke for burial.

TONNAGE DECREASED DURING WAR.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 17.—The annual statement of the Mersey Docks and Harbour board shows the number of vessels which paid rates and harbour dues from July 1, 1916, to July 1, 1917, exclusive of government vessels, to be 16,747 representing 14,018,652 tons, a decrease of 1,995 vessels and 1,661,291 tons compared with the previous twelve months. The total tonnage entering and leaving the Mersey during the past year was 28,037,304 tons against 31,359,886 tons last year.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Clever Ruse

It Was Heads I Win, Tails You Lose

By WARREN MILLER

The first time I saw Daisy she was coming over her father's broad acres on a horse whose lope was very like a rocking chair. She was riding astraddle with divided skirts. No other woman on the ranches thereabout would ride in any other costume. Barker was riding beside her, and the two made a very handsome pair. The brim of his sombrero was flattened against his forehead by the wind, a lariat hung at his saddlebow, and his splendid figure was revealed by his costume—viz, flannel shirt and trousers, with boots to his knee.

Daisy had gone out from the east with her father, who became a sheep raiser, and she had become fascinated with ranch life. Unfortunately she had conceived a romantic idea of the genus cowboy, and, Barker being physically a perfect type, she had persuaded herself, or, rather, he had persuaded her, that he was just the man for her. I say "unfortunately" because he was not an educated man and in every way beneath her. There were other features about him to render him undesirable which will appear presently.

The couple passed me, all of us saluting, though they were unknown to me, and I rode on to the ranch house, where I had business with John Nolan with reference to a large purchase of wool. While dickering with him on his veranda, up the roadway came the couple I had met and alighted at the foot of the steps. Throwing their bridle reins over a post, they walked up on to the veranda. Then I learned that Daisy was Nolan's daughter.

As the pair passed into the house I noticed a cloud flit over the face of the girl's father. I knew by Barker's bearing toward her that he was in love with her, and I judged that his attentions were not relished by Nolan. But he said nothing to me then, and we went on with our dickering. When I arose to go he said:

"There's no place about here in which you will be comfortable except my house. Send for your traps."

I accepted the invitation, especially as I was pleased at being under the same roof with Miss Daisy. I knew she had a lover, but my attraction for her did not then go so far as to intend to come between them. I merely liked the idea of being near her during my stay.

But I stayed a good while, and it was not very long before she and I each made a discovery. I discovered that I wanted her, and she discovered that she didn't want Barker. Meanwhile I found out something else—that he had become frightfully jealous of me and if I took her away from him he would probably kill me. At first he and I spoke to each other when we met either on the ranch or elsewhere. Then he only noticed me at the Nolan house.

I thought it best after awhile to remove to the (so called) hotel, a mile from Nolan's. If anything happened between Barker and myself I preferred that it should not happen under Nolan's roof. So one day I removed my luggage to my new quarters.

One morning I was sitting on the porch of the hotel smoking a brier wood pipe. Barker came out of the barroom, where he had been drinking, and took a seat about thirty feet from me. I didn't know he was there till turning my head I saw him out of the corner of my eye sighting his revolver at me.

Naturally I started.

"Hold on there," said Barker. "Your pipe makes a fine target. We don't allow people to smoke such expensive pipes out here."

The words were scarcely out of his mouth when I felt a faint tick on the bowl of the pipe, heard the crack of a gun and knew that a bullet had passed through the pipe.

"Hold up!" he growled as I was about to rise. "Your pipe won't draw with a hole in it, but it's still a mighty good target."

I snatched a look at him. He was evidently under the influence of liquor. I felt sure that if I didn't let him shoot at my pipe he would shoot at me and nerved myself to stand another shot. Indeed, this was all I could do, for I was unarmed. But a cold chill ran down my back and a cold sweat stood out all over me. Nevertheless I put up a pretty good front. I sat with comparative composure, occasionally letting a faint cloud of tobacco smoke escape from between my lips, but not daring to move a hairbreadth for fear of interfering with the man's aim.

Several persons from inside the hotel having heard a shot, came out to discover who had been killed. They arrived just in time to see the second shot and the top of the bowl of my pipe cut off. They at once took in the situation, and, seeing me coolly puffing, not knowing my internal condition, they cried out, "Good pluck, stranger!" "Steady nerve!" "He ain't no tenderfoot!" and such like compliments.

Presently a third shot shattered what was left of the bowl of my pipe, and only the stem remained in my mouth. Whether my nerve made Barker half ashamed of himself or that he was headed off by the admiration of the others I don't know, but he desisted from further shooting. I fancy, however, he was satisfied with what he had doubtless intended for a warning that if I took Daisy Nolan away from him I would have to face sure death. The witnesses urged me to go in and have something, but I declined, saying that I was anxious for a smoke and would go upstairs for another pipe. The truth is I wanted a chance to go where I could, unobserved, give way to my feelings for a few moments, they having been controlled only by a most desperate effort.

When I was alone I staggered to the bed, fell on it and for a few minutes trembled like a leaf. But when I began to recover I started to get mad at the same time. Men will fight more desperately for a woman than for any other cause, and it occurred to me that, Daisy being the bone of contention, if she preferred me either Barker or I must die. I spent some time considering what to do, then went to the ranch, intending to offer myself to Daisy. If she refused me I would leave the field at once to all suitors. If she accepted me I would have it out with Barker.

I found Miss Daisy very much excited. She had heard of Barker's shooting escapade and had turned bitterly against him. I told her that I wanted her and if she wanted me I was willing to settle the matter between Barker and myself. Her reply was all I could have asked for, but she positively forbade my coming into collision with my rival. I told her frankly that I believed he would kill me if I married her and that the matter had better be settled before the wedding. Being a woman, she wished to get round the matter by subterfuge and for the time being would consent to nothing definite.

Daisy was very fond of an old rancher called Jake Huchins. To her he was "Uncle Jake." A day or two after Barker's shooting, as I was riding over the country on horseback, Huchins came up behind me and ambled alongside of me.

"I hearn about the shootin' o' your pipe outen your mouth," he said. "Little Daisy was tellin' me about it."

"Oh, it was Miss Nolan who told you, was it?"

"Yes. And, what's more, she asked me to suggest some way o' settlin' the matter without blood spillin'."

"That's impossible," said I.

"So I thort at fust, but arter awhile I thort of a plan. Barker's mighty proud o' his shootin', and he's pretty much made up his mind that he's lost Daisy. I reckon he'd agree to settle the matter by a trial o' skill between him and you."

"I'm no shot. Such a contest would give Miss Daisy to him, and she doesn't want him."

"Not so fast. You don't need to be much o' a shot. Could you hit a hen's egg at twenty feet?"

"I might hit one, perhaps, in two or three shots."

"Well, I give Daisy my plan, and she's decided to try it. Here's a note for you, and here's a note for Barker. Whichever hits a hen's egg with a forty-two the most outen five shots she'll marry."

He handed me a note to that effect from Daisy and showed me another he was commissioned to deliver to Barker.

"Do you consent?" he added, drawing rein.

"Yes," I said. "I consent to anything Daisy desires."

Without waiting for more he turned about and rode back in the direction whence he came.

The next day Uncle Jake informed me that Barker had gladly agreed to the terms.

On the appointed day I made my appearance at the barn, wondering what was to be the upshot of this singular contest. I found an egg suspended over a basket by a fine thread. I won the toss and with it the right to fire five consecutive shots at the eggs. I missed the first and the fourth, but smashed the eggs on the second, third and fifth. For my life I could not see why I had not lost. It would be nothing for Barker to hit the eggs every time.

A new egg was attached to the thread for him to shoot at, and, whipping out his revolver, he fired with apparent carelessness. He was surprised to see the egg oscillate violently, but the shell was not broken. The next time he fired he took careful aim, but with no better success. He was thunderstruck. Since I had hit the egg three times he could now only tie me.

Barker aimed long and carefully at the center and sent the egg bobbing, but still the shell was unbroken. Flinging his revolver on the barn floor, he strode away.

I knew that Barker had been tricked, but could not conceive how. It appeared to me that nothing could be more fair than the trial. I asked Uncle Jake how he had managed to let me, a poor shot, beat the best shot in the territory. He would not tell me how it was done.

Barker was never seen there again. Daisy had induced him to sign a promise that if I beat him he would leave the field clear for me.

I married Daisy and took her east with me. She said she had had enough of the wild west and had no further use for cowboys, not considering them the romantic creatures she had thought them when she first went to the country. She learned the secret of the shooting match from Uncle Jake the day we were married and told it to me on our wedding journey. The meat had been taken from the egg Barker shot at, and the featherweight shell had been moved aside each time by the wind of the ball. To hit it was impossible.

Uncle Jake had learned the trick from a prestidigitator who had passed through the locality with a traveling circus.

Military Watches.

The Jews, like the Greeks and Romans, divided the night into military watches instead of hours. Each watch represented the period for which sentinels or pickets remained on duty. These watches were from sunset to 10 p. m., from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m. and from 2 a. m. to sunrise. Under Roman supremacy a fourth watch was added, the first terminating at 9 p. m., the second at midnight, the third at 3 a. m. and the last at 6 a. m.

His Hard Luck.

A small boy whose record for deportment at school had always stood at 100 came home one day recently with his standing reduced to 98.

"What have you been doing, my son?" asked his doting mother.

"Been doing?" replied the young hopeful. "Been doing just as I have been doing all along, only the teacher caught me this time." — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Where Is the Profit?

"I understand they sold their house for $3,000 more than they paid for it."

"How lucky!"

"Lucky nothing! After they'd sold it they discovered that they've got to pay $2,000 more than they received for their house for another home to live in."

Stomach Cramps COLIC

These are very painful and their attacks are often sudden, and sometimes fatal. The principal seat is in the stomach and bowels, producing severe twisting, cramping pain, and often accompanied by vomiting. If you are troubled in this way, there is only one remedy to cure you, and that one is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has a record of cures extending over 72 years, and we have yet to hear of a case where it has failed to either relieve or cure.

Beware of imitations and substitutes sold by unscrupulous dealers for the sake of greater profits, as these no-name, no-reputation, worthless preparations may prove dangerous to your health.

Mrs. H. Miller, 735 Mark St., Fort William, Ont., writes: "Last summer my husband came home from work, and could hardly straighten up for cramps. The first thing I gave him was a dose of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and I hadn't repeated it very long until he was all right again. It is the only remedy I give my children in the summer for cholera or cramps in the stomach. I have never been without it in the house for the last two or three years."

IT'S COMING

EXAMINER AND MERCHANTS

Great DOLLAR DAY
MONEY SAVING EVENT
Will soon be here

RATIFIED by the enthusiasm of the people over the previous Dollar Days in Peterboro, and urged by the people from outside who were unable to attend the last one owing to bad roads, the Examiner is again co-operating with the Merchants in featuring a Mid-summer Dollar Day.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 22

The date selected should be the most suitable of all the summer season, for a record crowd to attend from outside points. There's everything to come for, and only regrets if you don't. There's a company of hustling merchants preparing a feast unequalled in the history of the city. In any line of goods you want, you will find your Dollar has a buying power you would have thought impossible. As Dollar Day selling is just for one day, the merchants in order to add zest to the excitement, make their offerings look reckless, but it is because they have entered into the spirit of the thing, and they are bound to do their part at considerable loss.

Estimate the NUMBER of these Blanks that will be filled in and Dropped into the Ballot Box at the Examiner Office by 7 p. m. on DOLLAR DAY.

As a guide in estimating the probable number of blanks that will be used, the three previous Dollar Day results may be studied. On the first one, March 12, 1914, with good weather and roads, there were 16,000 blanks dropped into the box at the Examiner Office. On the next Dollar Day, in 1915, with bad weather and impassable roads, the result showed only 10,807 estimate blanks put in the box. On the last summer Dollar Day, held in August, 1916, when holiday season affected the crowd, there were 7,054 blanks dropped in the box. With these figures as a guide an intelligent estimate can be made if the weather and season are taken into consideration.

The Dollar Day crowd is the happiest gathering that meets in Peterboro in the year.

Joy in Trying.

Do not allow yourself to just drift along through life. Set before you an aim, some real purpose. Cultivate hope and ambition to accomplish something. Do not be contented to let things happen; make things happen. Whatever your business or occupation aim to excel in it. Financial gain is not all one gets from labor well performed. Your character is elevated and your mind is enlarged, and the satisfaction in having done well is the most real joy. Don't be afraid to set your aim high. Gild it with your highest ideals. Let the hope of its attainment nerve your every act. Turn incidents and circumstances toward the attainment of your aim. If you have no aim you reach nowhere. A life without a purpose is a dreary thing, without real joy. Suppose you fail to reach the heights you have set as your standard; you will have gone higher than if you had not striven. You will be more useful, of more worth, than if you had not tried.

An Expert In Motives.

Cousin Henry is an expert in motives. If you were reading off a list of names and overlooked Henry he would understand. He would know exactly the motive that prompted you to do it. If you don't think to introduce him to the man who is with you he can see through it. He may have to go back four or five years, but he will make a complete case against you. In less than an hour he will know what your motive was. Right now he is angry because his daughter was not selected as valedictorian of her class. You may think that the other girl deserved to be selected, but you don't know all that Henry knows. It is a long story, but he is willing to tell it to you, and after hearing it you will understand the motive—you will understand that it is a case of spite work. —Claude Callan in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

How David Garrick Made His Fortune.

If David Garrick had had no more than his salary as an actor he would have had little to leave at his death. He made his fortune as joint proprietor, and for a time as sole proprietor, of Drury Lane theater, so that the amount set down to himself as salary was practically nominal. When he retired from the stage in 1776 he sold half his share in the theater for £35,000. He was probably the only actor who consistently made Shakespeare pay, and, like Shakespeare, he was actor, author and proprietor.

It may be recalled that Garrick, who had no enemies outside his own profession, was the grandson of a Frenchman exiled at the revocation of the edict of Nantes and that his father was a captain in the army.—London Standard.

Well Balanced Diet.

One of the most common faults of the diet is the eating of too much protein foods. In excess this is hard for the body to excrete and is likely to decompose in the intestines with the formation of poisonous waste products.

Green vegetables and raw fruit are important elements of the diet. There is little energy in these foods, but they supply mineral salts which the body needs and curious substances called vitamins, which are easily destroyed by cooking.

One food expert has suggested a rule for securing a well balanced diet. It is: An ordinary family should spend about as much for milk, vegetables and fruits as for meats, fish and eggs and as much for milk and eggs as for meat and fish.

Follies of Science.

The history of science has seven problems which men in all ages more or less have tried to solve, but which have finally been given up by all. Today they are called follies.

The usual list comprises the following: First, squaring the circle; second, duplication of the cube; third, trisection of an angle; fourth, perpetual motion; fifth, transmutation of metals; sixth, fixation of mercury; seventh, elixir of life. Some lists put the philosopher's stone for the last three and then add astrology and magic to make the seven.

Too Much For Him.

"I thought he was going to marry that girl?"

"Well, he did think of it. But it seems when he called the other night she threw him down."

"Well, if she's as good as that at wrestling I don't blame him for quitting."

Not That Bill.

"I can't tell a canvasback duck from a barnyard specimen."

"Experts say you can tell by the bill."

"How so? The bill for one is always as high as the bill for the other. That's what I'm kicking about."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WOMEN AND GOLF.

Some Advice to Those Just Starting to Learn the Game.

"The grown woman who wishes to start playing golf should immediately put herself into the hands of a good professional teacher. It is far better to go to some one whose business it is to teach and who has had experience along that line than to heed the instructions of well meaning friends," according to "Golf For Women, by a Woman Golfer," quoted in the Christian Science Monitor.

"There are two sides to teaching golf—one, the ability to demonstrate clearly what should be done and the other the ability to see the pupil's faults and to correct them. * * * Once having chosen an instructor the pupil should put herself entirely under his tutelage and obey his behests as well as in her ilks.

"She should not dispute with him at every point and, above all, should never say or think 'I can't,' but, on the other hand, she should not hesitate to ask any question that comes to her. * * * She should know the 'reason why' for every move she makes, and no false shame at displaying ignorance should prevent her from asking even what may seem a foolish question.

"When a woman engages the services of a professional teacher her whole * * * attention should be given to finding out everything she can in the time at her disposal. If she will do this assiduously and will practice between lessons what she has learned she will soon become well grounded in the rudiments of the game. * * * Golf is a game that requires a great deal of practice at all stages, even when one ranks as a really good player. * * *

"If one learns to stand, to hold her club, to make her swing and to time her stroke correctly she will find that he has achieved good form without being aware of it, but no one can obtain 'good form' by trying to cultivate it for its own sake." * * *

Nails and Screws.

A nail not driven entirely in and which has become so rusted that it cannot be withdrawn without breaking a hammer handle will come out easily if it is struck a smart blow first. The same holds true with a screw. If it will not turn out try turning it in first. These suggestions may not always work, but many times the trouble may be overcome by their use.—Popular Science Monthly.

Short Sermons.

Bishop Sanford Olmsted of Denver is noted for the brevity of his sermons. Congratulated at a tea on his happy quality of being brief, Bishop Olmsted smiled and said:

"One of my first pulpit discoveries was that you can't make a sermon immortal by making it everlasting."

Always the Same.

"You see little apples and big apples, sour oranges and juicy oranges."

"What are you driving at?"

"The old reliable banana comes as near being standardized as any fruit nature has attempted."

TROOPS IN CAMP.

Lines by Which They Are Protected From the Enemy.

"Security" has the same meaning in the military world as elsewhere. We properly think of the security of our persons, our property, our families, in connection with the term. In the military world the family, or community, being so much larger, the word "security" acquires additional dignity.

A body of troops in camp is protected (made secure) by the use of groups placed between the enemy and the camp. We were told by a bee expert in Arizona that a limited number of bees remained in the vicinity of the hive. They were quick to observe and resist (the two great duties of an out post) any intruder.

We should know the names of these groups. Farthest away is the line that sees and reports what it sees, but can offer only a limited resistance. This is called the "line of observation" or the "line of outguards." In rear of the line of outguards we have larger groups placed at greater distances. These are called "supports." This is the line that fights. This is the line that makes all preparations for fighting (or resisting). It is called the "line of supports" or the "line of resistance." We have one farther and last line of groups, which is still larger and occupies still greater distances than the two we have just discussed. This is the safety valve and is called the "reserve," or the "line of reserves."—From "The Plattsburg Manual."

A Long Walk.

In 1890-1 an American woman walked from San Francisco to Franklin square, New York city. With two male companions and two dogs she set out on Aug. 27, 1890; she took the ferryboat from San Francisco to Oakland, but walked all the rest of the long and weary way.

Handy When There's a Fire.

A siphon of soda is an excellent fire extinguisher as the carbonic acid gas in the soda water helps to stifle the flames. The siphon can be tilted, and the fluid will carry to a considerable height, such as the top of a blazing curtain.

British Sea Planes Make A Raid

ITALIAN OFFENSIVE ON A LARGE SCALE

FIERCE BATTLE IS RAGING ANEW ON VERDUN FRONT

French Official Report States Big Fight Is On--Italian Offensive Resumed on Wide Front and General Cadorna's Forces Are Making Fine Progress ---British Naval Airmen Make Successful Raids On German Position.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, August 20.—A new and terrific battle was reaching a climax to-day around the bloody ground near Verdun.

To-day's official statement declared the fighting had "developed in our advantage."

The conflict was over a front of twelve miles, extending from Avocourt Wood to Bezonvaux. For week now guns on both sides in the Verdun sector have been violently active. The roar approached drumfire yesterday, and the infantry came into action immediately afterwards. Front despatches to-day told of desperate fighting in these clashes.

"On both banks of the Meuse, the French this morning attacked magnificently," the official statement asserted. "A new battle of Verdun, extending over a front of twelve miles from Avocourt Wood to north of Bezonvaux Wood is developing to the advantage of the French.

"Numerous prisoners have already been taken. The bravery exhibited by the French troops is incomparable."

The War Office also detailed a violent continuation of the artillery duel in Belgium. In the Champagne sector the French efficaciously bombarded German positions and took many prisoners in raids. Around Hadonvillers a German raid was repulsed.

In Upper Alsace the statement reported considerable artillery activity.

LONDON ,August 20.—Allies will confer before reply is made to the Vatican on Pope Benedict's peace plan. Lord Cecil, Minister of Blockade, made this announcement in the House of Commons to-day.

LONDON, August 20. — "Many tons" of bombs were dropped on the Ghent railway station and sidings, Thourout station and dump, and the Bruges docks last night by British sea planes, an Admiralty statement announced to-day. Yesterday morning the Germans attacked the aerodrome at Snellinghen and in the ensuing battle one enemy machine was downed. All British machines were uninjured.

ROME, August 20.—Italy is to-day continuing a determined offensive against the Austrians' lines from the Adriatic to the Alps. Fighting of great magnitude is in progress. The blow is probably the hardest the Italians have yet struck, and early reports tell of initial successes gained by General Cadorna's troops.

(By Wm. Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, August 20. — Not finding antagonists in the air for battle to-day, British airmen began on German infantry.

Scores of these encounters were reported. British fliers would swoop along barely skimming the ground, seeking out and spraying fire on cleverly placed German machine guns and their crews. Again, they would scurry along just back of the German trenches, backing up with lines of fire the frontal assaults of British infantrymen.

The Germans are apparently following out a well-defined policy in averting battle in the air. They are plainly seeking to conserve all their aerial forces reserving this branch of warfare for night attacks. Every night now sees strong German raids from the air. Early to-day while it was still dark, the Prussians bomber indiscriminately a number of points behind the British lines. As many as thirty planes were seen in one of these marauding excursions. Reports to-day showed that at least one hospital had been damaged by German bombs.

GUNNER W. A. TOMS, 508 Chamberlen street, who is officially reported killed in action.

THIS WEEK TO SEE A SHOW DOWN IN OTTAWA CRISIS

Sir Robert Borden's Negotiations For Union Not Yet Ended Although Western Liberal Convention Was a Severe Blow

ROGERS TO RESIGN?

OTTAWA, Aug. 20.—It is expected that the coming week will see a show down in the political situation at Ottawa. The present condition of affairs cannot continue much longer without developments unless the situation is to end in an impossible impasse. Though union government received a severe blow at the Western Liberals' convention it is known that negotiations looking to this end have not ceased. In fact it is stated in authoritative circles that Sir Robert's new slate is almost ready. Whether it will be announced before or after prorogations remains to be seen. In the West Sir Robert is carrying on his negotiations through T. A. Crerar, head of the Grain Growers' Grain Company. Sir Clifford Sifton who has been closely in touch with the Prime Minister ever since the Western convention occurred, has again gone west and will no doubt cary on the campaign for union.

In Ontario the negotiations are of an uncertain nature. J. M. Godfrey and Arthur Hawkes have been pretty continuously at Ottawa for the past week or so and have conferred with government members.

It is understood, however, that all hope of securing N. W. Rowell, the Liberal leader of Ontario, as a member for the cabinet, has been finally abandoned.

There are persistent rumours to-day that within the next week Hon. Robt. Rogers will be compelled to quit the cabinet.

BOB ROGERS DROPS OUT

Minister of Public Works Has Resigned

OTTAWA, Aug. 20.— Hon. Robert Rogers has resigned as Minister of Public Works for Canada.

French On Offensive On A Wide Front

BERLIN, via London, Aug. 20.—Occupation of Talone ridge by French troops, without fighting, was admitted in to-day's official statement. A violent French assault is in progress over a front of more than fourteen miles, according to the War Office.

BOURASSA ON THE POPE'S PEACE OFFER

MONTREAL, August 20.—Henri Bourassa writing in "Le Devoir" discusses the papal peace note in some detail. Strongly defending the proposals, Mr. Bourasso says that "The enemies of the Pope and of humanity violently interested in prolonging the massacre, seize the opportunity to misrepresent the thought and words of the Sovereign Pontiff and so to trick their dupes and victims that they will not see the real scope of the counsel of salvation which comes from so high an authority."

"If they refuse to listen to the voice of reason and humanity, all that remains of the living force in the nations will be to turn against them with the fury of hatred and despair. If they reject the just and durable peace which the Pope offers the war will end by the bloodiest and most avenging of revolutions."

LIEUT. GRANT MOWAT AND GUNNER W.A. TOMS ARE KILLED IN ACTION

Peterboro' Hard Hit By Casualty List---Lieut. Martin Dunsford Wounded and Three Former Members of the 93rd Battalion Are in the List To-day--57th C. E. F. Detachment Leaving For Barriefield To-morrow--To-day's General Military News.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Lieut. Grant Mowat, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, and son of City School Inspector A. Mowat.

Gunner William Albert Toms, Canadian Artillery, 508 Chamberlen street.

WOUNDED.

Capt. Martin Dunsford, 18th Battalion, son of Mr. W. H. Dunsford, Bank of Commerce.

Pte. A. H. Downing, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Apsley.

Pte. W. J. Newham, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Selwyn.

Pte. H. A. Simpson, Canadian Infantry, Peterborough.

ILL.

Pte. C. Powers, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

LIEUT. GRANT MOWAT.

Deep grief will be caused in a very wide circle of friends by the news, which came from Ottawa this morning that Lieut. Grant Mowat, formerly of the 93rd Peterborough County Battalion and son of School Inspector A. Mowat has been killed in action. Lieut. Mowat went overseas with the 93rd battalion as Captain and second in command of C Company. After carrying on instructional work in England, Capt. Mowat reverted to the rank of Lieutenant and went to France as a subaltern, with a well known Eastern Ontario battalion. While no particulars have been received Lieut. Mowat undoubtedly met death in the gallant capture by the Canadians of Hill 70 near Lens last week. The official telegram stated that he was killed in action on August 15th.

Lieut. Mowat was a splendid young man with a most prominent career ahead of him as an educationalist. He was a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and of Queen's University. After leaving the latter institution he was principal of a school in the West, resigning to come home to join the battalion from his home county. He was most popular with officers and men of the 93rd Battalion, and with citizens of Peterborough, generally. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Mowat, at present visiting in Newcastle, and by two sisters, Misses Elsie and Betty, and one brother, William, residing at home.

The bereaved family will have the sympathy of the community in their loss.

GUNNER W. A. TOMS.

Mrs. Ed. Toms, 508 Chamberlen street ,received the tragic news from Ottawa this morning that her son, Gunner Wm. Albert Toms, Canadian Field Artillery is officially reported killed in action on August 10th. Gunner Toms, whose father, Pte. Ed. Toms went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, enlisted here in the summer of 1915 with the 33rd Battery and went across with that unit. He had been in France for a long period. The news of his death will bring regret to a large circle of friends.

CAPT. MARTIN DUNSFORD

Mr. W. H. Dunsford, manager of the Bank of Commerce, has received an official message from Ottawa this morning stating that his son, Capt. Martin Dunsford had been admitted to the 10th British Red Cross Hospital at Letreport, on August 16th, suffering from severe gun shot wounds in the left shoulder, left arm and left leg. Capt Dunsford originally enlisted in the 129th Wentworth Co. Battalion, receiving a commission as lieutenant. He went overseas with a special draft of officers from Camp Borden and on reaching England was assigned to the 18th Western Ontario Battalion at the front. His good services at Vimy Ridge and elsewhere were recognized by his promotion on the field to the rank of Captain. Capt Dunsford's brother, Sidney who was a lieutenant in the 247th Peterborough battalion reverted to the ranks to go overseas and is now a Corporal in the 208th Battalion, 5th Canadian Division in England.

PTE. A. H. DOWNING.

Pte. A. H. Downing, of Apsley who enlisted with the 93rd Peterborough Battalion in the winter of 1915-16 and went overseas as a member of the Apsley Platoon C Company, 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded. Pte. Downing was transferred to another Canadian Battalion at the front.

PTE. W. J. NEWHAM.

Another former 93rd Battalion man is officially reported wounded today in the person of Pte. W. J. Newham, whose relatives live near Selwyn, Smith township. Pte. Newham enlisted here in February, 1916 and went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, afterwards going to France in a draft.

PTE. C. POWERS.

Pte. Corney Powers, formerly of the 93rd Battalion is officially reported ill. Pte. Powers who boarded at the home of Mrs. Polet Carney, Water street, enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion and went overseas with that unit. His relatives reside in Quebec.

Bob Eakins, a former well known summer visitor at Stoney Lake, and who has been on active service with the Flying Corps, has been spending a furlough at Stoney Lake and receiving a warm welcome from his many friends. He is home to enter upon instructional duty.

Mrs. Sydney Jolliffe, 453 Water street, has been notified officially from Ottawa that the condition of her son, Signaller Harold Hilton Jolliffe, who went overseas with the 59th Battalion and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front, is improved. Signaller Jolliffe was admitted to No. 6 Casualty Clearing Station on August 12th, suffering from pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Rippingale, whose two sons, Ptes. Benjamin and Stanley Rippinale were recently killed in action, have received the following letter from Pte. F. J. Evans, a chum of the two boys:

France, July 16, 1917.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Rippingale,—I am sorry to have to drop you these few lines, but it is my duty as a brother soldier. Your two sons were in my platoon ever since they came to France and they were both brave boys, which I know, because I have fought alongside of them on Jan. 17th and also at Vimy. I am sorry to say that they both have crossed the great divide and died doing their duty on their machine guns.

Some of our boys laid them to rest in peace to-day. They had a Protest-

No Organized Counter Attacks on Newly Won Canadian Positions Since Saturday---Many German Dead Mark Fruitless Attempts to Recapture Ground.

A DESPERATE BATTLE

(By Stewart Lyon, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, (via London), Sunday afternoon.—The enemy has accepted defeat, temporarily at least. Since the virtual destruction of the storming columns which sought to penetrate our new positions at dawn yesterday there has been no organized counter-attack. The German artillery is still active, and our gun positions have been subjected to bombardment with gas shells. The regulation mask affords complete protection, however, and, although it is not so easy to serve the guns when masks are worn, our gunners are still able to find their targets.

The infantry are resting in a cooling breeze. Their condition is vastly better than after Vimy Ridge. The whole of the 4th Prussian Guard division has been used for recent counter-attacks, and the losses suffered make it of no value as an attacking force. After the supreme effort Saturday morning between four and five hundred bodies were counted along a single brigade front. The enemy non-commissioned officers put the blame for their disaster largely on the shoulders of green officers, who exposed their commands in close formation to our artillery and machine gun fire. The non-commissioned officers are very much disgusted at being captured by a few Canadians. As a matter of fact, the captors of some of these Guard units numbered much less than the prisoners they brought in. Now that our men have had time to explore 70, its hidden strength is being disclosed, and there are many dugouts forty feet or more down in the chalk, where nothing short of an earthquake could disturb the occupants. Machine gun posts were everywhere. In the chalk pits alone a body of less than 200 men had over twenty machine guns. Our attack was so sudden there that some of these guns never were in action. The enemy's information as to our intention to attack was very accurate. Two regimenal orders have been captured, dated on the evening of Tuesday. One says "to-morrow a big attack is expected." The other is more specific, and states that "an attack is expeced to-morrow morning. Look out for barrage signals."

I was an alert and well-prepared foe who was driven from Hill 70. The three days' total of prisoners is now over 1,100.

A Desperate Battle.

The most fierce engagement on the Canadian front since the beginning of the war is gradually coming to a triumphant end by the exhaustion of the enemy. Since the capture of Hill 70 and St. Laurent on Wednesday morning the men defending these newly-won positions have been compelled to stand by almost without cessation to meet the counter-attacks. The leaders of the German

HAMILTON DOCTOR APPARENTLY IS FOUL PLAY VICTIM

Found Dead With Deep Gash on Back of His Head in the Office of the Crescent Oil Company This Morning

THREE ARRESTS MADE

Special to the Examiner:

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 20. —Answering an accident call at one o'clock this morning ambulance constables found Dr. D. G. Macrobbie, aged 38, dead, and apparently the victim of foul play in the office of the Crescent Oil Company. There was a deep gash on the back of his head and he had been dead for several hours. Detective Sayer, after a short investigation, placed the following men under arrest: Harry Smith, manager of the Crescent Oil Co., J. J. McAuliffe, real estate operator, and Walter Scott, architect. These men had been seen in the company of Dr. Macrobbie during the day. McAuliffe was found in the company's yard, intoxicated, with one boot off. Herbert Asseltine, caretaker, noticed a light burning above the office at 10.30, and upon investigation found the body, but didn't notify the police immediately. Dr. Macrobbie had a large practice. Besides his wife, two small children survive. An inquest has been ordered.

To the police this morning Herbert Asseltine, the hostler who found the body, told an amazing story. He noticed the light upstairs over the office, he said, and investigated. Stretched out on the floor, he found Dr. MacRobbie in a pool of blood, and a short distance away the men who were taken into custody were sleeping, he asserted, on a pile of iron valves and castings.

Asseltine insists that Dr. MacRobbie was breathing faintly then. He explains that he notified Benjamin Fowler, members of the firm, and that Fowler called Dr. Lang.

As soon as the doctors arrived Smith, Scott and MacAuliffe left the building, no one making an attempt to detain them. He says blood was in profusion about the room, spatters on the wall five feet above the dead man being noticeable.

The three prisoners have been remanded for one week, without bail, nominal charges of vagrancy having been lodged against them.

Dr. MacRobbie was born at Victoria Harbour, where he spent his early boyhood. He graduated in medicine in 1899, practising for some years in Victoria Harbour before coming to Hamilton. He is survived by his father, Rev. Dr. MacRobbie, pastor of Nelson Presbyterian church, Tansley, Ontario, and a sister, Mrs. J. W. Garrett, Toronto. Deceased was a member of the Masonic Order, Independent Order of Oddfellows and Knights of Templars. In religion he was a Presbyterian, being a regular attendant at Erskine church.

See the $175.00 in brand new Dollar Bills on display in Neill's entrance window, from now to Dollar Day.

Wednesday Is Dollar Day Big Shopping Event

An Invitation to Drop Down Town To-morrow Afternoon or Evening to See the Displays

Nothing rouses the enthusiasm of the merchants of Peterborough like Dollar Day. When first mentioned this summer the response was unanimous, and for weeks each store worked quietly in preparation for the big event. This getting ready process is done individually and nothing is seen on the surface to indicate the amount of energy being expended, but during the last few days the movement has come to the surface, and everything points to a record Dollar Day for Peterborough. Brantford has just had its day, and report says it was the greatest yet. Kingston and other places are just getting breath after their own celebration of Dollar Day, and on Wednesday it will be our turn again.

A few whispers from the stores, telling o few of the items they have to offer, are a promise of most unexpected things in the way of values, and it is simply wonderful the buying power that Dollars will have on Wednesday. The stores will have their windows ready to-morrow, and they will tell a story of preparedness such as perhaps they never have on any previous Dollar Day.

Not the least important window is that which contains the $175.00 to be given away by the merchants to 5b successful estimators, and which is located at the entrance to R. Neill's Shoe Store. Don't miss seeing the windows to-morrow.

Dollar Day At Grafton's

Dollar Day at the Grafton Store is always the real thing. The people look forward to Dollar Day with pleasurable anticipation but those in need of clothing for men or boys have double expectations when they remember what was done for them on previous Dollar Days. This time the Big Clothing Store has outdone itself, and having just double its size, it is announcing in its full-page advertisement to-day that Grafton's will double your money; also on Dollar Day. Read the "ad" carefully and remember that the prices quoted are in spite of war-time advances, and only possible on account of the foresightedness of the firm in buying large stocks ahead.

A CHANCE FOR SERVICE.

The problem of food supply — the vitals of victory—will find its largest solution in transportation capacity. With the submarine waste of tonnage, with the demands for transporting troops and supplies that will become greater when the United States begins moving supplies and troops, the demand for new transportation tonnage, even now at the acute point, will be greatly increased. Great Britain is doing her best, building merchant shipping by the thousands of tons, and there is increased shipbuilding activity in Canada and the United States, but this activity does not promise to meet the demand; and there seems to be—there is need— for greatly enlarging ship-building capacity and using every possible facility or making new facilities for supplying or helping supply, peharps, the most important need of war-winning—transportation.

There is lying idle at Prince Rupert the best equipped ship-building plant upon the British Pacific coast, capable of building either steel or wooden ships. This plant was built by the Grand Trunk Pacific at a cost of two million dollars, and there is a trifle of equipment lacking, valued at only $3,438, to be added before the government will accept the plant as complete.

This is a trifle compared with the magnitude of the work and its importance in promoting shipbuilding. It may cost too much as a matter of practical economy, to send steel to Prince Rupert, to be used in shipbuilding, but endless supplies of material for building wooden ships are at hand in the magnificent forests of British Columbia.

Will the government accept the opportunity to help solve the transportatoin problem? It owes the duty of doing something to the interests of war winning, and it owes reparation for wasted opportunities. It refused or neglected to use the Grand Trunk Pacific workshops at Winnipeg for making munitions. In one sense the government cannot be blamed for this. It would not have been quite fair for the munition profiteers for the government to enter into opposition and use a splendid plant lying idle to make munitions.

There is no end to the ships the allies and the Empire need now, and will need for some time to come; and it would be doing good business to put the Prince Rupert shipbuilding plant at work. It is stated that the fact of this plant being available has been known to the government long enough to have turned out twenty ships, if the government had put it to use.

It is, however, after what we have seen of the government's way of letting things drift, idle to hope that this golden opportunity of increasing shipbuilding will be used. It takes something more than business considerations; something more than patriotic anxiety to use the resources of the country to advantage, to stir the government to effective action. But let the big interests, in the name of the twin magnates of the C.N.R., put their little pistol to the governmental temple ,and things move — the public money to the tune of millions moves into the pockets of the preferred.

Great is the wastage of manhood at the front; but great also is the government's waste of opportunity and national resources in war administration.

EQUALITY OF SERVICE.

The enthusiastic defenders of conscription see grave defects in the voluntary system of providing soldiers. They argue that those who volunteer for active war service do more than their share and that those who refrain from enlisting escape and fail to do equal service with those who voluntarily enter the ranks. There is truth in the contention, and, coupled with the necessity of providing reinforcements, a logical justification for conscription.

But if conscription is enacted to secure a measure of equality of service it should extend far enough to make equality of service as a principle as universal and impartially applicable as possible4 The conscription bill, now law, is to be, we are told, rigidly enforced; but it will affect the manhood of our country only, who, by its enforcement, will be compelled to give the services and make the sacrifices that fighting involves.

But there is no "conscription of wealth," which has greatly grown in Canada on account of the war—virtually an outcome of the agonies of the war, suffered by our soldiers, by their wives, their mothers and their sisters. While they welter in the trenches, or weep at home, the war profiteer, the man of wealth amassed in large part through war conditions, sits in his seat of safety, calmly enjoying the benefits of the protection and safeguarding that other Canadians are bleeding and dying to bring.

A discriminating government—that discriminates between manhood and money in a way to ignore and outrage the principle of equality of service, the principle of fair play for which half the world is fighting — a discriminating government "soaks" manhood by conscription, and spares wealth by refusing to pass legislation that will make the greater rich pay their just share and thus promote the interests of equality of service.

The member for West Peterborough struck a high and right note when he resigned his seat as a Government supporter and his candidature in protest against the failure of the Government to "conscript wealth" as well as manhood. Bu, on the assurance of the Finance Minister that a bill would be brought in to compel wealth to do service, he slipped back into the traces and bent his broad back again to the work of rolling the old party chariot along. But the Government does not keep the spirit of its promise that so easily placated the recaloitrant member.

The income tax bill of the Government, which got its third reading on Friday, provided for the escape of wealth to such an extent that Mr. Pardee, the "noble" Liberal who took an "independent stand" for the conscription of manhood, felt that he would not be consistent if he did not also take similar ground in respect of the conscription of wealth, and he moved the following amendment:

"Moved by F. F. Pardee, seconded by Duncan C. Ross, that this bill be not now read a third time, but that it be referred back to the Committee of the Whole House with instructions (with the approval of the Government) to further consider the question of providing that a much larger tax be imposed on incomes exceeding $6,000 per annum."

Mr. Pardee's argument against the Government bill was epitomized in his declaration that it "takes from those who have least and give most, and leaves with those who have most and give least." He refused to "ask for the soldiers the crumbs which fall from the rich man's table." He urged, even after his resolution had been ruled out, that the Government take action upon its own initiative. But the promise of action a year hence—with, no doubt, the Government's tender regard for wealth still unabated and to find expression in similar one-sided legislation—was the best he could secure.

Is this requiring equality of service —letting untouched wealth hang on to its gains another year of war, agony and strenuous service in war promotion by the soldiers and the mass of the people. He who would ask, as fair play and equal treatment, the postponment of conscription of manhood for a year would be laughed to scorn, and rightly, too. If conscription has any justification it consists in its being the only way of meeting the needs of our gallantly fighting and falling soldiers in France, and securing the reinforcements that conscription is designed to provide. Conscription has for its sole purpose the providing of these reinforcements, immediately; not waiting a year.

It would be small solace to the Canadians in France if the Government told them that next year it would pass an act to provide the sending of the sore and presently-needed reinforcements. It would be absurd for the Government to show the same consideration to the "slacker," whose manhood, such as it is, is his only capital, as it does for the money of the millionaire.

Mr. Pardee justified his advocacy of conscription and manhood and, at the same time, the logic of his demand for conscription of wealth in these stirring words:

"I am not one of those who lightly assumed the solemn responsibility of calling Canada's manhood to the colours by compulsion," he declared. "I did it to back the boys at the front. That is the supreme national obligation of every Canadian. But I am not content to ask the mother, the sister, the wife, and the children to make their great sacrifice and then say to the man in the mansion, the bondholder, the coupon-clipper, the income-getter: 'Give us a shaving off your income.' "I will not ask for the soldiers the crumbs which fall from the rich man's table."

"Equality of service" does not consist in throwing the burden upon manhood, and in letting wealth enjoy its untouched and, perhaps, tainted gains.

Our soldiers and the people of Canada are fighting the battle of democracy. Our Government is fostering the vilest of autocracy, the autocracy of money, the "mammon of unrighteousness."

"Two men shall be working in the field—one in the workshop and one in the counting house—one shall be taken and the other left."

THE BETTER MAN.

As usual, the British advasce beyond Ypres was successful. The wards "as usual" are employed because of the fact that in every case this year in which the British and Germans have come face to face without the element of surpise on either side the British have forced the Germans back. German victories have ceased on the western front. They resist the British stubbornly, but not with their old stubbornness, and they do not give way much, but they give way.

Field Marshal Haig reported last year, at the end of the battle of the Somme, that he had observed a deterioration in the Germah morale. It was probably slight. Thhe real reason of the unvarying British successes is not the German deterioration so much as the British improvement. In other words, the British Army has become a more effective instrument than the Germann. It is superior in artillery and superior in aircraft. So militarism, having laboured for forty years to extinguish the civilian spirit, on the ground that military spirit must be dominant in order to have efficiency, now finds that it is not as powerful as it thought it was; that in three years a peaceful, shopkeeping country with a "contemptible little army" can outmatch it at its own game. Was it worth while to destroy the civilian virtues for this?—New York Times.

The greatest need of Canada is political and moral leadership.

Proposes One Body For The Control Of Municipal Affairs

City Clerk Baker, of London, will advocate advanced methods in city government organization before the meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association, which is to be held in Toronto in September. The plan he intends to urge is that all the bodies now engaged in the administration of the city affairs, such as the board of education, public utilities commission, hospital trust, etc., should be combined in one council. The main body, he suggests, would determine the general policy to be followed in the administration of the affairs of each department which would then become responsible for the carrying out of this policy and that the conduct of the business directly affecting it. All would have a voice in determining the tax rate and a share in the responsibility of the management of the city as a whole. Under the scheme put forward the actual city council would consist of six members, two of whom would be elected each year. The board of education and utilities commission would consist of six members each, while the library board and hospital trust would each have four elected members who would be qualified to vote on expenditures of money with others appointed to act in advisory capacity. Meetings of the whole council would be held quarterly at which the various departments would simply report on the work accomplished dufing the three months.

What Does "Right Away" Mean?

One week ago to-day Sir Edward Kemp, successor of Sir Sam Hughes as minister of militia, made the following statement at Camp Borden:

"The conscription bill will be put into force right away."

What does "right away" mean? Did it mean the Monday after the Saturday on which the word of authority fell from the lips of one of the mightiest of the Conservative money barons Decidedly not. A week has passed and the bill has not been brought up again in the House of Commons, as it must be before its enforcement. So that "right away" may mean more than a day, more than a week, perhaps more than a month. It may be the Kemp way of expressing "watchful waiting." The phrase is almost as convenient. After the reporters had been waved away by Sir Edward with his ready "right away," they may have thought the statement meant something, but it really doesn't mean anything. "Right away translated in the language of the present administration becomes a life sentence of expectation.

As far as "right away" conscription is concerned it would seem that something is blocking the right of way. The menace of Quebec firebrands and dynamiters grows, with no word of rebuke from the powers at Ottawa. Statements for which Ontario speakers or newspapers would be jailed or suspended, respectively, are filling the sedition sheets that found their strength in the Nationalist-Tory alliance of 1911. His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire called the leaders together and the meeting may have been more momentous and productive than the people have been permitted to ascertain. The people of Canada are kept in the dark.

Fogs of mystery swamp the clear light that should beam from Parliament Hill. "Right Away" from the conscriptionist government echoes away into silence. And the politicians play their petty games and give rewards to star witnesses.—London Advertiser.

Demobilization Of The Canadian Army

WHEN the Huns are at last driven back across the Rhine, and the Kaiser is brought to his "knees"; when the thunder of the artillery ceases, and the boys in the trenches pass along the joyous words — "Home again" — how will Canada be prepared to receive her great army of soldier sons from overseas?

The reabsorption of this great body of men at the close of the war presents a problem more difficult than the one Canada solved in raising and equipping her citizen army and sending it to the aid of the Mother Country. The fact that Canada's army is composed entirely of volunteers, obligates the Dominion with the duty of seeing to it that these men are properly cared for at the close of the war and judiciously guided back into civil life. Were the men representing Canada in the trenches professional soldiers, our obligation would be discharged with the last pay-day. But Canada's soldiers are not fighting for money, nor spoils. They came from the bench, the forge, the factory, the farm, the mine, the office and the counting house, in answer to the call of the Empire, in order that liberty and democracy might prevail in the world. They will expect to return to similar occupations, and it is our duty to see to it that they are properly assisted in doing so.

According to figures obtainable, the present recruited strength of our overseas forces is about 400,000. Taking it for granted that the war will continue for several months, and that the whole of our present enlistment, and even more, is used in this last drive against the Hun, what will we do with our men when the war is over, and they return home? Will they be turned out to shift for themselves, and, if so, will the country be able to absorb such a large number without causing serious complications in our industrial and financial arrangements?

Only a superficial consideration of conditions in Canada makes it quite apparent that this problem of caring for our soldiers after the war is one of utmost importance and even if our Dominion and Provincial Governments, backed up by our leading statesmen and thinkers, give the problem serious attention during the remaining months of the war, we will be none too well prepared to successfully handle the situation.

Some of us are wont to belittle these after-the-war problems with the statement that Canada will be able to meet the situation and that the problems will solve themselves. They point to the fact that more than a million volunteer soldiers were absorbed in the Northern United States at the close of the Civil War, without causing any change in the economic conditions. As we read back through the history of that great democratic and the so-called re-construction period, it might seem at first thought that our cases are somewhat similar and that what happened in the States will happen in Canada. However, a close comparison of Civil War conditions and those which prevail in Canada, shews many vital differences.

The population of the United States at the outbreak of the Civil War was about 31,000,000, of whom something like 11,000,000 lived in the Confederate States. The census figures of that period show that upwards of two-thirds of the population in the Northern States was rural and this proportion also held in the Southern States. This was shown again in the enlistments in the Union Army, where a large percentage were attested from the farms. Up to the Civil War period and for many years after, the United States was emphatically an agricultural nation, with manufacturing limited to certain small districts in New England and the North Atlantic States.

Against this situation, we find that Canada's 8,000,000 population is about evenly divided as between urban and rural, while of our 400,000 soldiers recruited to date only 12% came from the farms and ranches, and taking it for granted that all of the farmers and ranchers will be re-absorbed onto the farms, what will we do with the remaining 88% of the army of ours?

It is interesting to note the occupational proportions of our overseas forces:

Professions	12,000
Merchants and employers	5,200
Clerical workers	42,000
Manual workers, skilled	138,200
Manual workers, unskilled	53,300
Students	2,400
Farmers	58,300
Ranchers	2,600
	290,000

The total enlistment since has been increased to about 400,000 but the proportions among the occupations of the recruits apparently remain practically the same.

What Canada needs above everything else is more farmers, for our consuming population is too large for our producing population. It would, of course, be close to Utopian if every one of our returning soldiers could be transplanted at once to our vacant land areas and enrolled on the producing side of our population. But it would be folly to expect that any large number of men who enlisted from the professions, the trades and the clerical positions, would be able to make good on farms or will have any desire to go onto the land. They lack the knowledge. Their temperament and modes of life have been quite different from those of the successful farmer.

A recent survey of labor conditions in Canada, which deals with present conditions and the prospects for after-the-war conditions indicates a possible demand for about 200,000 more men after the war. It is quite reasonable to suppose that 75% of the returning soldiers will require employment. It is estimated there are 200,000 munition workers now employed in Canada, and that only one-fourth of this number will be retained in this and similar kinds of employment after the war. Thus we find that Canada will be called upon to find employment for a large number of her returned soldiers and for the larger number of the present munition workers, and that she will have to provide the machinery to properly distribute and care for this large number seeking employment at the close of the war, if we are to maintain our prosperity and prevent serious congestion of unemployed in the cities and towns.

A majority of the returning soldiers will inevitably gravitate to the cities and commercial centres. Even the Civil War soldiers flocked to the cities, and it was not until several months after the mustering out began that the men were absorbed in any great numbers onto the farms. It is quite evident from this that it will be necessary to put forth every effort to develop and increase all branches of our industrial life to care for this flood of labor that will be sure to flock to the cities and towns.

After the surrender of Lee, the Union Army was demobilized at the rate of 360,000 per month. The largest return of soldiers was made during the three months of May, June and July, 1865, when close to 700,000 were returned to their homes. There was for a time a general rejoicing and celebration to welcome the "Boys in Blue"; then came the stern reality that these men must be provided with means of earning their living. Employment agencies for the returning soldiers were opened in every city and town. Many were received back to their old positions. Farms that remained idle or only partially worked during the war were put under work, providing employment for thousands of returned soldiers. But plans made for the soldiers were mostly ideal. In some places it was impossible to care for men properly. In other sections there was a need for more. The country was in a serious condition financially, a situation which the statesmen seemed to think demanded more careful attention than that of making plans for the care of returning soldiers.

Taking it for granted that it will be possible to return the Canadian army to our shores in large numbers and within a short time after the end of the war, it would seem from the history of the Civil War that it would be more desirable to turn this great body of men back into civil life only in such quantities as the body politic could assimilate. This can only be accomplished through adequate plans worked out well in advance and administered by men who have expert knowledge of labor, industrial and financial conditions in all parts of the Dominion.

Among the most practical plans suggested is that of making a careful census of our overseas forces directly after the war is over to ascertain the employment requirements for the men upon their return to Canada. Such a census would show how many were desirous of returning to the farm or of taking up that class of work upon their return; it would show how many carpenters, masons, machinists, etc., would require employment and when they would be available.

There will be, as a matter of course, a number of men who will have positions awaiting them — others will have relatives or friends who care for them until such time as they have secured employment. Such men will not be a charge upon the country and could be mustered out among the first. But what of those who have no relatives to look after them and who have no resources upon which to rely during the assimilation period? The nation must certainly care for these men, and their number will be large, as shown by the enlistment from the laboring class.

It is estimated that it would require 400 large transports to bring back all of Canada's overseas forces within three months after the close of the war. As this number of large boats would be impossible to secure, it is quite evident that we cannot count upon returning more than a few thousand each month. The mustering out of the Union Army consisted for the most part in sending regimental trains back to the place of recruiting, a task requiring only a few days duration. Canada can hardly count upon the return of all of her men short of a year or more after the close of the war.

The question follows, how are the men to be handled after they return to Canada? It would seem to be desirable that they be kept in camps or mustering-out depots until the proper authorities are satisfied they can be provided with employment. Under such a general scheme and with their cafe on this side provided for by proper provincial or sectional depots, there should be a minimum of difficulty in getting the men back into civil life.

The proposed plan of awarding a free homestead to soldiers, regardless of whether they have any agricultural experience, is fraught with many dangers, as Canada's experience after the South African war demonstrated. Such a plan merely feeds the government land to the hands of speculators, without fulfilling the object of caring for the soldier.

Again, most of these returning men know little or nothing about farming. True, the outdoor life they have led will, in a large number of cases, bring a desire for a continuation of this life. But some specially designed plan for co-operative community farming is the only way in which most of these men who lack agricultural education may hope to make a success as farmers. For those desiring to take up farming, the Government might well afford to maintain them for a year at a sectional camp, even providing for the support of their families in order that they might be given the instruction necessary to give them a chance to win success from the land. Once they have secured this education and are placed upon a farm, among neighbors of a similar type, there to receive continued advice and instruction and guidance from Government experts, there is hope that a majority will succeed.

All these problems must be studied carefully. Their solution will require time and the best brains of our country. The start should be made by the Government at once by the appointment of a commission, composed for the most part of civilians—for it must be remembered that the problems of demobilization of a large army of volunteers has to do with industrial, labor and financial problems, and that the military specialists will have completed their tasks and won the laurels when the war is over.

British Battle In Many Climes

Problem of War Preparations Much More Complex Than Germany's

LONDON.—The British army has undergone changes of a far-reaching character since the outbreak of war in 1914, and it now possesses many branches unheard of in pre-war days. Every resource afforded by the manifold capacity of this great industrial community has been harnessed to the war chariot, says a British statement from official sources.

There are certain respects in which the problem by which the British army is faced is unique; and one of the most striking of these is that it must be capable of campaigning in any part of the world, and in any climate. In the case of armies like that of Germany, on the other hand, the problem of preparation for war was relatively simple. The ground on which the army was destined to fight was known; it was an army designed to do battle in a particular theatre—Europe. In consequence everything could be, and was, planned along certain well-defined lines.

In the present war the importance of [illegible] works was apparent at a very early stage, partly owing to modern artillery and partly to the confirmed entrenching habit of the Germans. One of the cardinal instructions given by the German commanders to their troops on first invading France and Belgium was—"make trenches everywhere." In fact all the continental powers had in addition to their corps of engineers large numbers of trained pioneers, organized in battalions, and suitable for use either as fighting troops or in the construction and maintenance of field works and communications. The absolute importance of the last-named can perhaps only be realised by one who has seen the roads during an advance.

But, while the continent was to this extent prepared for trench warfare, as was natural in the circumstances, it was otherwise with Great Britain. In the British service only the Indian army possessed pioneer regiments, these troops being always necessary in conducting campaigns in the hill country. When the need for this class of troops became evident, steps were taken to form pioneer battalions for the expeditionary force. From the first they proved their value.

The pioneers are prepared to fight or work as may be required. They perform such services as the construction and repair of communication trenches, fire trenches and dug-outs, the digging of trenches and wiring. Their duties are manifold, and there is no form of usefulness at the front which the pioneer does not at one time or another find himself called upon to undertake. His activities range from carrying up ammunition to retrieving the wounded or holding a fiercely disputed trench or sap.

In the great advance on the Somme and in Artois the pioneers performed work of the greatest importance. The duty of consolidating the captured ground and connecting it up with the old front line of the attackers, largely fell to them. In many places they took part in the advance as infantry, in others they kept the advancing lines supplied with ammunition and water, and beat off counter-attacks. Their losses have been heavy, but they have accomplished their tasks in the face of every obstacle.

As a rule, the pioneers remain in the vicinity of the trenches all the time their division is in the line, and do not go back for rest, except at long intervals.

The pioneer is as yet a new type in the British army, but he has long since passed the trial stage, and has proved his worth and steadfastness. His metal has been tried in the crucible of war and very thoroughly it has stood the test.

GERMANS DIDN'T HAVE GOLD.

Millions of Eggs Were Not Released by the Dutch Authorities.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—According to Dutch newspapers several million eggs destined for Germany have been held up by the Dutch authorities on the German frontier, says a despatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Co. The Germans promised to pay for the eggs in gold, but at the last moment they offered paper money, which the Dutch refused to accept.

THE GIRL WHO FUSSES.

The fussy girl sat next us in the car this morning. And she fussed and she fussed and she fussed. She settled herself three times, hunched up her right shoulder, took off her right glove and patted her hair, pulled the back of her sailor collar into shape, shrugged up her left shoulder, pulled off her left glove and patted her hair, pushed her hat a little more to one side and put on both gloves, patted her hair and crossed her right ankle over her left, squared both shoulders and patted her hair, settled herself in a new position and pulled her coat down at the waist, patted her hair, surveyed her nose in the tiny glass at the bottom of her bag and patted her hair, pulled her hat a wee bit more to one side and reversed her ankles, then began at the top of the programme and repeated it.

THREE BROTHERS READY TO SERVE.

NEW YORK—Three brothers, David, John and Stephen O'Meara, all living at No. 62 Barrow street, have passed the physical examinations at Board No. 100, Grove and Hudson streets. None of the three has claimed exemption. The serial numbers of the three brothers ran in consecutive order, 221, 222 and 223, but their draft numbers were 467, 531 and [illegible].

NECESSITIES OF LIFE EVER HIGHER

Highest Prices for Meats Paid in United States.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Civil war prices for meats were outdone yesterday.

Consumers were paying the highest prices in history for beefsteak, beef roasts, pork loin, ham, bacon and lamb, according to leading Chicago retailers.

Relief from the steadily advancing prices can only come with a reduction in grain prices, now in the hands of Herbert Hoover, they said.

Wholesalers can see no reason aside from supply and demand for these increases. They said the western grazing lands have had an abundance of rain and afford the best pasturing in years. Cattle raisers are therefore presumed to be holding back the supply, fattening them for still higher prices.

This, then, is the answer to the much propounded inquiry:

"Will prices go higher?" They will. Retailers will not be surprised to see prices for porterhouse, now selling at 40 cents a pound, five cents higher than ten days ago, soon to reach 50 and 60 cents a pound.

Other beef will advance accordingly, it was predicted.

The cherished pork roast has advanced 8 cents in the last week, due to an advance of nearly $1 a hundred pounds in the wholesale price of hogs. But the increase has only started. Loin is now 35 cents a pound.

Ham and bacon are about as high as they will go for the present, retailers explained. Bacon is now 48 cents a pound, about 8 cents higher than six months ago. Further advances would mean a check on the demand, it was stated.

Lamb is relatively higher and shows no tendency to come down.

Consumers generally are leaning more toward purchases of inferior meats, arranged in new dishes, retailers asserted. This is one reason for the advance in "chuck" and round steak, which is proportionately higher than the choicer cuts.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM MEMBER OF 93rd BATTALION

Private Roy Wilson Refers to a Number of Peterboro' Boys —Met Charlie Stenner of Warsaw

The following letter has been received by Mrs. A. Wilson, of Young's Point, from her son, Private Roy Wilson, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion:

Somewhere in France, July 6, 1917.

Dear Mother and all, — I suppose you have been worrying and wondering why I haven't written before, but I have been waiting for a letter from home, but I guess you missed the mail boat. I had a long letter from Geraldine and she told be about the burning of the steamer "Ialinda." It will be a serious loss to Young's as it is just the commencement of the season.

Well, Mother, we have been "over the top" again and took more than our objective and had comparaticely few casualties. Believe me Fritz ran some but we killed quite a number and took many prisoners. I guess everything is fine back in Young's Point now. I sure would like to be there for a trip up the lakes.

I started out to find what I could about poor Nicholas Scott, but his battalion is in the line just now. Oswald passed right close to me the other day but we never saw each other. Ed. Tighe saw him taking supplies up the line. Things look decidedly good over here. Frits has no heart at all, though some of them put up a good fight. One guy hit me with a "potato masher bomb," on the elbow, but before it exploded I was on top of him. The bomb got H. Wood of the 93rd pretty bad. Before we went over we were supplied with revolvers and knob kerries. The knob kerrie is a big nut on a handle of braided wire about 20 inches long. If a fellow gets a good square crack with it on the head he is done for. Between Lt. Grant and I we shot the Frits four times and I busted his bean. He had an Iron Cross on which I now have. I am sending the ribbon to you.

How are fellows at home getting on with conscription? Mother, it makes us fellows over here feel bad to think that fellows that we called chums have to be be made come over to help us. I would hate to be among the first ones over for they will not like their reception I am thinking.

Dug Outs Furnished.

I was up through some of the towns we took from the Germans yesterday. It is too bad the way they are smashed up. The Germans had gun emplacements right in the main streets and his trenches ran right through the houses. His dug-outs were furnished with furniture taken from the houses, and of course, we make good use of them now. Our Brigadier told us that the last time we went over the top we had picked German troops in front of us, but it seemed to me that it did not make any difference—we have a hard time catching thm and they lost a very strong position. The German official report called us "special storming troops." The boys here have the following rhyme:

"The Kaiser never reckoned
On the gallant 52nd."

Charlie Stenner of Warsaw was up to see us this morning and he looks fine. If we don't move from this section I am going to the sea shore for a rest when I get leave here. Tom Reid, who was wounded last fall, is back in my platoon now. I had a letter from Sam. He is in Bramshott. It is just about a year ago that we left camp in Canada and I have seen a little bit of the world since then.

I see that the American troops are landing in France and they will be in action about September. I had two trench newspapers to send you but I can't find them now. We had a Brigade boxing competition here last night and our battalion cleaned up every bout, and then the "Y" gave us a concert.

We are camped in the grounds of a swell big chateau and it is certainly a beautiful place. It has a little lake in the centre and I think there must be fish in it for we see the officers looking in there all the time. Of course the chateau is out of bounds to the ranks. I was in a little town the other evening with a pal and we were buying eats. Tomatoes, 1 franc 2 pence hapanny a pound, and butter, 8 francs 6 pense hapenny or 75c a pound. Somem stiff price for soldiers. We couldn't get any sugar. The civilians require a ticket to get sugar. I received your box of May 15th, and I certainly enjoyed it, but I have not received Aunt Evie's yet. Give my love to father and the children, and kind regards to all inquiring friends. Write son and send me some more eats.

Your loving son,
ROY.

AUSTRIAN SERBS NOW FIGHT AUSTRIA

CORFU, Greece.—There are two whole Serbian divisions, 40,000 men, which entered the war under the Austrian flag, fighting against the Entente Allies, and which to-day have turned squarely around and are fighting under the Entente colors against the Central Powers. The fighting under two flags is one of the queer romances of the big war, related by Professor Yanitch, private chaplain of King Peter of Serbia, as illustrated how the conglomerate Slav population of Southern Austria-Hungary is ready to break away from the Hapsburg master.

These two divisions, originally Austrian, were forced into the ranks early in the war from Bosnia, Croatia and Herzegovina, the Slav States forcibly annexed by Austria. That region is the great hot-bed of Slav agitation. The population is overwhelmingly Slav, but is held in subjection by the iron military rule of the Dual Monarchy. It was here, at the central point of Sarajevo, that the Austrian heir apparent was assassinated and the European was unchained. Although the work of a fanatic, it was only one of the evidences of the intense feeling of this Slav section against its masters.

The Austrian staff held the Slav forces in reserve for a time, well knowing the bitterness in the ranks. But when General Brusiloff's great drive began a year ago in Galicia the Austrians had need of every man of their resources. This brought the Slav divisions into line, and for the first time Slav was facing Slav, the Southern Slav element being thrust forward to meet the rush of their brothers from the north. It was literally a fight of brother against brother. After one engagement a young Serb officer went among the enemy wounded and there found two of his brothers fatally shot by his own men and his own orders.

But the ties of race were stronger than flags. In one fight a machine gun battery attached to one of the Slav divisions opened by firing against the advancing Russians, and then swinging their pieces about, ended the day by pouring their battery into the Austrians. As the two sides came together the Slavs with the Austrian forces would call out "Mi amo Srbi," meaning, "We are Serbs," which was the signal for steady streams of desertions from the Austrian to the Russian ranks. There was much surprise a year ago at the reports of great numbers of prisoners taken by Brusiloff, and it is said that this is largely accounted for by the great numbers of Southern Slavs who, forced to fight in the Austrian ranks, voluntarily gave themselves up as prisoners when they met their Slav brothers from the North.

These two Serbian divisions, made up of Slav prisoners from the Austrian ranks, have been placed under the command of General Zirkovitch, the defender of Belgrade, with headquarters at Saloniki. Recently 1,000 of them, assembled at Odessa after having been made voluntary prisoners, made a remarkable trip from Odessa via Petrograd, London, Paris, and Marseilles to Saloniki, in ninety-two days, thus completing within about three months the transfer of service from the Austrian front in Galicia to the Allied front in Saloniki.

HELD IN RACE RIOT CASE

East St. Louis Grand Jury Indicts 105, Including Several Policemen.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Aug. 18. — Police officers and a prominent politician were among the men arrested to-day on charges varying from rioting to murder in connection with the race riots here in July, in which more than 100 white persons and negroes were killed. Of 105 persons indicted by the Grand Jury 39 have been taken into custody, 30 of whom are white men. The indictments were returned against 82 white men and 23 negroes.

Five policemen on duty at the time of the strike were arrested. Thomas Benton, for many years a leader in county politics, also was arrested on a charge of assault to kill. He is the owner of two saloons and has been a candidate for Sheriff.

Potatoes May Soon Be $1 A Bag

Big Crop in Western Canada Says Shipper

C. J. Macmillan, of Hillsburg, Ont., one of the most extensive potato shippers in Ontario, has just returned from a tour of Western Canada. He is of the opinion that the Western potato crop will be very large, as there were far more planted than usual, owing to the high prices prevailing last season and to the patriotic appeal to the farmers for greater production.

He thinks, however, that if the Ontario crop turns out to be as good as it promises to be, the Alberta crop may have to go begging, so far as Eastern Canada is concerned. There will have to be some wise distribution if a large part of the Alberta crop is not wasted. The quality, he says, of the Alberta potato, is not quite equal to that of the Ontario potato.

The cities, too, have responded splendidly to the patriotic appeal and this is certain to make a difference in the problem of distribution and in the price.

"My impression," he said, "is that the price of potatoes will be lower this year, owing to these causes, the increased acreage of farmers everywhere, and the part that cities are taking in the matter of production. I would not advise farmers to hold potatoes with the expectation of getting prices equal to last year. I think potatoes will come below a dollar a bag before the year is over."

Henry Ford Is Now For War Till Foe Is Crushed

DETROIT, Aug. 17.—In an interview given out here yesterday afternoon, the first one in many months, Henry Ford made it clear that whatever views he may have once entertained with regard to war, he is now fully converted to the belief that the struggle must go on until German autocracy is crushed.

"We must prepare to go to the limit for the struggle," said Mr. Ford. Without letting hatred creep into our hearts, every man, woman and child should put all energy into crushing militarism. For once and all war is now discredited in the whole world, and the great thing to be reached in the destruction of war for the future.

"I cannot see that any great harm has come in waiting until now with our war preparations. Things have moved so fast, in a mechanical way since this war began that many things that were new three years ago are out of date now. We are making 200,000 airplane cylinders of steel for the Government, to be delivered at the rate of 1,000 a day. We have just developed a way of making a cylinder of solid steel cheaply. We are glad to help the Government and would help even more if called on. We are glad to help in the fight to stamp out militarism; we feel we are doing that in producing the cylinders and would produce 6,000 or 10,000 a day if called upon.

"A great many of the men who work on these cylinders are of German birth, and they are just as keen for stamping out militarism as any of us. We all want the war stopped, and the way to stop it is to let the world know that this country is in it for all it is worth."

Mr. Ford has left the matter of price to be settled by the Government after the cylinders are made, the Government and Mr. Ford to figure the cost, and the Government to pay a fair recompense, but without profit to the Ford company. "It costs very little more to produce steel now than it did before the war," he said.

Asked how the war would affect the work at his plant, Mr. Ford said:

"We will not ask exemptions for any of our men. We will save the places for those who are drafted. If we are in business when the war is over they will be taken back."

Then reverting to national questions he said:

"I do not believe that President Wilson will miss any opportunity to bring about a peace that will be honourable and have a fair chance of being permanent. Some good usually can be found coming out of the worst, and I believe this war will impress us with the fact that we are the most wasteful nation on the globe and that we shall follow lines that will make for economy and efficiency."

LESS LIGHT FOR GERMANY.

Coal Shortage Forces a Reduction in Production of Electricity.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Owing to the coal shortage in Germany a general reduction in the amount of electricity made in the Empire has been decided upon.

A despatch from Frankfurt by way of Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company, says the reduction chiefly concerns lighting, but industries generally will only be able to obtain 40 to 60 per cent. of their normal requirements.

Contractor Says It Has No Equal

Lived on Milk and Bread But Eats Pork Chops After Taking Tanlac

"I have never been much of a hand to recommend any kind of medicine but I can certainly say something for Tanlac," said James Ellis of 559 Perth avenue, Toronto, recently. Mr. Ellis has been a resident of Toronto for more than forty years and is one of the best known contracting stone masons in the city.

"Yes, sir, he continued, 'Tanlac got me off of my little diet of milk and bread on to good, wholesome food, ham, pork chops and the like in just a few weeks and that strikes me as being mighty fine. I had a stubborn case of stomach trouble and a sluggish liver bothering me for over a year and I couldn't get rid of it. I first lost my appetite and soon got to where it was hardly worth while for me to go to the table. I ate so little and suffered so much afterwards. I always took a lunch with me to work but I felt so bad many a day I wouldn't touch it. If I did eat any thing inside of an hour it would sour on my stomach and nauseate me so I couldn't retain it. I was always bothered by gas on my stomach and sometimes the pressure was so great it make my heart go like a threshing machine and I could hardly draw a good breath. For a long time all I could eat was bread and milk and not much of that, and of course I felt bad and unfit for anything all the time.

"After reading the high testimonials in the papers I decided to try Tanlac and while I have just about finished my second bottle, I am already convinced it is without an equal for troubles like I had. I really didn't expect to get such quick and satisfactory results. My appetite is good now and my stomach is so much better that I can eat most any kind of food without any trouble afterwards. Just a few days ago I ate hearty of pork chops, another day some ham and I certainly did enjoy it. Nothing I eat sours now and I'm free from the gas and pains that used to make me so miserable. My liver seems in better shape and I feel stronger and better in every way. I was about to forget to say just before I started on Tanlac I was forced to lay off from my work for two weeks on account of my stomach. I was simply in such a weakened condition that I couldn't stand any work, but I'm feeling fine now thanks to Tanlac, and I'm glad to tell others what it is that gave me relief.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

CAPE TO CAIRO ROAD FACILITATED BY WAR

When the British are ready to complete the Cape to Cairo Railroad they undoubtedly intend to divert, far to the east, the central section of the line between Broken Hill, Rhodesia, and Senaar, on the Blue Nile, a little south of Khartoum. They will thus avoid the great tropical forest in the Belgian Congo and secure solid ground for the track through German East Africa and British East Africa to Senaar, where the last rail will be spiked in the completed route between Cape Town and the Mediterranean. Moreover, the road will form a direct junction with the great Central Railway in German East Africa, completed in 1914, which spans the colony from Dar-es-Salem, its late capital on the Indian Ocean shore, to Lake Tanganyika.

Before the war the British presented this matter to the German authorities, urging strongly that the building the Cape to Cairo route through German East Africa and British East Africa would greatly help the development of both colonies. Germany replied courteously that the proposition was impracticable as it was not the policy of the German Government to admit foreign railroads to its colonies. This correspondence attracted little notice, but Sir Charles Metcalfe, long connected with the work of Cecil Rhodes as engineer of railroad consruction, called attention to it in a paper he sent, two years ago to the Royal Geographical Society of London.

The Cape to Cairo enterprise was, in fact, confronted by a tremendous difficulty. The only way to carry the railroad north through Belgian and British territory is to stretch it for 400 mies from Stanleyville to the Nile through the densest and least penetrable part of the equatorial forest, where nature wages most effectiv war against intrusion. Even the most forbidden of these forests will be conquered, some day, because they are very rich in things that men want. It is estimated that the rubber, essences, oils, and other forest products which periah every year in these gloomy solitudes for lack of care or collection, exceed the value of all the industrial enterprises that have, thus far been opened in tropical Africa.

But it can be avoided, the Cape to Cairo enterprise has no desire to force a way through this tremendous tangle of giant vegetation, the great trees rising to 200 feet, the countless smaller trees, which we would think colossal, almost hidden from view by the growth of mosses and of climbing and twining plants, sapping their vitality; the dense undergrowths and the quaking soil where the feet sink in the rottenness, and fetid odours arise. These are not ideal conditions for railroad building; and leading men in South Africa and England say the way is now opening for the fulfillment of the plan that Germany vetoed.

The Germans in German East Africa have bitterly resisted the assaults of the British and Boers who have driven their remnants into the extreme south-eastern corner of the colony, bordering on hostile Portuguese territory.

The proposed divergence of the route through the so-called German East Africa and British East Africa, both among the choicest parts of the continent in their present development and their great potentialities, will add vastly to the usefulness of he realised dream of Cecil Rhodes. The region of the upper Nile will continue to be served by the effective steamboats that, for years, have plid between Gondokoro, far towards the equator and Khartoom; while the Cape to Cairo route will greatly promote the welfare of the two finest colonies in East Africa.

The white farmers on the high plateau of British East Africa have for some years been exporting the wool of their merinos and their wheat and corn; and their prospects will be still brighter if the great trunk line places them in closer touch with their own continent and the rest of the world.

JAUNTS THAT ARE COSTLY.

Trips of Sam Hughes and Officers to Europe Cost Over $30,000.

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—In the House the Minister of Finance tabled the following items:

An appropriation of $34,620 to over the expenditure of the party of officers of the Canadian Militia which attended the British, French and Swiss army manoeuvres in 1913.

Another of $3,194 for hire of motor cars for Sir Sam Hughes during his visits to England and France as Minister of Militia in 1912, 1913 and 1915.

To defray the expenses and other disbursements of the McLeod-Tellier Commission which reviewed the findings of Mr. Justice Galt, of Manitoba, reflecting upon Hon. Robert Rogers, $5,500 is to be appropriated.

A SORDID WORLD!

A member of Parliament the other day, apropos the outrageous conduct of some citizens in offering to serve their country as a war duty without salary, declared his belief that voluntary unpaid patriotic service was a pretence—that everybody had some personal axe to grind.

What a sordid world such a man must live in! No roo min it for the love of country that leads men out to die; no room for the loyal devotion that takes our nurses and doctors overseas to the cruel hardships must live in! No room in it for the quiet sacrifices that thousands of compulsory stay-at-homes make cheerfully for the sake of the flag and their fellows. To such a one the Marseillaise must be a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal, and "Dulce et decorum est pro patria more," an idiot's tale.

I.W.W. Agitators Becoming Menace To War Industries

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.--Grave menace to industries whose continuation at high speed is deemed vital to the prosecution of the war is seen by officials here in the growing activities of Industrial Workers of the World leaders on the Pacific Coast and in the far Northwest.

The movement apparently is nearings its maximum and the full scope of its possibilities is not minimized here. A pretentious programme calling for strikes, lockouts and general disturbances over seven States, or about one-fourth of the area of the country, has been brought to the attention of the Departmen of Justice by field investigators in the affected territory.

Swift and drastic action to check the movement, in so far as it would cripple industries or curtail production of commodities necessary for war, is proposed by Department of Justice officials. In many instances, however, the department labours under the handicap of being unable to proceed until an overt act has been performed.

General Strike Threatened.

Prosecution of strike leaders where justified in the opinion of the department, on charges of conspiracy or under the espionage act, is contemplated in specific cases, but no general prosecution of I. W. W. leaders is expected.

The entire movement, culminating yesterday in the declaration at Spokane of James Rowan, district secretary of the organization, that a general strike would be called August 20 in Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho unless certain demands were compiled with, is regarded by many officials as being political, and not a labour movement. Instructions have been sent fieldworkers to determine, as far as can be done, whether the threatened strike is part of a programme deliberately designed to hamper the government in the prosecution of the war.

District Attorneys in the four States affected as well as in California, Arizona and New Mexico, have been instructed to devote unceasing attention to the situation and to institute prosecutions promptly where justified.

President Has Power to Act.

Officials here were much interested to-day in Rowan's demand for a ten-hour day in the harvest fields. Any organized movement, it was said, tending to prevent or delay the harvesting of the country's crops in any section would come clearly within the class of subjects with which the President was authorized by Congress in the war resolution to deal virtually summarily.

Another industry which already has been affected to some extent by activities traceable to I.W.W. sympathizers is spruce logging in Washington. At one stage of the labour disturbance the government programme of aircraft construction appeared to be menaced, but the situation in his industry has been restored more nearly to normal within the last few days.

A third industry which might seriously be affected in the general I. W. W. strikes, it is said, is copper mining in Montana.

The President's personal investigator, Chief Justice Covington, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, may go to the Northwest and the Pacific Coast to study the situation. The exact whereabouts of Justice Covington were unknown to-day, it was said, by the Department of Justice officials.

Master Percy Luther Shows the Examiner An Excellent Assortment of Vegetables

Percy Luther, the little chap of fourteen, who recited for the 93rd Battalion concerts, and whose father is doing his bit with the same battalion in France, called at the Examiner Office Saturday night with a basket full of vegetables, including Columbus potatoes, corn, onions, tomatoes and all the very choicest.

The basket was full and heavy or he could have brought along carrots, beets and turnips, all grown by Percy and his mother at their home, 75 Crescent street.

The little chap was deservedly proud of their part in the food production campaign and it just goes to show what can be done, and is being done, by hundreds in the city in this direction.

MASTER PERCY LUTHER, formerly known as the little recruiting sergeant of the 93rd Battalion, who is now doing his bit to help win the war by successfully cultivating a vegetable garden.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The order for the meatless days of Tuesday and Friday in each week during the war is now in force at the hotels, and like all loyal citizens, the proprietors are complying with it. In that case one would suppose that when no meat of any kind was furnished except fish, the ordinary price for that meal would be reduced, but I am informed that the same price has been charged as for other days, and that the price for every day alike has been raised, instead of lowered, in some case or cases at least. When only bacon and beef are barred. There is no reason why veal, lamb, or some other meat should not be substituted, when the price remains the same, if not increased, although vegetables are now only half as dear.

Is this owing to the inefficiency of the Government in keeping down the high price of living or to the action of the intemperate temperance people, whereby the hotel business has become disorganized and two of our principal hotels closed up, and now we are on the rocks for the want of hotel accommodation?

Yours truly,

INQUIRER.

THE WEATHER

By way of contrast to the present comparatively cool weather conditions, it is interesting to note that a year ago to-day was the hottest day of last summer. On both the 20th and 21st of August last year the temperature was up to 99 degrees. The night of the 20th was, however, warmer than the 21st, therefore the 20th holds the record for the year.—W. P.

Huge Crop Of Berries Around Stoney Lake

Many Cottagers Will Have Well Filled Pantry Shelves as Result of Their Efforts

The Stony Lake housewives have been varying the routine of shore dinners, picnics, etc., this year, by taking advantage of the wonderful crop of blueberries and wild raspberries that Dame Nature has provided. Old-timers at the lake fail to remember when these berries were so plentiful and the pantry shelves of the city residents of many of the Stony Lake colony will groan beneath the weight of sealers of the luscious fruit. Every other day has been canning day at some of the cottages. A Toronto woman, who went home the other day, took back with her no fewer than 78 quart gems of preserved wild raspberries. Even now, with Labour Day drawing near, there are many raspberries left and still some blue-berries, although the crop is not as good, or the quality of the berries as fine as at first. It seems a shame that the fruit which was so generously provided this year could not have been taken advantage of by more people. Huge quantities of both blueberries and raspberries dried on the bushes for the want of someone to pick them.

Lindsay Farmers To Pay 45 Cents An Hour For Use of Tractor

LINDSAY, Aug. 18.—Mr. A. A. Knight has had another tractor arrive for use by the farmers in this county, the machine arriving in Lindsay yesterday.

It is a Sandusky machine, manufactured in London, Ont., and according to reports, combines all the latest improvements in its mechanism.

The implement will be rented to farmers who are behind with their plowing at 45c per hour, the said party to board operator and pay for gasoline and lubricating oil. About seven acres of land can be ploughed in an ordinary day. Much depends upon the soil in regard to number of acres ploughed and cost of fuel.

In one instance the Case tractor which has been in use around here for some time, the operator turned over nine acres of ground in twelve hours. This work was performed on a farm near Sonya when everything was suited for the performance of a big day's work, but seven acres is the average in ten hours.

Mr. Knight says that he has orders from thirty farmers now who want their ground tilled, but those who are short-handed will receive first attention or in other words the tractor is intended to help out those who cannot cope with their work, and not for the man who has teams and idle men of his own to perform the duty.

FACTORY BEING MOVED.

KINGSTON, Aug. 18.—The tinplate mills at Morrisburg, a concern promoted by J. Wesley Allison, which ran several years, is being dismantled and the machinery transferred to Hamilton. The company was capitalized at $1,000,000 and Morrisburg put in electric works for the company at a big expense, which it now has on its hands.

779 Buildings In One Of The Military Camps For New Army

SPARTANBURG, S.C., Aug. 18.—Of the 779 buildings to be erected at Camp Wadsworth, to which place the New York troops will be sent for training, 350 have been completed, and more than three hundred are going up. The camp is beginning to show definite shape, and what were broad fields of cotton and corn and forests of yellow pine and oak a few weeks ago are now serrated rows of houses assuming form under the hammers and saws and trowels of several thousand workmen. Twenty cottages a day is the building rate.

When the constructing quartermaster, Lieutenant-Colonel John K. Kilpatrick of the New Jersey National Guard, arrived in Spartanburg, less than a month ago, absolutely nothing had been done at the Spartanburg camp. In one day Colonel Kilpatrick met all the city officials, went to the camp site, looked over the situation, made a tentative layout of the camp, and in four days he had blue prints ready, contract let and the clearance of the camp grounds under way.

Since that time things have moved swiftly. The neat cabins and rustling fields of four weeks ago have been supplanted by a teeming city almost completed, with streets laid out, crushed stone roads being built, water mains laid from the Spartanburg reservoir, nine miles from the camp to the camp's own water tanks, already in place, a network of pipe lines laid hroughotu the camp and buildings for eighteen regiments of soldiers assuming tangible shape.

Spartanburg is getting ready for the soldiers. The city has a population of 30,000, and city officials and the Chamber of Commerce are aware that special efforts are required to care for the needs of a sudden accession of 40,000 soldiers. Spartanburg business men are asked to co-operate in the matter of prices of supplies for soldiers, and "no gouging" is to be the motto. The citizens will place a large sign in the public square in the city with the motto: "Soldiers First! Welcome!" The sign is to indicate the policies to be adhered to while the New York soldiers are here. Any one who attempts to charge the soldiers fraudulent prices will be held to account by the city officials.

Harry Brant Badly Hurt

Former Peterborough Shortstop "Beaned" in Central League Game

The many friends in Peterborough of Harry Brant, the clever little former shortstop of the Peterborough Canadian League ball club, will be sorry to hear that he was very painfully injured in a recent game. Brant had been playing a stellar game in the short field for the Grand Rapids team, leaders of the Central League. A Grand Rapids despatch says:

Grand Rapids, Aug. 18.— Shortstop Harry Brant, of the Grand Rapids team, who was hit on the head by a pitched ball here Sunday by Winchell, of Evansville, was reported as out of danger to-day, although he was in a serious condition for 48 hours. It is not expected his injury will affect his playing. Physicians were alarmed for him when hemorrhages developed after he was taken to a hospital Sunday.

THORPE BACK WITH GIANTS.

NEW YORK, Aug 19.—James Thorpe, noted Indian athlete and Olympic champion of 1912, was sold back to the New York National League Baseball Club by Manager Mathewson of the Cincinnati Nationals here to-day. Thorpe was sold to Cincinnati by the local club last April.

BURNS OF TIGERS DRAFTED

DETROIT, Aug. 18.—First Baseman Geo. Burns of the Detroit American League Baseball Club to-day was notified by the draft board in his home district, in Philadelphia, that he must immediately report for physical examination. Burns was examined here Monday.

PERCY RUBIDGE PLAYED IN BENEFIT LACROSSE FOR RED CROSS

Percy Rubidge a veteran lacrosse player, formerly of the old Peterborough team, played third defence for the Calumet team on Saturday, when they tied St. Catharines at a big athletic field day in Chicago in aid of the American Red Cross. The proceeds exceeded $8,000, sufficient to buy one million cigarettes and 60,000 packages of "makins" for the American soldiers.

Huns Accept Defeat At Hands of Canadians

troops are utterly regardless of the lives of their men, and as soon as one division has spent itself in a frantic effort to recover the lost ground another is sent forward to the sacrifice. The Fourth Guards were cut to pieces in yesterday's counter-attacks and during the night a new division, the 220th, was brought up. Passing through their lines without stopping. These fresh troops attacked at 4.30 this (Saurday morning on the Bois Hugo sector, north of Hill 70. The attack was accompanied by a projection of enemy liquid fire and gas. Our watchful artillery turned upon the Germans an effective barrage, which caused heavy losses, but they continued to advance with the utmost determination. At a distance of only seventy yards from our line the machine-guns were turned upon the attacking groups, and they broke and ran for cover.

Better luck initially, but no greater eventual success, attended their effort to break through south of St. Laurent. There the enemy penetrated our first line trench, but were driven out again as the result of a counter attack at once organised. In these desperte struggles there has been much use of the rifle, bayonet and bomb. The losses mount up, but all the competent authorities give the assurance that those of the Germans are far greater than ours.

One of the most heroic deeds put on record in the Canadan corps since the war began is that of a runner of Colonel Ormonder's Alberta battalion. The Company to which he was attached was hotly engaged near the Chalk Pits, and he was given a message to take back to the battalion headquarters over ground on which shells were falling continuously. He had not gone far when he was seen to fall, and another runner was at once sent out with a duplicate of the message. The second messenger was killed midway on his journey but two hours afterwards the first one arrived at the battalion headquarters with his left arm blown off near the shoulder. His terrible wound had been roughly dressed in the field, and the messenger, far spent from loss of blood, had then staggered on to do his duty. He was removed in a dying condition, but he carried his message to its destination.

A fine example of bravery and resourcefulness was given by a Russian private in the same battalion. As the platoon to which he belonged approached the Chalk Pits they came under machine gun fire. The Russian, going forward, found the muzzles of two machine guns sticking out of the entrance to a dugout. One of them was in action sweeping the line of advance. To get in front of it, the only way of tackling the crew, concealed in the entrance, meant instant death. A piece of planking lay nearby. To the Russian it was a heaven-sent weapon. With it he struck the protruding gun barrels, and they and their crews went clattering down to the bottom of the dugout whence came cries "kamerad, komerad." At that moment a rifle bullet struck the elbow of the Russian and deprived him of the use of one arm. Holding his rifle, with its fixed bayonet, at the charge, in one hand, he ordered the Germans to come out. They came, an officer and five men, who were duly turned in with their machine guns.

Extracted His Teeth Now He's Without Plate

Peterboro Soldier's Grievance Will Be Investigated by the War Veterans

The executive of the Peterborough branch of the War Veterans have some peculiar grievances to look after at times. For instance a new member reported his case at club headquarters to-day. He is a Peterborough man with two sons overseas. He himself, anxious to do what he could, enlisted in a Forestry Battalion and went overseas. He did his bit in Scotland until he was injured and then he was invalided home and given his discharge. In January an army dentist in Scotland extracted twelve teeth from the local man, who was informed that he would receive a plate in the course of a few weeks. He is still waiting for the new teeth. Moved from one point and another in Scotland and England and finally to the discharge depot at Buxton, he was always told that he would receive his teeth at the next stopping place. At Buxton he was informed that he would get them at Quebec, and at Quebec the cheerful information was handed out that he would receive them in Peterborough. And now he is informed here that he has been discharged and is not entitled to the plate. Not much satisfaction to a man who has sent two sons to the front and enlisted himself. Anyway here he is without nearly all his teeth, and unless the War Veterans get justice for him, he will have to buy a new plate himself to replace the teeth that the army dentist extracted.

BIG STORM AT STONEY LAKE

Building On Mr. T. H. G. Denne's Island Was Struck by Electric Bolt

Stony Lake was swept by a violent thunderstorm at 1 o'clock this morning with a heavy down-pour of rain, a vivid display of electrical fireworks and peal after peal of thunder that kept cottagers and campers awake. The lightning was unusually bad, but so far as is known, very little damage was done. A bolt struck a tree on the island of Mr. T. H. G. Denne and then practically demolished one of the out-buildings of the cottage. No one was injured, although the occupants of Mr. Denne's cottage were certain that the house, iself, had been hit.

Off to Kingston.

The 57th Regiment, C.E.F. quota, consisting of three officers and sixteen men, will leave for Barriefield camp to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon on the 1.30 train, orders to this effect having been received on Saturday. They will become part of the Eastern Ontario depot battalion at Barriefield camp. This is the first squad of recruits that has left Peterborough on their way east for a long period. Capts. Lech and Watt, and Lieut. Quinn are the officers who will accompany the detachment, which has been recruiting here since the Canadian Defence Force was abolished.

Kingston, Aug. 19.— The School of Signalling at Barriefield Camp is to close this week, as, according to a new order, no more signalling instruction is to be given in Canada. Major D. E. Mundell has been district signalling officer for the past year and a half.

MARIE DRESSLER AT THE EMPIRE

The Greatest Comedienne Playing in "Tillie Wakes Up" To-night and To-morrow

A play of laughter, more laughter, and still more lauzhter. This character of Tillie has been made popular all over the world by Miss Dressler in previous record smashing stories. The present vehicle gives her a better opportunity to display her large comedy abilities than any of the previous ones and after this piece has been showing a short time, Tillie will once more be known as the peer of all comediennes. The World forces have given their promising light comedian, Johnny Hines, an excellently suited supporting role with Miss Dressler and be more than makes the most of the many big opportunities presented. The whole cast has been selected with an eye to the best comedy results and the laughs will all come freely and without any necessity of forcing by the use of ridiculous make-up.

The sealer holds a quart and the peas were purchased at Denne's Flour and Feed Store.

De Daval Employees Compare Vegetables

During the past few weeks employees of the De Laval company have been comparing the results of their efforts in the greater production movement. Judging from reports they are not only skilled in the manufacture cream separators, silos, dairy supplies and gas engines, but many of them might qualify as market gardeners and probably farmers. Somebody brought in early peas or carrots, proudly displayed them at the noon hour and the end is not yet. It was a comparatively simple matter to slip a few of the smaller vegetables into a pocket and carry them to work without attracting unnecessary attention, but the competition in its sequence is arriving at the cabbage and cauliflower stage, and squash and pumpkins are just over the rise of September, and there is a possibility that even these will be dragged to the shop introducing a new producer, or bolstering up reputations that were made earlier in the season. Mammoth potatoes and elongated cucumbers have been among the bulkiest specimens produced and there is no doubt that many of the workmen have been quite successful in their garden work. It may be that some of them will exhibit their greatest productions at the agricultural exhibition.

ONTARIO'S CROP IS BIG ONE

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—Three hundred million dollars is the total value of Ontario's crop this year, according to approximate estimates of experts of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. One-half of this is represented in hay and one-quarter in oats, with the remaining one-quarter in wheat, barley, corn, and other grains.

One of the very best laxatives is bran, and in every household where there are children bran bread should frequently be on the table.

$2,000,000 Loss In Destruction Of Munitions Plant At Dragon

One Killed and Six Injured—Property Damaged For Miles Around the Plant— Munition Men Are Homeless.

MONTREAL, Aug. 19.—One man dead and six more or less seriously injured is the known human toll taken in a terrific explosion, or series of 52 explosions, yesterday morning at the powder plant of Curtis & Harvey Co., Limited, at Rigaud, Que., that literally smashed most of the houses in the village and broke windows and shook houses miles away.

Two hundred and fifty men were in the plant when the first explosion occurred. Some of these, on escaping, were hysterical from the shock, and expressed the belief that more than two hundred must have perished. The dead man was Gordon Shortrede, an Englishman, an expert, who was employed as foreman at the plant.

CAUSE PURELY ACCIDENTAL

The momentary loss is placed at $2,000,000 by Vice-President Curtis. It was an accident, pure and simple, according to Mr. Curtis, due to a chemical reaction in the flaking section of the plant and was not due to neglect or any defect. "The thing which happened," he said, "might happen in any plant at any time."

MARVEL NOT MANY KILLED

In view of the fact that the village of Dragon, in the vicinity of the plant, was almost wiped out by fire, and that tons of metal were distributed around the country for three quarters of a mile, the ground being dotted with twisted fragments of iron pipe, boiler plate, etc., a portion of a boiler weighing over a ton flying half a mile away, it is marvelous that there was not a heavy loss of life. The first explosion occurred at 8.50 a.m. There will be an inquest.

MUNITIONEERS RENDERED HOMELESS.

One of the explosions blew down a number of houses in Rigaud, where most of the munitioneers live, and farm houses in the vicinity also caught fire.

The C.P.R. track runs close to the plant, and as a precautionary measure train service was suspended for a while. A relief train made up in Montreal, bringing doctors and nurses, reached the scene soon after noon, but nobody could approach the ruins because of the tremendous heat for hours.

Provision was made by the people of Rigaud for accommodating the homeless munitioneers.

DRAGON VILLAGE SHATTERED.

Trainmen who got away from the scene of the explosion stated that forty houses at Dragon, a little village near the factory, occupied by workmen in the plant were blown down by the force of the explosions.

The whole countryside was covered by a dense copper-colored smoke at 10 o'clock.

HOUSES DESTROYED A MILE AWAY.

Passengers on a C.P.R. train which passed near the scene of the disaster said the missing list was large, because everybody in the factory rushed into the open country when the first explosion occurred and had not returned when their train left for Montreal.

The extent of the explosion may be judged from the fact that two farm houses over a mile from the plant were destroyed.

WIRE CONNECTION SEVERED.

The explosion blew up the telephone and telegraph system, rendering most difficult to get information out of Rigaud.

EXTENT OF THE PLANT.

The plant was comprised of a large number of small buildings and the structures alone cost several million dollars. The stock of raw material for making explosives was also particularly expensive.

The plant, with adjacent grounds, covered five miles square. Five thousand men and women are employed in the factory.

If the curtains do not draw easily this can be remedied by rubbing the pole from end to end with paraffin; you will then find the rings slip along quite easily.

LONDON BEER GREW STATE WAITING FOR AMERICAN SOLDIER

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Sun prints the following as a special cable from London: "An American soldier, one of the contingent that paraded here Wednesday, went into a saloon to get a glass of beer. It was served warm, as is the custom here, and addressing the barmaid, he asked: "Isn't that beer a little stale?" To which the barmaid replied: "Why shouldn't it be? It's been waiting for you for two years!"

OBITUARY

HIRAM S. ARMSTRONG.

Word has been received here of the death of Hiram S. Armstrong, Irma, Alberta, formerly of this city. The late Mr. Armstrong for many years was leader of the Mark street choir. Ashburnham, and moved to the west fifteen years ago and has been ill for some little time back. His many friends in this city, will regret to learn of his death.

River Thieves Even Syphon Gasoline Leave Tanks Empty

Thefts of gasoline, carburetors, spark coils, electric lamps, wrenches, and other tools have been reported recently from launches that moor at the Otonabee boathouse wharf. These disappearances are not, however, confined to Reeve Rye's river rendezvous. There is scarcely a spot on either bank for miles that may be considered safe. The thieving has centralized at the foot of Lock street for the simple reason that the opportunities are multiplied there by the number of launches.

Shortly before noon one day recently a man filled his tank with five gallons of gasoline preparatory to taking several friends for an afternoon sail. He went home for lunch and in due time gave the engine a twist and started for down the river. Two hundred yards away the craft coughed weakly several times and finally emitted a last heave and died. The host leisurely attempted to revive it but his first confidence gradually vanished as he sweated in the toil of trying to make the thing work. He was utterly unsuspicious of the tank for a long time, but on examination, when every other part of the machinery responded to the usual tests, found the tank empty. Some one had syphoned the five gallons during luncheon, leaving only enough to drive the engine two hundred yards.

Then, another case mentioned is that of a theft of six gallons from Detective Newhall. It was stated that after he discovered his loss he prepared a mixture, of which only one pint in two gallons was gasoline. The rest was made of materials guaranteed to leave the engine helpless until it could be cleaned out. And these are only two of a number of gasoline thefts. From one statement it is advisable to put articles of any value under lock and key and throw in bolts and bars for real safety. And after that keep a watchman on guard. In fact some launch owners have spent long vigils watching their craft, but the fact that they were separated left an opening for the sneak thief who actually walked in and off with some of the lunch fittings.

The river territory is outside the jurisdiction of the local police, but it is likely that they are not overlooking a chance to clean up the baffling thefts of late.

ITALIANS BAG 7,500

ROME, Aug. 20.— The Italians in their offensive on the Isonzo front, begun yesterday, have crossed the Isonzo river and already have taken 7,500 prisoners, it was officially announced by the War Department to-day.

Held On Charge Of Defaulting Board

William Gill recently employed at the Metal Products Company suddenly left the city and it is alleged, an unpaid board bill. Chief Thompson sent out a S.O.S. or some such call and the alleged defaulter was arrested in Toronto as he stepped from the train. He boarded here with Mrs. Conners at the corner of Murray and Reid streets, a soldier's wife with eight children. He is being brought back to the city.

Social and Personal

Mrs. A. Di Stefano and children, from Rochester, N.Y., are visiting her mother, Mrs. Chartren, Bolivar Street.

It has been announced that Capt. (Rev. Father) A. B. Cote, who is chaplain with the Canadian forces in France, has been granted leave of absence and will visit his parents in Lindsay for a short time.— Lindsay Post.

Miss Geraldine Carson returned to the city on Saturday, accompanied by Miss Mary Carson, of Picton.

Rented Automobile Took The Count On Gravel Road Side

The rented automobile habit which has recently bloomed as a "sport" of the livery business, is stated by the authorities to offer a growing menace to traffic. A week ago a youth barely missed causing a serious accident on the Chemong road. At that he tore the side trimmings off a Chevrolet. Yesterday seven or eight young men rented a "bus" and hit the ditch after a short but merry dash out the gravel road. The front of the car was badly dinted and it was otherwise crying for help which the youthful party spent hours by the roadside in trying to provide.

Business Men Accused of Falsely Saying His Son Was Ill.

ORANGE, N.J., Aug. 20. —G. Howlett Davis, proprietor of the Standard Music Roll Company of Orange, has been slated to appear before the Examining Board of the Fourth Essex County District, sitting at West Orange on Friday, to show cause why action should not be taken against him for making a misstatement to the board to-day.

Mr. Davis appeared before the board to-day and informed them that his son, Howlett S. Davis, who had received notice to appear to-day, had been ill in bed for the past four months. A few minutes later the son walked in for examination and denied his father's statement.

THE DEVIL RESIGNS TO THE KAISER

The Devil sat by a lake of fire on a pile of sulphur kegs; his head was bowed upon his breast, his tail between his legs; a look of shame was on his face, the sparks dripped from his eyes—he had sent up his resignation to the throne up in the skies. "I'm down and out," the Devil said—he said it with a sob—"there are others that outclass me and I want to quit my job. Hell isn't in it with that land that lies along the Rhine; I'm a has-been and a piker and therefore I resign; one ammunition maker with his bloody shot and shell knows more about damnation than all the imps of Hell. Give my job to Kaiser William, the author of this war—he understands it better a million times by far. I hate to leave the old home, the spot I love so well, but I admit that I'm not up-to-date in the art of running Hell." — Exchange.

WILSON MEANS TO SHAME PACIFISTS THROUGH THEM

WASHINGTON, D.C., August 18— The United States Senate will be turned into a veritable Hyde Park, and full opportunity given for every pacifist Senator to spread his views on peace on the record at as great a length as he desires, as soon as the pending revenue bill has been disposed of, which will probably be toward the end of next year.

This is the desire of President Wilson, it is stated on excellent authority. The administration Senators, who had been planning to cut off a discussion of peace terms by closing the doors and forcing the pacifists to talk to empty galleries, and without any speeches appearing in the record, so that they could be sent free through the mails are vices from the White House, to let the pacifists have their day at court.

But, following that deluge of peace oratory, there will be a vote, and the little band of followers of "Battling Bob" La Follette will be snowed under. The President is understood to feel much as he did during the time when the same men now making a loud peace noise were interested in another pro-German manifestation the proposal to warn American citizens of armed merchantmen of the entente powers. The cloakroom gossip was so strong at that time that Speaker Clark and the majority leader, Kitchin, of the House of representatives, told the President the McLemore resolution, which warned Americans off these ships, would pass two or three to one.

Whereupon the President demanded a vote, and greatly to the discomfiture of the pro-German and Pacifists, who only wanted to talk, a vote was finally had, resulting in an enormous majority in favour of laying the resolution on the table.

There is the most intense indignation among most Senators, and members of the House, and of course, among officials of the administration, at the scandalously pro-German attitude frankly taken by the Pacifist group. It is pointed out that La Follette, Gronna, Vardaman, Gore and others of this class have stood, since the outbreak of the war in Europe, for every single proposition which would give aid and comfort to Germany, or would give embarrassment to England. They took up the cry against the alleged illegality of the British blockade. They wept in public over starving German babies during the fight to permit the sending of milk to Germany—which would have led, and of this they were perfectly aware at the time, to an open rupture with the Entente. They refused to get excited when the Lusitania was sent to the bottom. They rather resented the fact that Americans had dared—despite warning—to sail on her. They attempted to warn Americans off armed merchantmen and finally in the closing days of the last session, they, and a few others, talked the armed neutrality bill to death.

OUST SPECULATORS AND CUT LIVING COST SAYS LONDON MAN

DETROIT, Aug. 19.—J. B. Clarkson, manager and director of Hope Gibson's Sons, Limited, London, England, in an interview here to-day, says living is now cheaper in London than in Detroit. All British food speculators have been put out of business. "Do the same in this country and you will have solved the high cost of living problem," he declared.

OLD POTATOES GO BEGGING FOR BUYERS IN MONTREAL MARKET.

Old potatoes, now that no person wants them, are being offered on the Montreal market from $1.00 to $2.00 per bag. That is certainly a big drop from $4.00 and $5.00 charged at the time of spring seeding. If the old potatoes which are now rotting in many parts of Canada had been placed on the market at the proper time, they would have gone a long way towards relieving the short-

A Never Failing Way To Banish Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty.)

No woman is immune to superfluous growths, and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable always to have some delatone powder handy to use when the occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water, and spread upon the hairy surface; in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuss. Be sure however to get real delatone.

PRIZE ROSE GIVEN NAME OF HEROIC FRENCH GIRL

PARIS.— The 'Emilienne Moreau' one of the new roses that won a prize in the annual competition at the Bagatelle Rose gardens, was named after the heroine of Loos, the girl who helped save British wounded under fire and even shouldered a rifle to help the soldiers drive the Germans from the town in the great battle which resulted in its capture.

It is a magnificent white rose with large petals and with a foliage of a very deep green.

The Edith Cavell, one of last year's productions at the Garatelle gardens, was shown alongside it.

SUDDEN DEATH AT BOBCAYGEON

BOBCAYGEON, (Aug. 20.—On Saturday afternoon, Aug. 18, death came with startling suddenness to Mr. Wm. Mitchell, bailiff of the local Division Court. For some years the deceased has been in failing health, but has been able to attend to his duties, and do a little light gardening. Saturday morning he was down street, returning about eleven o'clock. At the noon hour he split a little wood to kindle the fire and prepare something for Mrs. Mitchell, who was temporarily indisposed. Soon after he was taken by a hemorrhage and before medical aid could be secured had passed away. The deceased was born on the boundary between Verulam and Somerville and until declining health compelled his retirement lived on the paternal homestead now occupied by Mr. Chas. Pogue.

By his first wife he had issue of one son. His second wife was Miss Wray, who, with two sons, Wray and Clyde, and one daughter, Mrs. Moore, all of Toronto, survive him. Two daughters predeceased him.

Mr. Mitchell was a consistent member of the Methodist church and an ardent Conservative in politics. He held strong temperance views and was a man of upright principle, whose departure will be lamented by a wide circle of friends.

FALL OF LENS IS IMMINENT

LONDON, Aug. 20—The Times editorially says: "General Currie and the Canadians have consolidated their gains east of Loos and resisted every attempt to eject them. They were twice counter-attacked on Friday night before the mining suburb of Cite St. Auguste, and for an hour or two the enemy gained a trifling advantage, of which they were quickly deprived. West of Lens the Canadians are drawing closer to the town, and it seems highly unlikely that the Germans can long remain there. It has been pointed out that our new positions command important German lines east and south-east of Lens, and the assumption that the enemy will resist from street to street in the town itself is premature. Their salient is becoming very contracted, and should soon be untenable."

Canadians Capture More Hun Positions

New Posts Give Them Splendid Command of Situation

By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press Correspondent in France

Canadian Headquarters, Aug. 20.—North-west of Lens, amid a nest of trenches and railway cuttings which forms the last line of German defence in that quarter, our men have succeeded in establishing strong posts in a support trench which was the scene of desperate and indecisive fighting two days ago. These new posts give command of the last bit of ground from which the defenders of the city could overlook our advance from the west. They are now in a hollow all around the front which swings about Lens in semi-circular form.

The eastern exits from the city are now subjected to a constant and harassing fire of the artillery and machine guns. This makes the bringing up of provision and supplies of ammunition very difficult.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN RAID

At two o'clock this morning a trench raid on the enemy's front north-west of Avion resulted in heavy fighting, in the course of which a considerable number of the enemy were killed in hand-to-hand fighting. The Avion front was strongly held by the Germans as protection to Sallumines, a large mining village to the south-east of Lens, where many guns withdrawn from the German forward area to escape capture are now located.

German prisoners speak with bitterness of seeing their guns in process of withdrawal while the infantry wast sent forward with insufficient artillery support. The loss of guns still appears to be more important in the eyes of the German commanders than the loss of men.

The enemy has been very active in the air recently, and has been bombing our back areas more freely than for some time past.

ARE DEFENSIVE TROOPS ONLY

The haughty Prussian is becoming a little less sure of himself. A battalion commander just taken prisoner says that the Canadian troops are better than his own men, who can now be regarded as defensive troops only, and have not the qualities required for offensive operations. This is a remarkable admission considering its source.

Housewives After Fresh Water Fish

Want Some Information as to a Likely Drop in Price

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—Toronto housewives demand fresh water fish. As a result of an article in the morning papers that the Food Controller intended to import fresh-water fish from Lake Nipigon, some over-zealous members of the feminine sex caused a lively stir in the various fish centres to-day, by enquiring as to the likely drop in price.

During the summer months eighty-five per cent. of the demand for fish is for those caught in the fresh lakes and streams of Canada. "Canadians are not a sea fish-eating people," said Mr. Leonard, of Carter and Leonard, "and they do not take to the sea fish, especially during the warm weather. Cod and haddock are out of season and are too heavy for this time of the year. It would be the best thing in the world if the Government will bring fresh water fish for distribution at reduced prices."

At the present time while fish and trout are selling from 15 cents a pound to 18 1-2c, and, according to a number of the dealers, if this fish could be placed on the market at a minimum price the consumption of meat would be lessened considerably.

Although many of the dealers have increased their price almost 3 cents during the last month owing to the scarcity caused by the large shipment sent overseas, a few of the exclusive fish men have retained old prices to accommodate old customers, at a loss to themselves.

GOVERNMENT CAN EASILY REDUCE PRICE.

The fish men state that at present they are paying as high as 13 and 14 cents a pound, wholesale for fresh-water fish, which allows them little or nothing in the way of profit. Greased paper has increased to 7 cents a pound, which takes a minimum of $10 a week off any profit which might be realised outside of other expenses.

According to a representative of the Gallagher Fish Company, there is no reason in the world why this fish cannot be placed on the market at a greatly reduced price if the Government takes the question in hand and deals with the large fish buyers, who are largely responsible for the high price of fish. Over $2,000,000 worth of fish is netted in Ontario waters annually, the bulk of which has hitherto gone to American markets, which has increased the price here, but if the catch from Orient Bay and Nipegon waters is diverted for consumption, in Ontario, there is no reason why fresh fish cannot be laid out for 9 to 10 cents a pound and retailed to the public at 12 cents or two pounds for a quarter.

RELIABLE MEN NEEDED.

It was the unanimous opinion of those in the trade that reliable men with thorough understanding of the business should be chosen to look after the interests of the consumers. "Stale fish do more to hurt the trade than anything else," said Mr. Pitt of St. Lawrence Market. "Although the fish which has been brought in lately was in fairly good condition when it arrived, the shore fish being placed on ice within a few hours of the time it is caught, and the steamer fish set on the ice immediately, and finally packed in barrels of ice and shipped in refrigerator cars, the fish must be of the finest quality to be palatable." Therefore it is highly essential, be of the finest quality to be brought in if the people are to be encouraged to consume more fish and thus conserve on other foodstuffs."

One of the best signs to look for in buying fish is seen in the enstal of the eye. If the eye appears bright and almost popping out of its head, the fish can be relied upon. When it is sunken and dull the fish is beyond doubt stale and of inferior quality.

NEED FOR LEADERSHIP.

Canada is suffering—but the sacrifice is patriotically welcomed, from the conditions created by the war, and from deference to the demands of duty, but it is perhaps suffering more from lack of authoritative and official leadership and example.

The United States has put the ban complete upon the use of all sorts of grains for the purpose of spirits distillation; and this waste of food materials is at an end, except for legitimate medicinal, industrial and commercial purposes. The prohibition is so complete that liquor interests declare that the stock of spirits for beverage purposes will be exhausted in six months or a year, and that whisky as a domestic production will be extinct.

What is the relation between these facts and the fact of lack of leadership in Canada? The relation is very obvious. The United States government has set the example of the popular national sacrifice it demands by resolutely forbidding the waste of food material in the manufacture of the greatest national waste and wastage of any country, strong drink.

The Canadian government has shown an example of disregard for and contempt of the spirit of the popular and national will. We have a decree of a government official forbidding the use of wheat for distilling, as a concession to the demands for conservation of food material; a most trifling and inadequate act, since wheat is virtually not used in distilling. Last year only 27,000 pounds of wheat were used for making whisky of the 98 million pounds of grain used for the purpose. In view of the necessity of conserving food material for public use the fact of forbidding the use of 27,000 pounds of wheat in a year and permitting the continued use of 98 million pounds of other grains is a mockery.

In this and other things, the Premier and the government who are supposed to give lead, impulse and example to national saving and thrift reveal what the country is suffering from, lack of leadership.

The government, through Hon. Mr. Hanna and otherwise, is calling upon the common, every-day people to save, stint, sacrifice and, in a sense, starve themselves, in order to preserve food grains for export to Britain and her allies, yet the government does not show the example by checking greater waste in the waste of converting grain into the greatest waste of manhood and national morals that can come to any country.

We are in the throes of a mighty crisis; at a time when strong leadership is insistently demanded. The people of Canada will not be content with academic and partisan plaudits of the splendid share Canada has contributed to the winning of the war. It has done so in spite of apathetic and pliant leadership and opportunist administration.

Canada has done well in the war because the free spirit of her patriotic people has brought into being an army of the finest soldiers in the world. What they have done has been done against many handicaps; and the part the authorities have done has been doubly costly through blundering, if not corrupt, war administration; and this has been in no small degree due to its internal dissensions, due to weak leadership and a faltering guiding hand. It is no fiction to assume that Premier Borden has been more controlled by circumstances and influences than he has been a guiding and controlling influence in the administration of national affairs.

At the beginning of the war Nationalist, anti-British influence had great sway in his cabinet, and all along a discredited politician has according to general consent been master of the administration.

Sir Robert Borden was the nominal head, but not the real head. His attitude towards the Minister of Public Works, has evidently been one of compliance with his demands. Mr. Rogers was convicted by the finding of a Royal Commission of grave political misdemeanours, sufficient to close the career of an ordinary political sinner, who did not hold the Prime Minister in the hollow of his hand. He gave him a white-washing commission that cleaned him of his stains to the partizan view, but left them more distinct in the dispassionate view of the public. And, even today, in face of Sir Robert Borden's attempts to bring some sort of order out of Cabinet chaos, Mr. Rogers is credited with leading a counter intrigue and swinging into line behind him a big contingent of Sir Robert's supporters, in an attempt to prepare for a general election by methods that have won for Mr. Rogers the right to boast of his ability to "win elections." Even the fact that Rogers has resigned his portfolio does no more than accord with the confusion at Ottawa and throughout the country due to spineless government and national leadership.

No one will accuse Sir Robert Borden of being crooked, but how can a Premier be straight that bends constantly to sinister political and other influences?

"AFTER THE HORSE IS STOLEN."

In Parliament on Thursday last, Sir Robert Borden in denial of a suggestion that there was "collusion" between the Nationalists of Quebec, and "my government or the friends of my government," used this language as reported in Hansard:

> I desire to make a most emphatic, unreserved, and comprehensive denial of this statement. There is not, and never will be, any connection or collusion whatever between my friends and supporters and those of the Nationalist party of Quebec. I regard the attitude of the Nationalist party of Quebec in this war as unpatriotic, and I consider that it is the first duty of myself and my friends to assist in defeating that party and to prevent it, so far as we are able, from being in a position to exercise any political power in Canada.

Sir Robert Borden is mistaken, if he thinks that he can at this late day by repudiation "save his face" in respect of his alliance, connection, compact and partnership, with the disloyal party. His "emphatic, unreserved and comprehensive" repudiation of Nationalism ,after it has, with his countenance and co-operation, "put the fat into the fire," represents a tardy repentance—locking the stable after the horse is stolen.

The cut-purse that passes his swag to a confederate, and mingles with the crowd as "honest" as any of them, can no more justify his claim than can Sir Robert Borden, who throws away the political wallet, after he has taken all the political profit from the anti-British cult of Nationalism, disclaim responsibility for the national disaster his encouragement and bed-fellowship with it has wrought.

The Examiner has repeatedly contended for, and showed cause for, recognition of the fact that for years there has been an actual alliance between Sir Robert Borden and "my government or the friends and supporters of my government," with the Quebec Nationalists. The Globe in an article printed on this page, takes the same line of reasoning and statement of fact The Examiner has repeatedly urged the fact and menace of the sinister connection between Nationalism and the Borden government and—through his leadership and compliance—the Conservative party leaders.

Sir Robert should be ashamed and humiliated by publicly and officially admitting his past connection with Nationalism, after the mischief has been done to Canada, and the benefit reaped by his party. He should shrink with shame while acknowledging by his present repudiation, his alliance and that of his supporters, with Nationalism.

If, as is the fact, Nationalism preached by its leaders, and encouraged by Sir Robert Borden, has debauched the patriotic sentiment of Quebec, and led astray the simple habitants; stirred up a spirit of hostility to British institutions; preached hostility to helping Britain in her wars; killed recruiting in Quebec; and by reflex influence dampened the ardour of voluntary enlistment all over Canada—if this has been the result of treason encouraged, fostered, rewarded by the Prime Minister of Canada, his responsibility is not to be met by tardy and opportunist repudiation of the instrument he has used in the interest of retaining power.

There can be no doubt that Nationalism, with all the evil it has done, with all the unity of national effort in the war it has destroyed; with the evil political passions it has stirred; the heart-burning, the discord and potentiality of graver conflict, owes its effected power for evil, the present situation of confusion, and conflict of national interests, to Sir Robert Borden and his party associates.

It was they that encouraged Nationalism; in the Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election, the election of the first Nationalist to Parliament, was cheered and applauded by Conservative leaders, led by Sir George Foster, and with subsequent aid and co-operation, put Nationalism on its feet.

In 1911, the Quebec and Eastern Ontario complement of the flag-waving campaign was a Bourassa-Borden co-partnership. Bourassa, the arch-Nationalist, was brought into an Ontario constituency, and from a Conservative platform, under the folds of the Union Jack, preached treason to British institutions. Twenty Nationalists were, in a campaign financed by Conservative "gold," as Sir Sam would say, elected in Quebec, and Sir Robert Borden bought their support by promising to "kill Laurier," through killing the Laurier naval policy.

He went better than that. He took three anti-British Nationalists into his cabinet as the advisers of the King they abjured, and has kept the good seed there ever since—one Nationalist minister after another, so that the sweets, the spoils of office—the rewards of treason—should be as generally distributed as possible.

And when the day of reckoning is approaching—now when Sir Robert Borden sees the tremendous harvest of evil his encouragement and alliance with Nationalism has ripened, kicks aside the ladder by whose help he has climbed into, and has kept power, he claims absolution.

At the end of a life of rapine, outrage, robbery and violence, a "murderer barred" of the past thought he wiped out all scores, by building a church or chapel with blood money he had stolen.

How Sir Robert Borden Faces The Nemesis Of Nationalism

For six years Nemesis has been on his trail. He tried to dodge it. He played to evade it. He hoped in the end to shake it off. Perhaps he deceived himself. He did deceive the honest-minded in his party. By loud declarations of loyalty and by persistent evasions he worked hard to deceive the Canadian people. But it could not be done. Retributive justice is inexorable. Nemesis is no respecter of persons. The mills of the gods grind slowly, but their wheels never cease. How small they grind in the politics of Canada was illustrated in broad daylight on Thursday last in the House of Commons, when Sir Robert Borden read a skillfully-worded declaration denying that "there is now some connection or collusion and that my supporters and friends are, in fact, encouraging the Nationalist party in the course which they are adopting. Here are the very words of his "denial," drawn as by the skilly hand of the Solicitor-General, and received as The Mail and Empire reports, with "Government cheers":

> "I desire to make most emphatic, unreserved, and comprehensive denial of this statement. There is not and never will be any connection or collusion whatever between my friends and supporters, and those of the Nationalist party of Quebec."

The man who wrote that "denial" may be an artist with words. The Prime Minister, his colleagues and his supporters may be beguiled by its cleverness. But does he, do they, or does any intelligent person imagine, for one silly moment, that this studied manipulation of the tenses of verbs in 1917 can blot out or obscure the ugly truth of immutable facts that date back to 1911? Of course he can now stand up in Parliament and deny that "there is now"—that "is now" is of of the very essence of his denial. Of course he can swear by all the gods at once, that "there is not and never will be" that cautious "is not and never will be" is the whole scope and compass of his loud-spoken but utterly compromising declaration.

"Now," forsooth!

"What difference can denial "now" make, when the damage to Canada's unity, to Canada's integrity, to Canada's loyalty, was done by Bourassa and the Nationalists, in 1911?

"Never will be," forsooth!

Who cares what oaths for the future may "now" be sworn by the Prime Minister and "my friends and supporters," when he, and they, and their spokesmen in the Press and on the platform in the campaign of 1911, and afterwards in Parliament, had brazen-faced and shameless "connection and collusion" with Bourassa and Lavergne and their organized band of Nationalists? It was then, in 1911, this "brawling brood" of Nationalist traitors were brought forth, fathered by Bourassa, and their nests feathered by Borden when Nationalist leaders. Monk and Nantel and Pelletier, were given portfolios in the government of Canada.

Treason to Canada's honour and disloyalty to British sovereignty were bred in Quebec and up the Ottawa, and in Northern Ontario, when, as leader of the Conservative party, Robert Borden encouraged undisguised and blatant French-Canadian Nationalism in Quebec, and when, as Borden's henchman, Frank Cochrane personally organized Bourassa's campaign in Ontario; and the offspring of that unholy alliance was nurtured and given national prestige when, through Drummond-Arthabaska, the leagued Nationalist-Conservative hosts, marshalled by George E. Foster, were encouraged and cheered on in their campaign of "anything" to beat Laurier.

It is quite proper, quite becoming, and altogether fitting, that the Prime Minister of Canada should "now" say:

> "I regard the attitude of the Nationalist party of Quebec in this war as unpatriotic, and I consider that it is the first duty of myself and my friends to assist in defeating that party."

but that attitude is no more "unpatriotic" to-day than it was in 1911, when it was recognized by Mr. Borden in its campaign of anti-British Nationalism, or when it was rewarded by him with choice Cabinet portfolios for Bourassa's nominees. They say nothing now that they did not say then, and said repeatedly, with great plainness of speech, and in Borden's very presence. The "Nationalist party," against whom he now disclaims, would never have had national significance, or national power for harm, or national opportunity for the weakness and disgrace and peril to the Canadian nation, had Premier Borden not openly and deliberately denied his "duty" as leader of the Conservative party in Canada, and flagrantly and recklessly betrayed his trust as Prime Minister in a British Dominion.

The Globe says to-day what it said in 1911, scores of times, in front-page prominence and with editorial emphasis. That campaign was a Bourassa-Borden cabal. It was a Bourassa-Lavergne undertaking. It was a Nationalist-Tory triumph. The profits of that whole disloyal adventure were to Borden's political advantage. They helped to make him premier. They secured for him whatever of party power was in the early years of his Premiership. His repudiation of the Nationalist party "now" does not wipe out either for him or for his associates, or for the Canadian people the piled-up humiliation, discord and peril which now menace the nation.

There is no use blinking the inevitable and inexorable retribution. The chickens of 1911 are coming home in 1917. And the end of their desperate coming is not yet. Please God, this ill-bred and long-nursed disloyalty, which has brought such confusion and heartbreak to Canada and the Empire, may not bring civil war. But whatever comes will be the logical and inflexible outcome of what, through the past half-dozen years went before. Nemesis has been on the trail of the Prime Minister. It hall to come. Here it is.

And Nemesis, while it may be slow of foot, never is fooled or dodged, and while it may seem to be delayed it never is put by. Here it is. What a Premier soweth that shall he also reap.

But by the unerring reach of the organic law of national life, Canada also is involved in this retribution which Nemesis brings to the Prime Minister.—The Globe.

A Famous New York Street.

Few of the thousands of people who pass the corner of Nassau and John streets every day know the early history of Nassau street. And yet right at that corner is a bronze tablet which gives in concise form the following historical information:

"Nassau Street, Known Originally as 'the Street That Runs by the Pye Woman,' Was Laid Out About 1695 and Was Named in Honor of the House of Nassau, Whose Head at That Time Was William the Third, King of England and Stadholder of the Dutch Republic. Nassau Street Became Identified With the Jewelry Trade More Than Half a Century Ago."

The bronze tablet is on the exterior of the building at the northwest corner of Nassau and John streets. It was erected by the Maiden Lane Historical society in 1916.—New York Sun.

William De Morgan.

In spite of himself William De Morgan became famous. He deliberately violated all the rules made for the guidance of novelists who seek to become popular. None of his novels was addressed to the greater public that is avid for the latest thing of the moment in fiction, but nevertheless they reached that public. He was a law unto himself in the novels that he wrote during his marvelous career that spanned only ten years. It is doubtful if in English literature or in any other can be found a writer whose life and literary career are comparable to his. He was an old man when the world of readers came to know him, and his age was an asset toward celebrity. At seventy he was hailed as eagerly as Kipling was hailed at twenty, and in his way he was no less a prodigy than the younger writer.

The Emerald.

The emerald has been known since early times both in Europe and in certain parts of the orient, where its attractive color and rarity have endowed it with the highest rank and a varied lore. Its name may be traced back to an old Persian word which appeared in Greek as "smaragdos," mentioned by Theophrastus over 300 years before the Christian era, and again in Latin as "smaragdus," seen in the writings of Pliny, who particularized somewhat on its properties and supposed medicinal virtues and was even shrewd enough to suspect its identity with the much more common beryl, although eighteen centuries elapsed before this suspicion was verified by scientific proof.

It Looks As If Rogers Controls Ottawa Situation

Ottawa, August 20.—There is now every indication that prior to dissolution and election, the government will bring down a "Franchise Bill"—and a fairly stiff one too. The government itself may not be aware of the fact, and Premier Borden may not yet have reached a decision. Conservatives in the House have, however, decided upon this course of action, and at present they have the bit in their mouth, and Hon. Robert Rogers for their leader de facto.

They are determined upon a Franchise Bill which will disfranchise all naturalized aliens and their children for a certain number of years, the time of its duration to be specified. The strong feeling was made manifest in the House at yesterday's sitting when Mr R. B. Bennet (Calgary), speaking during the discussion of the Northwest Mounted Police estimates, protested against the diminution of that force. It was needed, he declared, amidst pronounced approval, to cope with alien enemies. In more than a dozen cases recently the Calgary man declared, barns and crops had been destroyed, presumably by "the enemy within our gates."

The situation within the Conservative party in Parliament seems to be rapidly nearing a crisis. Premier Borden, Sir Thomas White and Hon. Arthur Meighen, with Sir Clifford Sifton, are understood to be working out plans of their own, while the bulk of the Conservative members of the House, restive under procrastination and delay, are rapidly drifting to the standard of Hon. Robert Rogers. It looks as though Mr. Rogers now commands the situation.

Stevenson's Wife.

A half caste sailor once said, "Mr. Stevenson is good to me, like my father, and his wife is the same kind of man."

King Tembinoke said of Mrs. Stevenson, "She good; look pretty pleuty chench" (sense).

Perhaps they both meant what the poet Edmund Gosse so well expressed when he wrote of her as being "so dark and rich hearted, like some wonderful wine-red jewel."

But the best tribute in Mrs. Stevenson's praise came from the pen of her husband.

Our Coal Supply.

The United States coal supply is nearly one-half that of the entire world. Estimates put the available coal supply of the United States at 3,538,500,000,000 tons out of a world total estimated at 7,397,533,000,000 tons. China ranks next to the United States in available supply, estimated at 1,500,000,000,000 tons; Great Britain, 180,000,000,000; Germany, 164,000,000,000, and Canada, 100,000,000,000 tons.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

Had she only known it, she need not have worried in the least: but she was not subtle enough to recognize that her father was more amused than anything else by their neighbor's cumbrous attempts at personal ornamentation—always of the cheapest and the most unsuitable sort. Polly thought it horrid of him to so ostentatiously mention the widow's pea-green hair-ribbons and pink belt in combination. It was horrid of him, as a matter of fact, too, though not in any sense that Mrs. Short (or Polly either) could appreciate. Richard Mason was one of those rare, delightful and intrinsically demoralizing creatures who can enjoy making fun of others without giving the fact away.

Mrs. Short and Polly helped Enid into Polly's bedroom and on to the bed, and as though utterly exhausted by her abnormally acute emotions, Enid sank back upon the pillows almost, it seemed, lifeless.

"She's real pretty, ain't she?" said Mrs. Short, gazing down at the clearly cut little features. Polly's eyes were dark and deep, as, after a moment, she answered:

"Yes, she is."

Her father's voice called her to the other room, and Mason said to her in a low voice:

"Now, that Mrs. Short is here, I don't mind so much leaving you two girls here alone."

"Alone!"

"Yes! I've an idea that Mart has gone out to help out this mess somehow, and I don't want to——" he hesitated.

Polly was just enough like him to laugh.

"To miss anything?" she suggested.

Mason laughed, too, and hugged her. "That's it! I won't go far, but——"

"Dad, dear," she entreated, "you know that you have had two or three attacks of your heart lately! You will be careful?"

"You bet I will! I'm not going to get mixed up in anything, only—I cannot just stay at home, like a rusty gun! Look out for that little girl, Poll! She's worth it, if I'm not mistaken."

He kissed her, took his rifle from the wall, and went out with his swinging step. Polly followed him anxiously with her eyes. His heart had acted badly of late, and she had hated to see him go out into the night alone, especially when times were hazardous, like these. She made a move as though to follow him, for—after all—she adored him more than anything in the world; but Mrs. Short's voices topped her from the door of the bedroom.

"She wants you," she said almost unctuously, the tone was so kind. "The sweet, pretty young thing wants you! I've got to be getting home. I have loaves in the oven, and the Lord knows what has happened to them by this time! Good night, dearie!"

Polly politely evaded the caress that accompanied the adieu; she felt that if the Widow Short should ever by chance kiss her she should die.

Mrs. Short departed, and with a curious sense of dread about her that she could not explain to herself, Polly went in to Enid.

She had spent many lonely hours at the Toll Gate before this, but never before had she known this sense of isolation, of—was it, could it be, —dread? She and the Valley girl were alone on the mountain top, evil things were abroad, and the old wooden clock in the dining room was ticking out the hour of nine.

Nine is not a late hour in cities, but among the peaks.—Polly went forward to the bed to meet Enid's worried eyes are tranquilly as might be.

The girl on the bed put a question which was curiously disconcerting:

"Is everything all right?" she said.

CHAPTER X.
THE HOLD-UP.

Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
Profaners of this neighbor-stained steel,—
Will they not hear? What, ho! you men, you beasts,
. . . . From those bloody hands
Throw your mistempered weapons to the ground. . . .
—Shakespeare.

Down the steep, zig-zag trail, Jack Radnor urged Champion, with the sighing mountain winds, chill and strange-savored, in his face as he rode. The night is always alive, more alive than by day, but this seemed to the young man more instinct with vitality, potentialities, sounds and suggestions and stirrings that he could give no name to, than any that he had yet experienced. Two or three times he could have sworn that he heard stealthy footsteps on the train and in the close packed shrubbery on either side. More than once some echo came to him as he halted on a precipitous open space to get his bearings, which was not so very unlike a human voice. But he knew that the hills were deceptive and that sounds are magnified, diminished and transformed even more trickily than on the water. Also he knew that he was in a highly wrought mood, and had too much sense to trust his own senses! If Liberty Ridge and the trail that led down from it seemed more alive and more busy than would be normal on a late summer evening, he was content to put it down to his own imagination.

But one or two things happened he could not attribute to fancy; horsemen passed him on the trail, in evident haste. And once at least he heard a distant sound that could only have been a shot. The sound reminded him of the fact that he still carried Martin Hale's revolver in his pocket. And he fell to conjecturing what business Martin Hale might have so urgent that he was obliged to borrow Enid Forsythe's horse for the purpose of seeing it through. He could not very well help trying to piece together all the little things, trifling in themselves, which had gone to make up a rather puzzling evening.

And then conjecture ceased for a time, and recognition of something very wrong somewhere, took its place in his mind.

He was riding along a part of the trail which slanted along the mountainside overlooking the Valley. The trees below him happened to be somewhat scanty just there, and he could see far down the gorge, beyond the Warm Sulphur Springs colony, beyond the railway station, beyond the livery stables, the switchback, even the last stiffly graded turn of the little railway line. It was well after 9, he knew, and he evening train from Covington was long overdue, but delays were common enough up there, where there were no other trains to connect with on schedule time, and where even a slight wash out might put the track out of commission for quite a bit. But there was the train, as surely as he was sitting on Champion's back, and it was standing still, and — he had descended a third of the mountain side, so could see clearly enough—there was one or two inexplicable flashes along its length—especially at teh end of it where he knew must be the engine.

Then and only then did his formless suspicions and intuitions take forcible shape.

"By God, that's it!" he exclaimed aloud. "They are holding up the train!"

Champion had never felt spurs from this peculiar rider before, but he felt them now, and bounded forward with a startled violence that nearly sent them both down into the gorge; for the trail was at no point a very ample one, and notably narrow just there. Radnor sat as far back in his saddle as he could, gave the horse his head, and told him to "Go like the dickens!"

Which Champion did. He had been a real horse in his day before an impoverished Englishman sold him to the Warm Sulphur Springs livery to cover a big bill. Two or three years of bad hack riding had saddle-galled him and put him a little out of condition, but Jack Radnor had been riding him all summer ,and he had recovered nearly all his old spirit and efficiency. He could still go like the wind when occasion demanded it, and when the man whom he had by this time accepted as his master gave him to understand that speed was what was wanted of him, he gathered himself together and tore down the steep dark trail at a breakneck pace.

"God love you, old fellow!" praised Jack Radnor, leaning well back and clinching with his knees so that there should not even be any extra drag on the stirrups, "I only hope and pray that you don't break your knees, nor get let down for all time!"

Champion was sure footed, and he had a good horse's pride in those slack reins and stirrups. His god trusted to his making it, and he should not trust in vain. Most of the way it was too dark to see the path and Radnor wondered just when the two of them would go over a cliff or turn a somersault. Once Champion stumbled, almost stopped, and Jack felt the big muscles gathering under his leg-grip. The next moment Champion rose clean in the air, jumped not one but three fallen logs across the trail, recovered himself gallantly, and stretched himself again to that racking downgrade gallop.

Another open part showed the train again, and now it was lit by a lurid light that flickered against the dark.

"The damned cowards!" said Radnor through his teeth, "they are sacking the passengers out of the cars by setting the train on fire. Hurry, old chap—hurry. Let's have all that's in you!"

They were nearing the bottom now, and there was one mad chance that Radnor could take. Champion had done all and more than any horse could do; now, he gathered up the reins once more, and to his mount's bewilderment—he was getting countless surprises to-night, was Champion —swung him off the trail straight down the mountainside to the road that led through the Valley.

Champion in his day had made some rough runs but he had never encountered anything like this. It is nerve breaking for a horse to go at full speed down hill; but when to that is added the hazard of hillock and gulch, fallen trees, and clutter of undergrowth, sudden dips and falls, and sharp rises that have to be scrambled over somehow at expense to temper, patience and legs—then the thing becomes torture to mount and man alike.

Escaped Operation For Piles

THESE are the kind of letters we are receiving almost daily in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for Piles. Surgical operations are usually quite unnecessary, and in some cases Dr. Chase's Ointment has effected cure after operations had failed.

Mr. Samuel Parker, Fruit-grower, Grimsby, Ont., has made the following declaration before Mr. W. W. Kidd, Notary Public of the same place:—"I do solemnly declare that I was troubled with bleeding Piles, and was advised to go to the hospital to have an operation performed. My wife said 'No; get a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment.' I did so, and have used it according to directions while living in Manitoba, and obtained a complete cure, for I have never been troubled with Piles since. I am now seventy years of age, and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all sufferers from Piles."

Mrs. T. Pierce, Oak Bay, Charlotte County, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I had a very severe attack of Piles. In fact, I had suffered from them for years, but never had so bad an attack as this one. I was obliged to remain in bed and suffered exeruciating pains. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital and be operated on, as they were so bad that nothing else would cure them but an operation. At this time I heard that Dr. Chase's Ointment was a good treatment for Piles, and began to use it. I persisted in its use until cured, and know that it saved me from a surgical operation."

This statement is vouched for by Rev. Thos. Pierce, Methodist minister, Oak Bay, N.B.

HARVESTERS! LOOK!

36,000 farm labourers are wanted in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, for the harvesting of the crop.

The Canadian Northern Railway will operate the first excursion trains for the West, leaving Toronto Union Depot at 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. August 21st, and 10 p.m. August 30th, and running through solid to Winnipeg.

The equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars, lunch counter cars, and, in addition, the railway will continue their last year's innovation of keeping a special car for the accommodation of single women and families, and of placing it in the train where the occupants will be separated from the other passengers.

The territory served by the Canadian Northern Lines offers the widest choice of employment with high wages, but regardless of where you may locate, remember we give the best service to Winnipeg, where you will re-purchase to final destination, no matter on what Line it may be.

For leaflet showing special train service, with dates, number of men required at various points and other information, apply to Thos. Mark, Town Agent, or General Passenger Department, Canadian Northern Railway, Toronto. d-t-s-tf-36

CONSCRIPTION IS DISCUSSED BY A LOCAL SOLICITOR

Dear Sir,—Your brilliant editorials are always good reading, and for the greater part are generally right, and I agree in the main with your remarks on Dr. Pugsley's "new idea," but will you allow me to point out a serious side to the problem raised by the Hon. Dr.? It is worth discussion.

We are about to say legislatively that every man capable of bearing arms shall, willy nilly, go out and lay down his life, and for so doing, the country will fix his pay. He will have no voice in the question of what his time is worth, to say nothing of the risk he runs, and if we are to be guided by the way soldiers and their dependents have fared in the past, his prospect of getting fair remuneration for his services is ,to say the least, remote:

The munition worker is a free agent; he, unlike the conscript, can refuse to work unless he gets what he pleases to consider adequate pay, and needless to say, his estimate of the value of his time is considerably higher than is vouchsafed to the conscript.

Now, is it not the fact that each is serving the country for the same purpose? And is not one as necessary to winning the war as the other? The soldier is of no use without the ammunition, and the ammunition is of no use without the soldier.

On what logical grounds are we justified in compelling one to work for an arbitrary pay, and not compel the other Dr. Pugsley may have put the point in an impracticable way, but is there not a big truth underlying his grotesque proposal. Either the munition maker is receiving too much pay or the soldier too little, for there can be no manner of doubt that the services of the one are as valuable as those of the other. And it should not be forgotten that the munition works are full of aliens who ought either to be conscripted by their won countries or interned. It is a great game of "Safety first" for the munition worker both as to his pocket book and his keeping a whole hide.

If Dr. Pugsley had proposed that there should be a conscription of labor in the munition shops as well as on the battle fields he would have been more logical. If we have the right to say that this man shall go and fight, why should we not have an equal right to say that that man shall go and make shells? I cannot for the life of me see the difference, and there are many others like me. And if we have the right to say that this man shall risk his life, and work and give his time for a dollar a day and board, whether he is satisfied with the pay or not, we have an equal right to say that the other fellow, without risking his life, shall work and make shells for the same dollar a day and board. Mind you I am not saying the remuneration is sufficient. I think it inadequate, but it is undeniable that the great discrepancy between the soldiers' pay and the munition workers, or perhaps he and that the conscript has a very real grievance on the financial question. It ought to be worth as much to throw a bomb as to make it, with a little thrown in for the risk of having one thrown back, and why I should be compelled to leave a $5 a day job to go and throw bombs for $1 a day, whilst the other fellow is not compelled to leave his $5 a day job to make the same bombs for me to throw, at the same rate of pay as I get for throwing them, is more than I can understand.

It may be said, "Oh, but you cannot make the people work against their will, that would be slavery." My reply is, how can you make people fight against their will? Is that not the same thing? The only excuse for any compulsion of a free people is public necessity. It is a good enough excuse. I do not quarrel with it at all; but surely the same excuse ought to be a sufficient one to compel labor!

A lot of cheap political capital is being made by one cry and another, with the word "conscription" as the main subject. One says conscription of wealth is the thing; another demands the confiscation of war profits; the cornering of food is denounced as another cry. Dr. Pugsley raises the point that too much is being paid to the munition workers ,or perhaps he means that the soldiers are underpaid, but he is careful, like all the rest, to do no more than raise a cry, and we may safely assume that there will be no attempt to do more than cry. The grievance exists, but there is not one politician in the country that will lift so much as a little finger to redress them, and if the opposition were in power to-morrow it would be exactly the same. If the war is to be won quickly we shall have to submit to compulsion, and more compulsion, and the quicker we realise it the better.

Yours truly,
J. GUISE-BAGLEY.

U-Boat Skipper Kills Financee On High Seas

An Atlantic Port.—Lars Larsen, an elderly man, but still vigorous and erect as an arrow, arrived here aboard a small cargo steamship and told a story of U-boat romance, which, for dramatic interest, is perhaps unparalleled by anything ever narrated concerning the submarine warfare of atrocity.

Mr. Larsen was an officer aboard the Swedish stemer Ada, which was sunk last June 12 while it was on the way from Gothenburg, Sweden, to Hull, England. Following is the story:

"Before the war begn a young German became acquainted with my son Sven, and before long was a frequent caller at our home in Stockholm. He fell in love with my daughter Minna, who was 16 years old and considered beautiful. The erman, Hans von Tuebinger, was an art student and had come to Sweden to study some phase of his calling, which he said he could not find in any other country.

Love Was Mutual.

"I never understood exactly what that phase was; but, at any rate, it wa the means of bringing unhappiness to me nd mine and so I curse it, and I would curse him, too, if I did not know that he was the innocent instrument in the hands of fate and that he would gladly have averted the tragedy of which he was the unwilling cause.

"Minna soon grew to return the love of the good-looking youngster, and when the broke out and he received notice to present himself at once to the naval unit to which he belonged in Germany, the poor girl was ready to die for grief. Evidently it cost Hans a terrible struggle, too, but he said that he did not believe the war could last a week, and that he would return at the latest in two weeks.

'And it was arranged that when he did return he and Minna were to be married.

Killed His Sweetheard.

"Two months elapsed before we got a letter from Hans. It told us of his having been detailed to submarine work and of the unhappy time he was having counting the hours when the war was to end and he could come to claim his bride. After that we never heard from him again.

"For a while Minna bore up bravely; but she began to fade perceptibly. My wife died three months after Hans had gone away, and as my son, Sven, was already a sturdy help to me aboard my schooner, Baldar, I decided to take Minna along on our voyages, too.

"Toward the end of April, as we were nearing the coast of England, on a return voyage from the west coast of Africa, a shell struck the Baldar amidships. A splinter of the smashed woodwork struck Minna, and killed her. The rest of us had barely time to get into a small boat and get away before the schooner sank, carrying down the body of my daughter.

"It was only then that we noticed the U-boat from which the shell had been fired. It came close to us and we discovered that the captain of the craft was the man who was to have become the husband of Minna. He also appeared to be greatly affected when he saw my boy and me; and his first question was: 'How is my Minna, and does she still think of me?'

"I pointed to the place where the Baldar had sunk. 'What,' almost shrieked Hans van Tuebiger, 'Minna is dead?'

Son Driven Insane.

"His grief was certainly unfeigned when we told him what had happened. He soon braced up, however, and after saying, 'Well, there is no doubt that war is hell,' he ordered his men to stock our boat with provisions and bade us good-bye. A moment later his boat was speeding toward another sailing vessel, which had just hove into sight. After many vicissitudes we reached England.

"Last June my son and I were officers aboard the Swedish steamship Ada, under Capt. Ternsteon. Again we were nearing the British coast when a submarine fired a shell. There was no delay in getting into lifeboats this time either; but somehow the gunfire did not seem to do the destructive work quickly enough to suit the submarine captain, and so a torpedo was sent into the vessel, and soon it began to settle and sink.

"When the U-boat came close enough to enable us to discern the features of those on the deck we were again almost paralyzed to find that the commander was none other than Hans von Tuebinger, my unwitting Nemesis. I had not noticed my son, Sven. Evidently the horror of the situation had driven the boy insane. When we got close enough to the U-boat Sven leaped to its deck and made a rush for Hans. His hand was at the man's throat, when one of the U-boat's men struck Sven a blow on the head. It felled him and he rolled off into the water.

"This Damned Duty"

"Hans tore off his coat and jumped into the sea after my boy. But it was in vain. Sven did not reappear. The blow had stunned if not killed him. Long the submarine remained there and every effort was made to recover the boy. Hans wept his eyes red and swore he would gladly have given his own life to save my son's. I believe he meant it.

"Do you forgive me?" asked the U-boat captain.

"What else could I do? He certainly was not personally responsible for the atrocities which he had been instrumental in inflicting upon me. 'Duty, duty,' he exclaimed bitterly. 'Oh, this murderous, damned, unspeakable duty?'"

Critical Week For Harvest In Ontario

TORONTO, Aug. 20—Evidence that this week will be a crucial one in the battle of harvesting the crops was most pronounced yesterday. During Saturday farmers appealed to the officers of the Government Employment Bureau and the War Production Club, 15 King street east, for large numbers of labourers with whom to begin this week. From Cayuga, Rev. J. A. Miller, of the Government Employment Bureau, received a call for ten men, and from Kleinburg came an appeal for fifteen city farmers.

Farmers Were Skeptical.

One of the farmers asking for assistance from Kleinburg stated that he had scarcely started his haying. His other work was consequently very far behind, even considering that the crops are late this season. Like many others, he told the same story of not thinking the city people were going to put their shoulders to the wheel, don overalls and go to the fields. For that reason he didn't ask for help sooner. There are many similar cases, and now that the farmers are finding it impossible to get in their crops they are sending in S. O. S. calls for help. To keep apace with these demands an unusually large number of volunteers must be forthcoming this week.

"What we need just now is a number of firms to send in their men," said Mr. Miller to the Globe last night. On Saturday between the government Employment Bureau and the War Production Club about 100 men were placed. Among this number were several men sent in by the Nordheimer Piano Company.

A Meeting To-day.

This afternoon an important meeting will be held of all the organizations and officials interested in the back-to-the-land campaign. At this meeting Dr. W. A. Riddell will present the reports received from the different offices in the Province that have been placing men. When these are tabulated it will be known just how successful the campaign has been and what remains yet to be done. It is stated that a considerable number of men prefer to work on farms in the West, and instead of giving a week or two of assistance in the East are going West on the excursion on August 30.

A Bumper Crop.

Reports being received continue to show a bumper crop in this Province Mr. Wiggins, the Department of Agriculture representative in Simcoe county, informed the Government Employmnt Bureau Saturday night that he had just completed a trip of inspection throughout his territory. He found the hay nearly all in the barns, most of the wheat cut and the farmers busy threshing. The crops looked splendid, he said, and the storms of last week did little damage.

Simcoe County farmers are said to offer the biggest wages to farm hands of any county in the Province. Notwithstanding this inducement more harvesters are still required, and the call is being urgently sent to Toronto for more help.

He Lacked Concentration.

Speaking of a man who was a failure because of his lack of concentration and his inability to know his own mind five minutes at a time, a captain of industry said he reminded him of a hunting dog he once owned:

"At sunrise the dog would start out on his own hook after deer. He would jump a buck and run him for miles. When the buck was on the point of exhaustion the hound's nostrils would catch the taint in the air where a fox had crossed the trail, and he would instantly decide that, after all, fox was what he had come for, and he would turn aside to pursue the fox. Perhaps an hour later, when the chase was growing warmer every minute, his keen nose would detect the presence of a rabbit, and he would go after the cottontail, with the inevitable result that by 4 o'clock in the afternoon that hound would be thirty or forty miles away from home in a swamp with a chipmunk treed!"—Saturday Evening Post.

George and His Legs.

Bit by bit the historical grubbers are digging out the truth about our immortal George. We have heretofore been told that he wore false teeth and that at Valley Forge he unblushingly deceived his ragged and despondent troops with the arrival of ample supplies of ammunition, which consisted of powder barrels filled with sand, and now a correspondent of the New York Sun declares that in the full length portraits of Washington by Stuart, of which there is one in the New York public library, the legs were not his own. "I have seen the letter from Stuart thanking the true owner for his kindness in providing a symmetrical foundation for the bust of the great president and presenting one of the smaller portraits in thanks for his kindness."

Free Speech.

An old negro woman had lived with a certain family in the south for many years. One day her mistress had occasion to reprimand her quite sharply for something that had gone wrong. The negress said nothing at the time, but a little later her voice could be heard in the kitchen in shrill vituperation of everything and everybody, with a rattling accompaniment of pans and kettles. So loud became the clamor and so vindictive the exclamations that Mrs. C. went hurriedly down to the kitchen.

"Why, Lisa," she began in amazement, "who on earth are you talking to?"

"I ain't talkin' to nobody," the old negress replied, "but I don't keer who in de house hyars me."—Harper's Magazine.

What Makes a Good Road.

Everybody agrees that the surface of a road must be oval in its contour, says Farm and Fireside, but not all understand that this oval ought to be as flat as the character of the road material and the lay of the land will permit. With brick or concrete construction the oval may be very flat, because the traffic makes no ruts to carry the water lengthwise of the road, nor does the pavement soften and develop depressions when kept in contact with water. But broken stone (water bound macadam), being susceptible to penetration by water and subject to great damage if frozen while soaked, must be given a higher oval, and for gravel roads a still steeper pitch is demanded.

As for earth roads, the steepness must be governed by the combined influence of a number of factors. Perhaps the leading factor is the quality of the earth in each particular case. And next might be placed the presence or absence of "seeps" or "spouts," while another of these vital factors would be the longitudinal pitch of the highway.

Pocahontas and Mrs. Wilson.

It was on the 21st of March, old style, in 1617, that Pocahontas, loveliest and most celebrated of all Indian women, died in England, on the eve of her projected return to her native land.

The climate of England did not agree with Pocahontas, and she was already in a state of decline when she proceeded to Gravesend with her husband, John Rolfe, and her infant son, Thomas, purposing to take passage on a ship bound for America. She had no sooner reached Gravesend than she was stricken down with smallpox, to which she soon succumbed.

Thomas Rolfe, the son of Pocahontas, had a daughter named Jane, who, in 1675, married Robert Bolling, a young Englishman who had settled in Virginia. Jane had one son, and he in turn was the parent of one son and five daughters. This son's great-great-grandson was William Holcomb Bolling, the father of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.—New York World.

Da Vinci's "The Last Supper."

During the last years of the fifteenth century Leonardo da Vinci executed for the Duke of Milan his masterpiece of painting, "The Last Supper," a wall decoration in the refectory in the monastery of Santa Maria delle Grazie, Milan. Owing chiefly to his use of oil colors directly upon the wall, to neglect and to vandalism, only a ruin of the grand original remains. But, while for purposes of study it is necessary to refer to the many copies by Da Vinci's pupils, the best of which are those by Marco d'Oggiono, in St. Petersburg and in the Royal academy, London, and to Raffaello Morghen's excellent print, the original alone gives the true though faint idea of the wonderful lighting and melting color. The painting was in every respect epoch making, no less in pictorial qualities than in the remarkable composition.

Water Lilies.

Water lilies have a shining appearance because of an oil on the leaves which prevents water remaining on them and clogging the mouths or stomachs, through which the plant breathes. The leaves are large, flat and nearly round.

The Restorative.

"How's your wife's cold this morning?" asked a neighbor.

"Much better, thank you. There's a dance tomorrow evening that she wants to go to."

A Feint and a Faint.

Sadie—Did you ever faint? Susie—Once. But I bumped my head so hard that I fainted really and truly, and I've never tried it again.

The First Clock.

The earliest complete clock was made by a Saracen metal worker in the thirteenth century.

The Uplift.

"Is she a help to her mother?" asked one woman.

"Yes, indeed," replied the other. "She has taught her to say 'culinary art' instead of 'cooking.'"

One of Those Crazy Questions.

"Well, great guns, Jones! I see you're wearing glasses. What for?"

"For a sprained knee, you darned fool! What do you suppose?"

The diminutive chains of habit are seldom heavy enough to be felt till they are too strong to be broken.

Italians Take 7,500 Prisoners In Great Drive Across Izonzo

Occupy the Austrian Front Line Trenches From Plava Clear to the Sea After Successful Drive—Strike on Three Fronts

IT'S HARDEST BLOW YET STRUCK BY ITALY

ROME, Aug. 20. — Italy's drive carried Gen. Cardona's troops across the Isonzo River to-day north of Anhovo and into Austrian front line trenches from Plava clear to the sea.

The official report announcing the victory declared 7,500 prisoners had been captured.

The enemy's losses were described as "most serious." A great quantity of booty was taken in the Italians' forward sweep.

The statement follows:

"A battle is proceeding on the Julian Alps front. Yesterday morning after a bombardment of 24 hours, during which our artillery shelled the enemy positions with ever-increasing intensity, masses of our infantry commenced the advance toward their objectives. To the north of Anhovo (seven and a half miles north of Gorizia), after having brilliantly overcome technical difficulties and the resistance of the enemy, numerous pontoons were thrown across the Isonzo and our troops passed over to the left bank of the river.

"From Plava to the sea, after having crossed the first line of the enemy, which had been destroyed completely, our troops brought pressure to bear upon him. Resisting strongly and being supported by considerable artillery and a large number of machine guns, the enemy offered desperate resistance."

Plava is approximately thirteen miles from the sea coast. It is due west of Kug, where in the spring the Italian troops succeeded in their drive in sweeping the Austrians back beyond the Isonzo. Anhovo is still further to the north, near Tolmein.

Strike on Three Fronts.

Rome, Aug. 20.—Italy is to-day waging a determined offensive against the Austrian lines from the Adriatic to the Alps. Fighting of great magnitude is in progress. The blow is probably the hardest the Italians have yet struck, and early reports tell of initial successes gained by Gen. Cadorna's troops.

The offensive followed days of artillery preparation and extensive aerial activity, during which Italian observers brought the most valuable information to Italian headquarters.

Assaults were launched on the Carso, Isonzo, and Julian fronts simultaneously, the troops working in such concert as to weld the three attacks into one gigantic effort.

Austrian Defences Pulverized.

At many places along the rocky line which marks the front the tremendous Italian artillery fire has actually pulverized the Austrian defences. Front despatches to-day report the enemy hurrying up reserves to back up these weak spots and flinging their troops into play as human ramparts against the Italian advance waves.

It was at these spots where breaches have been blasted in the Austrian defense line that the hand-to-hand fighting was occurring to-day. The defenders bitterly resisted the Italian assaults.

The attack was opened on a tremendous sale, the Italian infantry leaving their trenches on a wide front, as the artillery fire was lifted Word from headquarters was that the attack was expected to be the most effective the Italians have yet attempted.

Italy's Answer to Pope.

Commenting on the new Italian advance, the press says that it, like the British attack in Flanders, will be of service as it demonstrates how the people and armies of the allied countries feel toward the premature peace proposals of Pope Benedict. It is said Austria apparently realizes the gravity of the situation, as announcement is made that Emperor Charles is soon to visit the Austro-Italian front, presumably to encourage his troops.

German Naval Unit Smashed By British

One Destroyer and Two Mine Sweepers Badly Damaged

LONDON Aug. 18.— An Admiralty official announcement follows:

"Some of our light naval forces acting a German bight on August 16 sighted an enemy destroyer at 9.45 a.m. Fire was opened and the enemy destroyer was chased. She was seen to be repeatedly hit and to be on fire, but she escaped through the mist over the mine field.

"Enemy mine-sweepers were sighted shortly after the sighting of the destroyer and a heavy fire was opened on them. At least two of the mine-sweepers were seen to be very severely damaged, bnt, similarly with the destroyer, our ships were unable to follow them owing to the proximity of the mine fields.

"During the engagement our vessels were attacked by a submarine and after the action a second submarine attacked, in both cases without result. Our vessels suffered no damage whatever."

"KAISER'S SPY" ARRESTED.

Karl Graves Asserted He Was Working for the State Department.

KANSAS CITY Mo., Aug. 20.—Dr Karl Armgaard Graves, self-styled international spy, who came into some prominence in 1914, after the publication of a volume of his experiences as "the personal spy of the Kaiser," was arrested by Federal agents last night at the Union Station for being in a zone closed to enemy aliens without permits.

Dr. Graves told the authorities he was working for the Department of State. He also gave out statement that he was on his way to Denver in an effort to obtain papers that would prove the "illegitimacy of the Hohenzollern family."

Among his possessions were found documents relating to the establishment of a Saxon union in this country. The self-styled spy was almost without funds when arrested and poorly dressed.

Next Week Thunder Storms, Says Foster

Weather Report Predicts Lively Times Week Centering on August 20.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross contingent August 18 to 22, warm wave 17-21, cool wave 20 to 24. This will bring dangerous storms on land and water; probably tornadoes in the central valleys and hurricanes on our southern seas. Heavy rains in northern sections and drouth in more southern parts of the continent are expected. Bad time for sea, lake and ocean voyages. Don't forget the time, the week entering on August 20. Watch for that great and dangerous storm.

Next warm wave will reach Vancouver about August 23 and temperatures will rise on all the Pacific slope. It will cross crest of Rockies by close of Aug. 24, plains sections 25, meridian 90, great lakes and Ohio valleys 26, eastern sections 27, reaching vicinity of Newfoundland near Aug. 28. Storm wave will follow about one day behind warm wave and cool wave about one day behind storm wave.

This will not be so great a storm as the preceding, but should be watched as it may be dangerous in some places. Temperatures of the preceding storm will average below normal, while this storm will tend to higher temperatures that will reach very high degrees about last of August.

Crop weather for Winter grain promises good, following Aug. 20, and it will have a vigorous growth, make good pastures and enter the water in good condition. This has but little to do with the question as to a good winter grain yield for 1918. Blue grass fall pastures of 1917 promise good. This and winter grain pastures are important to the live sock industry.

Killing frosts are indicated for some northern stages not far from September 20, and the silos should be filled before those frosts get the green stuff. In middle latitudes the killing frosts will come near Oct. 1, near latitude 40. Near latitude 35 we expect the killing frosts near Nov. 1. Whoever hopes to succeed in farming must provide good silos, and save green stuff, for winter feeding, that would otherwise be lost. By adopting all the best methods of intensive farming the agricultural pursuits will become the best business one can pursue.

Rev. Dr. Speer's Opinion

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—"Some of the footwear of the present day is almost as bad as that of the footbinders in China," declared Rev. Dr. Speer yesterday morning at Westmoreland Methodist church.

"No wonder we have so many nervous wrecks, when people are set up on stilts, as though meant to be mud-waders!"

The pastor was announcing an address at the Epworth League meeting this evening on "The Feet in Relation to Physical and Mental Health," and commented: "I think 'spiritual' might be added as well. Some of the shoes pepole are obliged to wear nowadays cause physical and nervous discomfort that is almost as bad as the superstitious footbinding of China.

"They talk of shortness of leather nowadays. I think it is rather length of leather that is the trouble."

It takes us a lifetime to learn that we are our own best friends and worst enemies.

EXAMINER AND MERCHANTS

Great DOLLAR DAY MONEY SAVING EVENT Will soon be here

GRATIFIED by the enthusiasm of the people over the previous Dollar Days in Peterboro, and urged by the people from outside who were unable to attend the last one owing to bad roads, the Examiner is again co-operating with the Merchants in featuring a Mid-summer Dollar Day.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 22

The date selected should be the most suitable of all the summer season, for a record crowd to attend from outside points. There's everything to come for, and only regrets if you don't. There's a company of hustling merchants preparing a feast unequalled in the history of the city. In any line of goods you want, you will find your Dollar has a buying power you would have thought impossible. As Dollar Day selling is just for one day, the merchants in order to add zest to the excitement, make their offerings look reckless, but it is because they have entered into the spirit of the thing, and they are bound to do their part at considerable loss.

Estimate the NUMBER of these Blanks that will be filled in and Dropped into the Ballot Box at the Examiner Office by 7 p. m. on DOLLAR DAY.

As a guide in estimating the probable number of blanks that will be used, the three previous Dollar Day results may be studied. On the first one, March 12, 1914, with good weather and roads, there were 16,000 blanks dropped into the box at the Examiner Office. On the next Dollar Day, in 1915, with bad weather and impassable roads, the result showed only 10,807 estimate blanks put in the box. On the last summer Dollar Day, held in August, 1916, when holiday season affected the crowd, there were 7,054 blanks dropped in the box. With these figures as a guide an intelligent estimate can be made if the weather and season are taken into consideration.

The Dollar Day crowd is the happiest gathering that meets in Peterboro in the year.

Homburg Was Bombed While Kaiser Was There

COPENHAGEN, August 18.—Allied aviators recently dropped bombs on the bathing place of Homburg, while the German Emperor was staying there, according to a traveller who has arrived here from Germany. The traveller, who was at Frankfort-on-the-Main when it was attacked by French aeroplanes two weeks ago, says it was reported there that the same aviators had dropped the bombs on Homburg. One of the Emperor's two headquarters is said to be in Homburg.

The traveller says that the first bomb dropped on Frankfort destroyed a number of houses.

Casts Out Wife Who Buys Pair Of Costly Hose

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—If a bride leaves $12 worth of goods off the bottom of her skirt to keep in vogue, is it right that she should spend the $12 for one pair of silk stockings to supply the customary covering for the lower extremities?

Mrs. William J. Chamberlain, formerly the beautiful Eugenia Brueck of 516 East Sixteenth street, now the wife of one of Denver's richest men, says she should. Her husband says that since the fashions decree a liberal display of stockings for brides and young matrons they should, of course, be of silk. So far, so good. But he doesn't think there is a silk stocking made, no matter how beautifully transparent, that's worth $12. He's willing to pay $144 for a good, substantial war bride stock that pays dividends in gold, but he don't pay $144 for a dozen pair of stockings for a bride, even though the dividend is love worth more than gold.

Cast Out of "Love Nest."

And that's why, the Kansas City friends of the former Miss Brueck have learned, Mrs. Chamberlain was cast out of the "love nest" mansion her millionaire husband provided for her in Denver and kept out by a policeman stationed at the gate by her husband, who has gone to live at his club.

"I'm a wealthy man," said Chamberlain, "but I can't see the virtue in $12 stockings. And they were just an item in my wife's extravagance. I paid all the household bills, including the upkeep of her automobiles, and all entertainment bills, and gave her an allowance liberal enough to supply her with the most luxurious wardrobe accessories. Within a month or two she'd run up bills aggregating $4,000 for clothing, in addition to those purchased from her allowance."

Objected to Daughter's Photo.

Another rift within the lute of the Denver-Kansas city romance which had auspicious beginning Sept. 2 1915, when the millionaire made the Kansas City girl his bride was the latter's objection to the picture of Chamberlain's daughter. She wouldn't let the picture hang in the house, Chamberlain says, and compelled him to hang it in the garage. She objected, also, to the presence of the picture of his son in the house, and that, also was relegated by her order to the garage wall.

The presence of the policeman at the "love nest" gate was explained by Mr. Chamberlain as a necessary precaution against the total wreckage of the furnishings.

Wrecked Furnishings.

"When we agreed to remove our personal effects, incident to our separatin, I took mine to the club while she started to tear curtains, rugs, and costly linens into shreds. She even broke rare pieces of furniture. When she left the house I stationed the policeman there to prevent her returning to complete devastation."

Mrs. Chamberlain, who has been joined in Denver by her brother, A. F. Brueck of the Kansas City Bag Company, says her aged husband's family was responsible for their differences.

SUMMER RESORTS AND FOREST CONSERVATION.

Most of the larger summer resorts of Canada were asked early in June by the Canadian Forestry Association to urge upon their guests by various means greater care with fire in the woods. The response from summer resort managers has been remarkably good and on the menu cards and advertising literature of many hotels can now be seen warnings regarding forest fires. Many most valuable suggestions for the extension of this plan in the summer resort districts were made to the Association, but these cannot be carried out at present for lack of means. Some of the mottoes submitted to the hotel managers were as follows:

"Do not throw away lighted matches or tobacco in or near the woods. Bush fires spoil the fun for the next man.

"Most of the damaging fires in the woods are set by human hands. Watch yours.

"This resort needs the trees. Play careful with your matches and lighted tobacco when walking through the woods. Never leave a camp fire unextinguished.

"Make this a year of thrift in forest fires. Thrift starts in the head, but works through the finger tips. Careless finger tips toss away lighted matches and tobacco. That's how the big fires start.

Guests are requested to practice every care in keeping the woods in this neighbourhood free from fire damage.

Only the amateur neglects to extinguish his camp fire in the woods."
—Canadian Forestry Journal.

SELF-GOVERNING INDIA.

Object Aimed at by New British Secretary.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Edwin S. Montagu, Secretary for India, will go to India next winter to take up reform of the Government there. Mr. Montagu said to-day that the policy of the British Government with which the Government of India was in complete accord, was of an increasing association and of gradual development of self-governing institutions with a view to realizing a responsible Government in India as an integral part of the British empire. It has been decided that substantial steps in this direction shall be taken as soon as possible.

The Government, Mr. Montagu said, had decided to recognize the principle of granting commissions in the army to Indians, and nine recommendations for this honour had been made.

Dancing Dentist And Wealthy Widow's Jewels

DR. JOSEPH HOMER CHARGED WITH STEALING GEMS IN BOSTON AT PISTOL'S POINT.

Transformed as if by magic wand from society favorite to a prisoner facing trial on a serious charge, Dr. Joseph Homer, dashing Los Angeles dentist, was taken from New York to Boston, where he must answer to the accusation that he robbed Mrs. Madge Wilbur, also from Los Angeles of jewels valued at $16,000.

And while Homer was planning the battle to clear himself of the charge tea tables and buffets in Los Angeles buzzed with the story of his courtship of the wealthy widow who now accuses him.

Homer, in the daytime a dentist with an increasing business and at night a social butterfly, was a dancer de luxy, always welcome at social affairs in the big hotels and clubs.

Just when the dancing dentist met the wealthy widow is not known. But as the threads of the romance were rewoven by dispatches from New York and Boston and by the nods and sotto voce remarks and lifting of the eyebrows at Los Angeles tea tables, it became apparent that Homer ardently courted Mrs. Wilbur while she lived at the various hotels of southern California.

Mrs. Wilbur, who had inherited from her husband a fortune of about a quarter of a million dollars needed dental treatment. According to the Boston police she paid Homer $2,700 for the work and later they made a cross country trip, travelling in the same party.

From the hotels and the dance floors of Los Angeles the story now turns to Boston, where the two arrived some time in May. The eastern officers in telling what purported to be Mrs. Wilbur's statements to them say that after being much together Homer and Mrs. Wilbur quarrelled. After a farewell luncheon, when just as in the novels "all was to be over between them," the dentist at point of a revolver is alleged to have forced the widow to give him her jewels.

He is then supposed to have left Boston and gone to New York, where he took up his residence at Bronxville. There he was arrested. With him in a limousine, the officer said, was a stunning brunette, who later was identified as a society woman. She departed with haste while Homer was taken to police precinct headquarters.

"Ridiculous," was his answer when asked regarding the truth of the charges.

"Terrible," came the echo from a dozen feminine hearts in Los Angeles.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

The Sunshine of His Presence.

"I will never leave you comfortless."
—John xiv. 18.

In the sunshine of His presence,
Day by day,
Let us lay aside the sorrow
All the way;
Let us trust this promise gracious
To His own,
Knowing 'twill be fully answered
From the throne.

In the sunshine of His presence,
Year by year,
Let us walk the thorny pathway
Without fear;
Looking past the way so dreary
To His face,
Helped along the road so weary
By His grace.

In the sunshine of His presence,
In dark night,
Earthly darkness cannot dim, nor
Hide the light;
Let us stretch out hands out to Him,
In the gloom
Knowing in His many mansions
There is room.

In the sunshine of His presence,
E'en in death,
He will never leave His "chosen"
Without faith.
Bought with a price all price beyond
He'll not leave
Those who have walked with Him
alway,
Nor them grieve.

In the sunshine of His presence,
Let us sing,
Thro' the world's dark, dreary roadway,
To our King;
Past the darkness, see the glory
All before;
Thank Him for His loving-kindness
Evermore.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY PARLOR

By MRS. MAE MARTIN

Sue L.: I always recommend quinsoin to put vitality and luxuriance into anyone's hair. It will promptly remedy the dandruff and itching scalp; it costs little, and you can prepare it at home. From your druggist get one ounce quinsoin and one-half pint alcohol. Mix and add one half-pint cold water. This makes enough tonic to last a long time. Apply to your scalp twice a week. This is fine to prevent falling of the hair and premature loss of color.

Daly: Don't worry about being too "plump" when there is such a simple, easy way to reduce flesh without dieting or any strenuous exercise. Get four ounces of parmols from your druggist and mix it in one and one-half pints hot water. Take a tablespoonful before meals. This is harmless and inexpensive, and I think you will find a beneficial change within a week.

Leonora: There is no virtue in an egg shampoo. The slimy animal matter clings to the strands and clogs the pores of the scalp. Try this simple shamopo:—Get some canthrox from your druggist and dissolve a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. It leaves the scalp stimulated and cleaned, and the hair beautifully soft and fluffy.

Polly: You do not need to send abroad for the new, perfect substitute for face powder. Make it yourself at home, by dissolving four ounces spurmax in one-half pint hot water. This is the simplest, purest lotion for making the skin soft and naturally fair. It stays on closely and gives a youthful freshness. When on it seems part of the skin and cannot be detected as can the old-style face powder.

Caroline: Yes, if the tissues of your face are inclined to sag, beware, or you will soon have wrinkles! Here is a good massage cream, which tones and braces the tissues while also beautifying the complexion:—Mix an ounce of almozoin (from your druggist in one-half pint of cold water. Add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply freely. At the first application you will feel the skin contract and you will soon get back the firm contour and a velvety skin. For a good blood purifier, see answer to Maurice.

Maurice: The skin eruptions of which you speak are caused by impure blood, and you must eliminate the poisons from the system before you can hope to enjoy complete health. Into one-half pint alcohol (whisky must not be used) pour one ounce kardene, then add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take one tablespoonful of this old-fashioned blood cleanser and tonic before each meal. This is splendid for that weak, worn feeling, and restores the vital organs to a healthy condition, and its timely use will save much serious sickness.

Fanchon: Certainly, eyes are harmed by belladonna, but this home-made tonic will clear and make them brilliant, while it is strengthening and resting. Anyone can prepare it by dissolving an ounce of orystos (obtainable at any druggist's) in one-half pint of clear water. Use eye-cup or put a few drops in each eye at least once a day. Its bringing effect is immediate.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Appalling Moment

A Russian Soldier Meets Something More to Be Dreaded Than Battle

By ELINOR MARSH

Peter Nichalief was a soldier in the Russian army, fighting with the troops near Riga, which is in the northwestern part of the empire. Peter was wounded, having lost an eye in battle and was discharged from the service so as soon as he was able to travel he prepared to return to his home in the province of Vologda, not far from the Siberian line. He went by rail to Petrograd and there wrote his wife to meet him midway between the capital and his home with a sleigh for the rest of his journey.

Now, Peter had been married two years before and soon after his marriage had marched away to the war. The parting with his young wife was very hard on both him and her. The chances were that he would either be killed in battle or die of disease or be so mutilated as to be a burden to himself if not to others. But now he was on his way home, having lost only one of his eyes, while the other enabled him to keep in touch with the world.

Peter would not have been allowed to keep his rifle had the fact been known. Indeed, he should not have taken it away with him, but he was so attached to it that he could not bear to part with it. He had named it for his wife and carved "Sonia" on the stock. So he carried it with him on his journey home, also a dozen rounds of ammunition.

Peter reached a little town about ten hours' journey from his home in the morning, and his wife was to join him there in the afternoon. Every minute that he waited for her seemed an hour. Just before sunset he heard the tinkling of bells up the road, and a moment later a sleigh appeared driven by Sonia. She pulled up before the inn where Peter was stopping. He jumped into the sleigh and embraced her.

Then Sonia turned to a basket in the rear part of the sleigh and lifted a fur robe and a blanket, exposing the rosy face of a boy a little over a year old.

"Our son?" asked Peter, his face lighting with pleasure.

"Yes; he is our little Peter. I have named him for his father."

The child's eyes opened, and seeing a man's smiling face bending over him he smiled back.

The next morning the sleigh was brought up to the inn, Peter and his family got in and started for home. The wife sat on the back seat with her boy in her arms, while Peter took the reins. The sun shone bright on the snow, but the air was cool and crisp. As Peter drove along his heart was full of gratitude that he had returned to his wife with no greater loss than he had sustained, and there was a great joy in the finding of the little stranger whose coming Sonia had kept from him for a surprise.

The reunited family jogged along, the child lulled to sleep in his mother's arms by the soft tinkle of the sleighbells. The country was sparsely settled, and for a large part of the distance the way led through dense forests. But Peter and his wife were used to that, having always lived in the region.

About 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when they were half a dozen versts from home, suddenly they heard a distant bark. Peter turned and looked his wife in the face, from which the color had receded. Both knew the sound too well as that of a wolf, and they knew the danger.

"If I had only left the child at home!" moaned Sonia.

They at once made preparations for an attack from a pack of wolves. Little Peter was put in the basket and covered with robes. Sonia changed places with her husband, she taking the reins, while he took up his rifle from the bottom of the sleigh and inserted a cartridge in the breach. Then he waited in the back seat for a contest which he felt would very likely come.

The barking continued and drew nearer. Judging from the volume, there must be quite a large pack. Presently a wolf was seen emerging from the wood beside the road. Sonia urged on the horse, and the wolf, left behind, followed at a gallop. Peter lifted his rifle to his shoulder.

When the ex-soldier had last aimed that gun it was at a line of Germans crossing a field. Although a well armed human enemy was advancing upon him and his comrades, he did not feel the fear that oppressed him now. Then he was a part of an army defending Russia; now he was alone and the lives of his dear wife and child were dependent upon him, and him alone. As to his own life he had become used to risking that.

Nevertheless he kept his nerve. He remembered that he had only a dozen cartridges and might have to repel a hundred wolves. He had fought the Germans when all his ammunition had been exhausted and knew the helplessness of one so situated. If he ground his teeth then, what would be his feelings should his dozen shots be exhausted now before he could drive off the wolves or reach home?

Peter was by no means ignorant of defensive warfare against wolves. He reserved his fire, while the brute followed in his wake, and when it approached too closely Sonia whipped up the horse and gained a little on it. Meanwhile wolves were pouring from the woods into the road behind the sleigh. They were yelping and snarling and tumbling over one another, but always keeping their fierce eyes on the object containing what would appease their hunger, for it was near the end of a long winter, and they were famished.

Finally the pack, now united, pressed so closely upon the sleigh that Peter felt it necessary to kill the leader, knowing that there would be a scramble for his dead body, which would occasion some delay. Peter was a good shot and put a bullet between the eyes of the foremost wolf. The beast dropped dead, and, as Peter had expected, many of the brutes pounced upon the body and fought for it. But there were so many in the pack that a number that could not get near the carcass followed on.

A wolf emerged from the wood in advance and made a spring for the horse, which was going at a gallop. Sonia had brought a revolver with her. Its chambers being loaded, she took the reins in her left hand and, drawing the weapon with her right, fired, and the wolf, releasing its clutch on the horse, rolled down into the road. His carcass took off a number of the wolves following.

The yelping and the shots awakened little Peter, who threw off the covering from his face and, realizing that something was wrong, added his own tiny voice to the din. But neither his father nor his mother could spare any time to attend to him, for the former was now forced by the pressing wolves to fire more rapidly, while the latter was emptying the chambers of her revolver upon those that were appearing in the road in front of the sleigh.

Though Peter husbanded his shots as best he could, all were gone at last. Some of the wolves had been killed by him, some had lagged behind, and some had dropped out of the chase altogether. There were now only half a dozen wolves in pursuit, but they were the largest, the strongest and the fiercest of the pack. The leader made a spring for Peter, who brained it with the barrel of his rifle. But in doing so the weapon slipped out of Peter's hand and fell in the road.

While the body of the wolf he had killed was being devoured Peter turned to his wife, put his arms about her and kissed her.

"Goodby, sweetheart," he said.

"What are you going to do?"

"The wolves must have another victim."

"Oh, Peter!"

"It is for you and the child. When the next one springs at me he will take me, but there will be food enough for all of them in my body, and you may escape."

"No; we will die together."

"I will go first. If they require more food it will be your turn next. God grant that I may save you both."

He bent down and kissed his little son; then, standing on the rear seat, was about to jump down into the road when a shot was heard and the foremost wolf fell dead. The rest scattered under shots fired from an unseen enemy.

"Pull up!" cried Peter to his wife.

Sonia drew rein and at the same time several men emerged from the wood on one side of the road.

"We are just in time," said one of them.

But Peter did not hear him; he was locked in an embrace with his wife, while the horse stood panting. Then the mother took little Peter in her arms, while tears of relief flowed fast.

A party of woodsmen working near the road had heard the yelping and the shots and, surmising the cause, had ran toward the approaching din. Having guns and ammunition, the driving off of the remaining wolves was an easy matter.

There was thankfulness in the hearts of Peter and his wife while completing their journey, and as soon as they had reached their home and put little Peter in his crib they fell on their knees side by side and with their arms about each other.

Peter Nichalief's farm was besieged by his neighbors to hear about the war waged so far from them that they got no news of it except when some discharged soldier came home, usually broken down in body and sometimes in mind, to tell them about it. Peter's accounts were listened to in wrapt attention, but on telling of his adventures he always wound up by saying that under the most murderous fire he had never encountered anything so appalling as when the only remaining defense for his wife and boy was his own body thrown as meat to the wolves.

Not long after Peter's return another discharged soldier brought the news that the Little Father had abdicated the throne, and a new era had opened for the Russian empire.

By this time Peter, having become strong again, was seized with a desire to go back to the firing line. That is the singular feature of a soldier's life. While incurring danger many a man pines for safety and the comforts of home, but let him remain inactive for a short period and an irresistible desire comes upon him to get back into those very dangers that had been so intolerable.

Peter would have gone back at once had not Sonia begged him not to leave her, not to tear himself away from their little boy.

Peter listened to her appeals till the import of the stirring events came over him. In the deposition of the czar, the entering of the United States into the contest, he saw a struggle between imperialism and democracy. He believed in the rule of the people, and as one of the people he deemed it his duty to go on fighting for their cause. Then he went back.

Dressing Wounds With Sugar.

Dr. G. Magnus reports to the Therapeutische Monatshefte of Berlin on his success in treating wounds with ordinary sugar. This he sprinkles in a thick layer over a wound that has previously been washed and dried. He covers it with a dry dressing, which he renews every day.

The Journal of the American Medical Association says a great advantage of this dressing is that it does not stick to the wound, but stimulates a powerful secretion, which flushes out the depths of the wound, while profuse suppuration softens crusts and necrotic tissue and gives a chance for healthy granulation below. When this stage is reached salves or transplantation take the place of the sugar.

Naval Gunfire.

In the Napoleonic era the ships opened fire with guns at ranges of about 800 yards. The ships of today open fire at 22,000 yards range, and gunfire begins to be very effective at 18,000 yards. The torpedo as fired from surface vessels is effective up to 10,000 yards range, and this requires that a ship shall keep beyond this distance to fight her guns, says a British naval authority.

Condemns Agitation For Quebec Secession

Archbishop Bruchesi Calls it Thoughtless and Unreasonable.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 20. — In view of the fact that certain French newspapers such as La Croix and L'Ideal Catholique have been publishing articles advocating the separation of Quebec from the rest of the Confederation, and that these papers have generally been considered semi-official organs of the Church of Rome, Archbishop Bruchesi was asked to state his views on the question. His Grace replied that he thought such articles were thoughtless and unreasonable.

"Such papers," he said, "are not in any sense official orans. While they are Catholic papers, their views are merely the views of the proprietors. I have never had and have not any newspaper organ except La Semaine Religieuse, which deals with religious questions. It has nothing whatever to do with politics. The anti-confederation views expressed cannot in any sense be taken as representing my views."

Asked what he thought of the movement itself, he replied: "I think it is thoughtless and unreasonable. I have urged union in Canada and I urge it still. But it may be remembered that the movement against confederation is no new thing. For instance, when the Ne Temere decree was issued seven years ago, a decree which concerns Catholics only, there were those in Ontario who urged the separating of Ontario from Confederation unless the Federal Government denounced the decree. Those who have sent broadcast the statement that anti-Confederation periodicals are official organs of the Church are either deceived themselves or they wish to deceive others. In any event the statements are not true."

Sometimes you can pick out fools by their questions and wise ones by their answers. And sometimes you can't.

Three Are Drowned In A Motor Accident

Car Went Into the River at London Ontario

London, August 20. — Backing down a steep grade and plunging over the river bank a hundred yards above the Springbank pump house an automobile carried to their death Charles For, London's best known Chinese resident, his wife, Lew, and his four-year-old son Eoin, shortly after five o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Tom Wong and Lew Tunk, who were in the tonneau of the car, escaped by jumping as it made its last awful spurt, before plunging into the water thirty feet deep.

Although the park was crowded with picknickers they were in distant parts of the grounds and only a few persons witnessed the accident. The Chinamen who escapted were too bewildered to offer any assistance and a woman who ran down to the river bank could not find so much as a single piece of wood to throw to the drowning father.

Mr. For came to the surface soon after the auto went down and strug-struggled desperately for a short time to keep afloat.

George Arnold, employed at the pump house, hastened to the scene, and threw into the water the only life preserver of the plant. He states that although it floated within a few inches of Mr. For he failed to grasp it. There was no rope near and an attempt to rescue him with the fire hose from the pump house failed. Arnold could not swim and when further help arrived it was too late.

The pulmotor was called from the city but the person making the call did not give any particulars and the car arrived with no dragging irons, and only the apparatus for resuscitation. Fire Chief Aitken, who was attending the civic employees' picnic, was on the scene soon after the accident and took charge of the dragging operations.

A hook and a rope was fastened to the car and an attempt made to pull it from the river in the hope that the child and mother would still be in it. The iron was not strong enough and broke and nothing except diving and sounding the bottom could be done until further apparatus had been rushed from the central fire hall.

To facilitate operations the water gates were raised and when the water had gone down nearly a foot the bodies were found.

The party had been in the vicinity of the pump house for nearly an hour taking photographs and viewing the various beauty spots of the park. They had just entered the car and commenced the ascent of the steep hill, when Mr. For discovered that the speed was not sufficient to carry the machine to the top of the grade. He backed down to get another start and evidently went farther than he intended.

On the brink of the steep slope the car turned slightly and ran along the street railway tracks for a short distance before it finally went over.

There was no protecting fence on that portion of the bank and the machine gathering speed as it went, shot over the river bank, lighting on the rear end. The top which was up evidently prevented the three in the front seat from escaping before the car hit the water.

Ropes attached to the car moved it from its position about 6 o'clock and the body of the little child floated to the surface. A big soldier took the limp little form as it was lifted from the water by a diver and carried it to the pump house. A murmur of pity went up from the crowd and hundreds averted their faces that they might not see cold in death the little boy who had played so joyously near that very spot but a short hour before. Nothing could be done to revive him, and the still form lay within the protecting walls of the pump house until the mother and father were laid beside it. Mrs. For's body was recovered soon after the little boy's, and Mr. For was found at seven o'clock.

The car except for its torn top and shattered windshield, showed little evidence of its fall. The left side of the rear end was battered slightly, but the engine was still capable of running, and the headlights were in working order although filled with water. An examination of the mechanism showed that the brake had been put on to the greatest extent possible.

CHUMS YOU ARE WANTED

Sir: Will some one try and do something to get help to those gallant boys in France. They go into the trenches and come out, only to go back again. Their chums are here. Have they forgotten when they used to go coasting down the hill. The same one did not have to go every trip, and each one had his turn. Chum—it is your turn in the trenches. You raised your hat as we passed out of dear old Peterborough. We left dear friends there. Chums, come over and help us. We need you. Do not wait till we lose what we have fought for. It is yours as much as ours. It is the young men we want—not the boys. Do not wait to be conscripted. Come on, chums. We want to get home soon to see mother. She is waiting.

Your old Chum.

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR SEASON'S HUNT

Forty Moose Seen in Four Days in Abitibi District of Quebec

The crack of the hunter's rifle will soon be heard once more. The hunting season for deer, moose and caribou opens in the Province of Quebec on September 1, except in the counties of Ottawa, Pontiac, Labelle and Temiskamingue, where the open season begins October 1st. Sport will be excellent this year according to reports received at Grand Tunk headquarters in Montreal.

Many sportsmen are planning trips to the new moose country in the Abitibi district of Northern Qeubec, reached through Cochrane, the junction of Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway and the Transcontinental Line. In the hunting reserves there known as Canuck's Camps, moose are more prevalent this year than ever before. This, it is believed, is due to the natural increase and to the fact that the moose are steadily moving into this new region from the more southerly areas. One party just returned from this section sighted in four days more than forty moose. Some wonderful moving pictures of moose have just been taken there. In this Abitibi district there is also considerable bear with some deer and a few caribou.

In Ontario the hunting season opens November 1st, but an order in council has just been promulgated allowing moose hunting in that portion of Ontario lying north of the Transcontinental Line to begin October 10th, and extend to November 30th, making the season considerably longer than in former years.

The transportation authorities are co-operating in every way in the work of attracting sportsmen to Canada, and stand ready to give all available information to the intending visitor.

ALLIES ARE ON THE OFFENSIVE ON NEARLY EVERY FRONT

BRITISH, FRENCH AND ITALIANS ARE ALL ON THE ATTACK

Allies Are Pressing Huns Hard Everywhere On Western Front

Huge Offensive at Nearly All Points From Switzerland to the North Sea---Another Successful Raid By British Naval Aircraft---Italy's Prisoners in Her Biggest Drive of the War Have Reached a Total of 10,000.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, August 21.—The greatest battle of the world-war was being fought to-day. From the sea coast to the Swiss frontier, over 435 miles, the Allied forces were fighting a practically continuous offensive.

France's great assault at Verdun, still driving on to-day, completed the chain of battles which were welded in the forge of war into one gigantic action of unprecedented extent and power.

The great battle started with the Anglo-French offensive in Flanders, extended to the British offensive at Lens, thence to the French attacks around St. Quentin, than to the French offensives at Chemin Des Dames, Moronvilliers and Verdun, anad concluded with heavy artillery fighting in Lorraine and Alsace down to Switzerland.

The West front has never seen such an extensive battle. Nor has the Allies superiority everywhere been so asserted.

To-day the French are attacking the southern pivot where the German lines hinge on their famous Meuse retreat position. The drive comes exactly two weeks after the English attack in Flanders threatening the German northern hold on the coast.

While these two huge offensives developed to-day, the battles around Lens, Arras, St. Quentin, along the Aisne and at Moronvilliers, continued with unabated intensity.

LONDON, August 21.—British naval aeroplanes at midnight last night dropped many tons of bombs on ammunition stores at Middlekerke and German works at Bourgeoise, an Admiralty statement announced to-day.

ROME, August 21.—Italy's prisoners in the greatest of all drives her troops have made in the world-war reached a total of ten thousand to-day. Semi-official estimates placed the Austrian losses in dead and wounded at a minimum of this same figure.

On the three fronts to-day—the Julian, Carso, and Isonzo—General Cadorna's drive was continuing in a fierce combat of men and of guns resounded over nearly a hundred miles of front. The Austrian morale is being steadily undermined.

LONDON, August 21.—The third and most powerful of all German counter attacks to regain ground captured by the British southeast of Epiphy was thrown back by British fire early to-day, Field Marshal Haig reported.

The assault was made after violent artillery preparation and behind a vast sheet of flame thrown by German projectors. The fighting was of the most violent character.

"We hold all positions," was Field Marshal Haig's succinct comment, in detailing the repulse of the enemy attempt.

The British Commander-in-Chief reported an "improvement" in the British positions north of the Ypres-Menin Road, and told of a successful British raid over a wide front in the neighbourhood of the St. Quentin Canal. A number of prisoners were taken.

ROME, August 21.—Cardinal Gasparri said to-day he hoped all belligerents would admit of agreement on four fundamental principles of peace, which he said had already been approved by Britain, France, Russia, Germany and Austria. He declared President Wilson's peace move of last December implied all that was contained in the Pope's programme.

It is not clear what four fundamental principles the belligerents mentioned above have agreed upon. So far as cable despatches have indicated no common ground has yet been reached by any of the belligerents officially.

LONDON, August 21.—By a vote representing 1,234,000 to 1,231,000, the Labour party members to?day decided to participate in the Stockholm peace conference.

ZURICH, August 21.—German Chancellor Michaelis will to-day announce Germany's decision to grant autonomy to Alsace-Lorraine, it is stated here. It is also expected he will mention the Pope's peace proposals as coinciding with the German views.

LONDON, August 21.—The French captures to-day are given as five thousand and Italians as ten thuosand.

LONDON, August 21. — Germans and Austrians have lost probably thirty thousand men in Italian, French and British offensives of the last two days. There are sixteen thousand prisoners reported from the French and Italian offensives, and it is considered quite likely that Teuton casualties in killed and wounded would approximate at least the same figures as prisoners.

SMASHING WIN BY FRENCH TROOPS ON VERDUN FRONT

Capture German Defences on Both Sides of the Meuse Over a Front of More Than Eleven Miles, Taking Over 4,000 Prisoners

DRIVE GREAT SUCCESS

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 20. — A smashing French victory on the Verdun front is recorded in the official report issued by the War Office to-night. The French have captured the enemy defences on both sides of the Meuse over a front of more than eleven miles, penetrating the German line at divers points to a depth of a mile and a quarter. More than four thousand unwounded German prisoners have been taken.

TEXT OF STATEMENT.

The text of the night statement reads:

"On the front north of Verdun our troops captured on both sides of the Meuse enemy defences on a front of 18 kilometres (11 miles) and to a depth which exceeded two kilometres at certain points. On the left bank of the river we hold in particular the Avecourt Wood, the two summits of Le Mort Homme, Corbeaux Wood and Cumieres. On the right bank we have occupied Talou Ridge, Champ, Chamneuville, Hill 344, Mormont Farm and Hill 240, north of Louvemont.

"On the right our troops have advanced considerably in the Bois des Fosse and the Bois de Chaume.

"The number of unwounded prisoners taken is more than 4,000.

"The Germans carried out violent counter-attacks in the Avecourt Wood and against Le Mort Homme and Hill 344, but our fire everywhere broke down their efforts and inflicted heavy losses. Our aviators took a brilliant part in the battle, turning their machine guns at a low height against enemy concentrations, and contributing also to the repulse of counter-attacks.

"Our pilots brought down eleven German airplanes on the battle-front, while two other enemy machines were brought down by our special guns."

Merchants Offer Many Bargains For Dollar Day

The merchants are offering big inducements to buyers for Dollar Day to-morrow. Up and down the business streets the show windows present a big selection of seasonable bargains. All branches of retailing are represented and it is impossible to give an adequate idea of the displays. Women will find the biggest attractions perhaps in dresses and dress goods that are marked down away below cost, and on the other hand men's suits are quoted at from 20 to 25 per cent. off the regular prices. Two pairs of ladies or men's shoes may be bought for $3, and men's patent and tan boots are offered for four dollars. Satin pumps at $1, children's dresses and hats and other home lines should enable mothers to lay in a supply of necessities for the opening of school only two weeks distant. Men's straw and felt hats are offered for one dollar, shirts for the same price, and in some cases even two pair for one dollar. Three pairs of socks for 75 cents seemed an unusual bargain. Fountain pens in a drug store window are offered for one dollar. Household goods have not been overlooked and one attractive offer is that of one merchant who will hang the wall paper that is purchased from him to-morrow.

Dollar Day actually depends upon the purchasers. The merchants have come more than half way.

St. John's Sunday School To Re-open

St. John's Sunday school will re-open on Sunday, September 2nd.

On Monday next, August 27th, a meeting of the officers and teachers will be held in the Guild room at 8.30. Mr. W. F. Johnston, Rector's Warden, will preside. Important business will be brought up, and it is hoped that every member of the staff will arrange to be present. Richard J. Devey, Acting Superintendent.

Arranging For Western Conscriptionist Candidates

WINNIPPG, August 21.—While the resignation of Hon Robert Rogers and his explanations is a subject of animated conversation in political circles the meeting to-night of the South Winnipeg Liberals is the chief topic engrossing all classes. Ex-Mayor Waugh will preside and it is known that resolutions for the union government, for conscription, and repudiating Sir Wilfrid as leader of the Western Liberals during the war, will be adopted, also arrangements made that every seat in the West will be contested by conscriptionists.

57th REGIMENT DRAFT LEAVES TO JOIN UNIT AT BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Probably the Last Body of Volunteers Leave Peterborough On Their Way to the Front--Lieut. Carruthers, Previously Reported Missing, Is Now Reported Killed in Action--To-day's General Military News.

Probably the last body of volunteer troops to leave Peterborough on their way east, took their departure this afternoon, when the 57th Regiment's C.E.F. detachment left for Kingston to be incorporated in the Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion at Barriefield, which is in command of Lieut.-Col. Smart. The detachment, which consisted of Capts. Watt and Leck, Lieut. Quinn, Sergt. Jay and Rogers, and fourteen privates entrained [illegible] 1.30 G.T.R. train, and there were no ceremonies in connection with their departure. The detachments located at different centres are all being mobilized in the Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion, which explains the departure of the draft from here. It is now over three years since the first body of recruits consisting of artillery drafts, left Peterborough for the front. To-day's quota, with conscription ready to be enforced, is undoubtedly the last body of voluntarily enlisted men to go. Many hundreds of Peterborough men have left in the thirty-six months that have intervened, and while recruiting is now at a standstill, this city has no reason to feel ashamed of her record under the voluntary system. The casualty lists bear too eloquent a testimonial to the patriotism of Peterborough's citizen soldiers.

LIEUT. T. F. CARRUTHERS.

Mrs. Dover of East City, has recently received news that her grandson, Lieutenant Thomas Frederick Carruthers, reported missing after the battle of Vimy Ridge, has been killed in action. Lieutenant Carruthers enlisted in the overseas battalion of the 100th Winnipeg Grenadiers.

PTE. REG JACKSON.

LINDSAY, Aug. 20.—The sad news was received in town on Sunday by Mrs. G. Jackson, St. Paul street, that her son, Reginald Jackson, aged 19 years, had been killed in action on August 11th.

The deceased enlisted in the 109th Battalion, and was transferred to the 38th Battalion. His father is with a Forestry Battalion in France. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson formerly lived near Oakwood. The dead soldier was a young man of splendid character, and his death is deeply deplored.

Besides his parents he is survived by two brothers and four sisters.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 20. Francis "Dinnie" McGiffin, one of the best-known hockey players in Canada and the United States, enlisted yesterday in the Officers' Aviation Reserve Corps. McGiffin was one of the mainstays of the Toronto professional team for three years. He had been manager of a packing house in Fresno up to the time of his enlistment. He is a Canadian and comes from Toronto, Ont.

"Dinnie" McGiffin, as he was known to Toronto hockey fans, started his hockey career with the Simcoes, of Toronto in the Junior O.H.A. and jumped to the professional ranks when barred from that organization.

He was known as the "Bad Man of Hockey," and always provided plenty of excitement when he was on the ice. He has been living in California for about eight years, but came back east to play hockey every winter until the winter of 1916.

President Wm. Dalliday of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association is spending his holidays in Toronto. He is resting up from his strenuous exertions at Stoney Lake Regatta when he captured the canoe race for returned soldiers.

The executive of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association will hold a meeting in the club rooms, Barrie Building, on Thursday night of this week at 8 o'clock.

45,797 Farmers.

45,797 Farmers In Canadian Forces

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—Mr. Buchanan asked as to the occupation of men who had gone to the front with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and was informed by Sir Edward Kemp that up to June 30 last, 45,797 farmers had enlisted, of which number 24,593 came from the western provinces.

Prices Of Hanna Fish Not Uniform

To-day, the first compulsory meatless day in the hotels and cafes worked hand in hand with the shipment of fish bought East by the Food Controller and the local dealers report a heavier sale of fish to-day than in years. These sales were made not only to the hotels but to private houses where the appeals to conserve the food supply suitable on shipping overseas is being responded to.

PRICES VARY.

The fish which is now upon the local market at several local dealers is a boon to the thrifty and whereas the price per pound varies from 10 to 12 cents in the different stores the quality in all cases is excellent and in a perfect state of preservation, practically, though, the excellent system of refrigeration in the cars, as fresh as on leaving the Atlantic.

ROGERS' RESIGNATION HAS BEEN ACCEPTED

Culmination of a Conservative Crisis Which Has Been Appending For Some Days—Correspondence to Be Published.

MINISTER'S DEMANDS

OTTAWA, Aug. 20.— Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, has tendered his resignation to Sir Robert Borden as a member of the Government. The resignation has been accepted. The Premier is now working with Sir Clifford Sifton on the reconstruction of his Cabinet.

These facts, although not yet officially announced, are the culmination of a Conservative crisis which has been pending for some days. The Premier will issue an official statement, including copies of the correspondence between Mr. Rogers and himself, within the next forty-eight hours.

Anxiety as to Effects.

Parliamentary corridors are seething with speculation as to the "inside story" of the severation, and as to the probable alignment of individual Conservative members as between what are now termed the Sifton and the Rogers factions. There is also considerable anxiety as to the effect of the break-up on the party fortunes, and upon the development of the Government's Parliamentary programme.

The Globe learns that the publication of the correspondence is not likely to show any such personal recriminations as characterised the communications which preceded the retirement of Sir Sam Hughes. The former Minister of Militia was asked for his resignation. The present Minister of Public Works tenders his.

Difference Over War Policy.

The divergence between Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Robert Rogers is believed to be over the Premier's war policy. Mr. Rogers was one of the first to urge the formation of a union war Government, and is understood to have strongly counselled both conscription and coalition last spring. He supported the original negotiations with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the subsequent overtures to the Liberal conscriptionist group comprising Messrs. F. F. Pardee, F. B. Carvell, A. K. Maclean, and representative Liberals in the Legislatures of the Provinces.

Mr. Rogers' Demands.

When these negotiations came to naught it is believed that Mr. Rogers demanded a "straight" party Government, a drastic franchise act, immediate enforcement of conscription, and a determined partisan campain policy. He had a considerable following of Conservative members, and made his demands with embarrassing persistency, going so far as to directly accuse the Premier of lethargy and indecision.

Sir Robert Refused to Accede.

Sir Robert Borden was indisposed to bow to the mandates of his lieutenant. He believed that Canada's effective continuance in war effort was largely dependent upon the creation of a Government which would represent all sections of the nation, and was determined to continue his quest for colleagues outside of party lines. He war insistent upon the policy of "making haste slowly"—and safely, with a view to educating and encouraging public confidence and co-operation. As to charges of lethargy, the Premier pointed to the heavy Government programme of war and economic legislation being enacted; as to allegations of indecision, he referred to his steady adherence, in the face of many obstacles, to the project of bringing about a national war Government.

Sifton Interference Opposed.

This was the somewhat strained situation which existed when, very recently, Sir Clifford Sifton either tendered or was asked to tender his services by co-operating in the endeavour to form some such Administration as that for which the Premier had been striving. Mr. Rogers bitterly opposed Sifton interference. There is no love lost between these two erstwhile princes of Western politics, each bent upon his own political resuscitation. Mr. Rogers served his ultimatum. His resignation and its acceptance followed.

HUGE OFFENSIVE AGAINST TEUTONS ON MANY FRONTS

Britain, France, Italy and Belgium Are Joined in the Most Powerful Concerted Assault Yet Directed Against Germany

BIG WESTERN BATTLE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug 21.—Britain, France, Italy and Belgium joined to-day in the most powerful concerted offensive yet directed against Germany.

The west front, from the Belgium sea coast to Switzerland, was one gigantic battle, with French, British, Belgian and Portuguese troops attacking.

Southward, Italy's most formidable offensive threw millions into a grapple over a front of almost a hundred miles.

Field Marshal Haig's drive in Flanders was pressing forward, while his Canadian troops gripped tighter around Lens. Gen. Petain's troops were driving fiercely out of Verdun, while steadily increasing their pressure along the Chemin des Dames and in Champagne.

Russia alone of the great allied powers, is not participating in the concerted assault, and Russia was on the defensive against the Teutons. Every one of the assaulting moves was strategically timed and co-ordinated. The Macedonian front was the only one to-day in Europe from which there was no report of an allied offensive.

Another Fish Special

Offered By J. Steinberg, Your Fishman

Owing to the large success we had in disposing of the large shipment of Atlantic fish, we are offering the same again, and we will have three shipments to sell this week at 10 cents per lb. Fresh from the coast.

Another special will be fresh Lake Ontario mud cats, which are more raving to buy as they are sold already skinned, cleaned and the heads are off. They also make good frying and boiled fish and retails at only 13 cents per lb. or two lbs. for 25 cents at my residence, 466 George street, opposite the Y.M.C.A.

J. STEINBERG, "Your Fish Man."

A GREAT OFFENSIVE IS ON

WASHINGTON, August 21. — Germany was enduring to-day the mightiest offensive blows yet struck by the Allies.

On every front, save the Russian and Macedonian lines, the Allies were on the offensive, The great 435-mile Western front was a continuous battle line, In Italy a hundred miles of front from the Adriatic to the Alps was in motion, General Cadorna's troops violently attacking everywhere.

On the French front along the Chemin Des Dames and north of Verdun, Germany massed forces for tremendously powerful counter blows. Paris despatches characterised them as the most violent nature. They indicated no loss of morale in the German ranks due to the merciless pounding in the grand French offensive.

The French repulsed all efforts to oust them from the recently gained positions.

Government's Inactivity Was Cause

That is Bob Rogers' Explanation of His Resignation

MONTREAEL, Que., Aug. 21.—When seen at the Ritz Carlton Hotel this morning, Hon. Robt. Rogers, the former Minister of Public Works, did not seem in any way depressed by the contemplation of his resignation. In fact there was a merry twinkle in his eye.

"I resigned because of the government's inactivity and indecision," he stated. "When the correspondence is brought down in the House it will show just what I mean."

"Does your resignation imply that the Military Service Act will not be put into effect before an election?"

"No, I wouldn't say that. It should have been made effective however, with the least possible delay."

Asked if he thought the government would be defeated on the conscription issue in case of a general election, Mr. Rogers said he wouldn't like to say. But the most surprising statement made by Hon. Bob, was that he had always been in favour of a union government, "as long as it was a union of the leaders on both sides of the House. I saw no reason for a union government, which left the Opposition intact, however."

The former minister said he was unable to say who would be the Liberal's most likely man to be taken into the Cabinet, nor did he wish to have anything to say regarding the probability of the Premiers success in forming a new Cabinet. He had nothing to say regarding his future plans, stating that he had come to Montreal on business and was returning to Ottawa this afternoon.

Lantern Exploded Gasoline Fumes In a G. T. R. Shop

In the road master's shop at the G.T.R. yards, this morning, at 3 o'clock, several employees were engaged in filling the tank of their motor "handcar" with gasoline. About fifteen feet away they had placed an ordinary barn lantern which served to illuminate the shop. Suddenly the gasoline exploded and the clothes of one of the men caught fire. He ran inside where the others rolled him in a sand pile, extinguishing the flames without injuring him. Part of the floor of the shop was burned, but Chief Howard, in reporting the Brigade's call, remarked that there was practically no damge.

It was pointed out that this should be a warning to automobile owners who may use gasoline in their garages, where other than electric lights are provided. Gasoline is extremely volatile and a constant source of danger.

STRATFORD WILL RAISE A FUND OF $50,000.

STRATFORD, Aug. 20.— The City Council to-night decided on a public meeting on Thursday to consider means of raising $50,000 for the Canadian Patriotic Fund; that hereafter poultry must be sold by weight on the public market and that the Finance committee shall consider the donation of one or more aeroplanes to the Canadian aerial branch of the army.

MISS MARY BROWNE, U. S. TENNIS CHAMP, TO BE A WAR NURSE

NEW YORK, Aug 20.—Not content to make a trip all the way from California to the Atlantic seaboard for the purpose of playing exhibition tennis matches for the benefit of the tennis ambulance fund, Miss Mary K. Browne, three times national champion, will go to France as a full-fledged Red Cross nurse. Miss Browne already has done remarkable wark for a worthy cause by attracting crowds to the tennis matches staged for the purpose of raising $100,000 for an ambulance fund.

Instead of devoting the time between her strenuous matches to much-needed rest, Miss Browne has been busy studying. She is taking a special course to qualify as a nurse. Her studies are nearly completed, and she expects that she will receive her appointment and be sent to France next month. Miss Browne will continue in the exhibition matches for the tennis ambulance fund until she is ordered overseas.

Society of Engineers and Firemen Still at Work.

LONDON, Aug. 20.— The strike of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, involving about 20,000 men, had not been begun in London to-day although some of the men may have quit work at midnight. The executive committee of the union remains in London discussing the situation.

Canadians On Offensive Near Lens

Attack This Morning Developed Into Desperate Hand-to-Hand Battle

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 21. — A Canadian press cable to-day says: Canadian troops around Lens launched another attack on western environs of the French mining city at 4.30 o'clock this morning, reports the Reuter correspondent from the British headquarters in France. The attack developed into one of the most desperate hand-to-hand battles of the war. When the Canadians went over the top they saw masses of grey figures advancing towards them in the thick haze. Both sides had planned the attack at the same moment. Fifteen minutes after the clash came the Germans were makin their last stand on the parapet of their trench. They then retreated rapidly.

PROVINCIAL CAMPAIGN FOR FRESH FISH

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 21.—Hon. F. G. McDiarmid announced to-day that Ontario government will undertake the catching of entire extra supply of fresh fish for the province of Ontario under its plan of co-operation with Food Controller Hanna. The Government will employ and pay several hundred fishermen in this work, in Lakes Nipissing and Nipegon. They will be delivered in most Ontario cities on the morning following the day they are caught.

TELLS WHAT I.W.W. MEANS.

Senator Ashurst Says Letters Stand for Imperial Wilhelm's Warriors.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—"A good many people have asked me what the letters I. W. W. stand for," said Senator Ashurst of Arizona in the Senate to-day. "I know what it is; they stand for Imperial Wilhelm's Warriors," Senator Ashurst went on to say that the I.W.W.'s also "stand for murder and for perjury."

The Senator had read into the record an editorial from The Guardian, published in Graham County, Arizona, in which the following verse was given as an extract from the I. W. W. songbook:

Onward, Christian soldiers, rip and tear and smite,
Let the gentle Jesus bless your dynamite.
Smash the doors of every home, pretty maidens seine,
Use your might and sacred right to treat her as you please.

"This sort of diabolical sentiment, running with unbridled crime of every character, up to murder, seems to typify the I.W.W." commented Senator Ashurst.

GETS JOB: LETS MAN FIGHT

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The most patriotic married couple that has come to the attention of any New ark Exemption Board consists of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Singer. They were married in 1916, a little more than a year ago. Singer appeared Friday before the Sixth Exemption Board and was pronounced by the doctor physically sound. He filed an exemption claim, on the ground of his dependent wife, and went away, only to return yesterday and withdraw the claim, as his wife had got her old job back, so that he might fight.

IN MEMORIAM.

Sergt. Fred Thomas, 21st Battalion, Killed in Action, August 21, 1916.

Far and oft my thoughts do wander
To the battlefield, away,
Where now lies my dear brother,
Killed one year ago to-day.
Sleep on, dear brother, in your distant grave,
Your life for your country nobly gave.
No loved one near to say good-bye;
But in God's keeping now you lie.
—Inserted by brother Sam, also of 21st Battalion.

Boston Cafe Had No Notice Of Order Prohibiting Meat

Tuesday's meals may be meatless in other restaurants, but the menu card at the Boston Cafe to-day offered a choice selection from lamb to chicken, including porterhouse and the other high-priced steaks. Mr. Bill Coros, who is in charge of the restaurant during the absence of Mr. Douros, made the rather ingenuous explanation that he had not been notified of the prohibition of meat on Tuesdays and Fridays. He admitted reading the newspaper references to the Order-in-Council, but then you can never believe the newspapers.

This old wheeze has served many a weak argument, hence why criticize a Greek when he parrots what he heard others assert, as if it were true. Besides, the Canada Gazette doesn't circulate among erstwhile Athenians any more widely than among native Canadians. Hanna probably sounds like a cook to some of the Greeks, and even to Italian fish dealers who have actually been at a loss to understand the increased demand for fish.

This complaint of the indefinite character of the order, or rather of the failure to circulate it among those to whom it applies, is not confined to Peterborough. Some of the big hotels in Montreal have endeavoured to co-operate with the Food Controller, but their efforts have been restricted by their ignorance of the complete details of the Order-in-Council. Mr. Coros said he was ready to abide by any law, but he desired to know what the law was before blindly following the reports in the press.

The Empress dinner to-day was again entirely meatless, but the restaurants apparently classed themselves with the verage home beyond the reach of the letter of the Hanna law, and doubtless unmoved by its spirit. The working man holds an inflexible belief that the rich know no sumptuary laws, hence why should he elect to make a lone sacrifice. It seems that the new restriction on public eating places has for the present resulted only in disorder that might have been obviated by more explicit information and particularly by more effective promulgation.

It is understood that the term meatless day is used within the meaning of the order which bars only beef and pork. Hence, veal and lamb is used and to a greater extent than before the Hanna regulation came into force. The exclusion of beef compels the substitution of fish or lamb and veal. One effect of the law is that it puts a premium on lambs and calves. Public opinion questions the wisdom of law-makers who direct consumers to the very meats that should be conserved. It is contended that there should be a closed season for lambs and calves until they attain one year. Thus the wool and leather supply is protected and the meat market would not suffer seriously.

One prominent hotel man said today: "Hanna should have prohibited the use of lambs and calves first, and had he removed meat entirely on two days of the week there would have been no serious objection."

Paris Styles Designed to Economize on Fabrics.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Dress styles of the coming winter are designed to economize on woollen fabrics as much as possible. The Master Dressmakers' Association of Paris has decided that not more than five and three-quarters yards of cloth shall be used in making a dress. This compares with an average of ten or twelve yards two years ago and of seven yards last year.

Temple Band Was Appreciated

Fenelon Falls People Enjoyed Music of Local Organization

The Fenelon Falls Gazette says: This village and community were treated to a visit by the Salvation Army band of Peterborough, on Sunday and Monday last. The annual appearance of this well known band is looked forward to with pleasure by large numbers of people as is quite evident by the crowds attending, some of whom came quite long distances to do so. They arrived by the nine o'clock train Saturday evening and the streets were lined with motors and people afoot to receive them. While the band is not as strong as in the prewar days, as almost all of the eligibles enlisted, they have been building since, and appeared here about 30 pieces strong. They have some good performers, the drummer is said to be the best in Canada. Their visit proved quite satisfatcory financially as their collections amounted to over $106. The people of this community will look forward with pleasure to their return. Come again, boys.

Britain's Reply To Pope's Note

LONDON, Aug. 21. — Britain, the first of the belligerent powers to answer the Pope's peace suggestions, presented a formal note to the Vatican to-day through British Minister Desalis declaring the Holy Father's plan would be examined "in a benevolent and serious spirit."

Cardinal Gasparri Papal Secretary of State expressed his gratification at the response.

STOOP TO STOOKING

Business Men of Western City Spend Afternoons in Farming—400 in Gang.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 20.—The city of Portage La Prarie has organized a stooking gang of business men. Every afternoon they close their stores and offices at 4.30 and hike to stook. Any man who has a motor loads up as many of his neighbours and business associates as it will hold, and drives them out to work. Every afternoon a steady stream of motors pours out of town. Over four hundred are now in the gang.

Harvesters are demanding $4.50 a day. Portage Plains is the greatest level wheat area in Western Canada, settled by Huron and Bruce farmers in 1876-77, and these farms are still owned by their descendants. No finer crops than this year's showing have ever been seen around Portage.

See $92,000,000 Loss A Year On Army Insurance

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 21. — Preparations to fight the administration bill to provide insurance for officers and enlisted men in the military service of the government are being made by insurance companies of the country. The outstanding reasons against the proposed legislation are:

That the rates are too low, compared with the hazards.

That is a sad business scheme, which will entail additional heavy taxes on the people.

That it is a venture by the government into a field of private enterprise not merely as a war measure, but as a substitution for the pension system to be maintained after peace comes.

Opposition to the measure is based upon the estimates by the government that insurance rates will only be about $8 per $1,000 insurance per annum. Should 1,000,000 men take out policies averaging $1,000 each, the income derived by the government each year would be $8,000,000.

On the other hand the insurance men fiure from casualty estimates from the armies in Europe that 10 per cent., or 100,000 of the men will be lost yearly, on whose lives the government would have to pay $100,000,000, a net loss of $92,000,000.

FIRST SALE OF POULTRY FOR THE BELGIANS

The Canadian Poultrymen's Belgian Relief Association are going to hold a sale of pure bred poultry at the Canada National Exhibition, Toronto, on Labour Day, September 3rd, 1917.

Any Ontario breeders who have not already donated still have time to help along this good work by sending their donations to Raymond E. Bruton, R. R. No. 2, Hamilton, Ont., who will forward shipping instructions and tags.

This work is authorized by the Allies Agricultural Relief Committee, of which Dr. Robertson, of Ottawa, is chairman and is backed by the Dominion and Allied Governments.

All proceeds will go for the relief of wives and families of Belgian poultrymen in the devastated regions.

This will also be a chance for breeders to buy stock from some of the best flocks in Ontario and Quebec.

HISTORIC ROAD IS BECOME SCENE OF AWFUL BATTLE

"CHEMIN DES DAMES" NO LONGER PLACE FOR LADIES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE AISNE, July—"Le Chemin des Dames" the historic "Ladies' oad," is no longer a place for ladies.

It is only a place for men—men who know how to fight and die. The daily battles now raging along the Chemin des Dames equal in intensity and fierceness the historic combats of last year at Verdun. These Chemin des Dames attacks, launched on a restricted front with all the concentrated resources that Germany has left, for the purpose of retaking an observatory or obliterating a salient, lack none of the determination and desperateness of the Verdun assaults.

No war correspondent or civilian has ever set foot on Ladies' Road since it was wrested from the Germans by the French. What takes place there can only be learned from the survivors, who come back after a week's defence of the road. The story of one is the story of all—differing only in detail and not in kind. The following is one of many thousands:

"The battalions of chasseurs we were to relieve had passed an agitated period, that included violent attacks by the Germans with ensuing influx and reflux.

"To reach our front lines, we must cross the first and second lines of the famous Hindenburg position, all of which in this locality has been captured by us. Our artillery has completely demolished every bombproof and shelter of the original Hindenburg line, and for us it is a question of sleeping under the open sky and glimmering stars.

BOCHES VERY NEAR.

"Our officers go forward to reconnoitre the ground. As the officers talk together a Boche marmite falls. A lieutenant is killed and another wounded. A little farther along, a rifle grenade mortally wounds another officer.

We take possession of our sector and work hard to render it impregnable to a surprise attack. The Boches are only 50 yards away. At 3:30 in the morning they attack.

"From our front line we can see their infantry. They are so close to their own barrage that at one moment they are obliged to fall back to keep from being massacred by their own shells.

"We have orders to die on the spot before abandoning our line. A hand-to-hand combat is quickly engaged.

"The Germans succeeded in getting into our trenches. We do not have enough grenades to beat off their attacks.

"But the waves which we drive back are quickly replaced with fresh troops, and the hand-to-hand fighting continues. A lieutenant in charge of a section, after driving one German assault, is surrounded by a second. The lieutenant shoots three German flame shooters. He finds that the defensive grenades they are using do not have a range sufficiently long, and orders his men to seize offensive grenades. The latter are still in their heavy packing cases. To open them, his men use pickaxes, at the risk of exploding the whole case. But they get them out and drive the German flaifme throwers back. At this point the enemy has now been thrown back across the Chemin des Dames.

"We find another soldier sitting on a trench with a pipe in his mouth, calmly shooting down German grenade throwers before a single one can get within reach of him.

"Another soldier, after valiantly beating off the Germans from in front of his shell hole only to find that still others are threatening to cut him off from the rear, comes back and indignantly asks his lieutenant at what range he must fix his rifle in order to get 'those pigs there.' At 10 in the morning, we have the Boches back on the other side of the Chemin des Dames. In the evening we await eagerly the official communique. A line announces that an attack has been repulsed on the Chemin des Dames. The German communique next day makes even briefer reference."

Such is the life to-day on the Chemin des Dames that was built for royal ladies to visit their summer homes.

DEBATE ON PROSPECT OF GERMAN REPUBLIC, JAS. M. BECK'S VIEW

Harper's Magazine for September publishes a debate between Professor Kuno Francke, Honorary Curator of the Germanic Museum at Harvard University, and James M. Beck, lawyer and former Assistant Attorney General of the United States, on the subject: "Is There to be a German Republic?"

Professor Francke's answer is "No." He believes the monarchial Government will prevail, first, because the Socialistic agitation against it is mostly "demonstration," and, second, because "no princely family has been a better representative" of the traditions and teachings that have made the Germans a great people than the Hohenzollerns. Mr. Beck takes the opposite position, suggesting that the belief of the German people in this "princely family" may suffer changes when it becomes known that it deliberately deceived its subjects as to the causes of the war.

"Can it reasonably be denied," asks Professor Francke, "that the extraordinarily high state of public organization and individual efficiency by which Germany during the last thirty years has outstripped most other nations is in a very large extent the result of the moral self-discipline ingrained in the German people through centuries of monarchial tradition?" He adds that "no princely family has been a better represenative of this tradition than the Hohenzollerns."

Enumerating the many achievements of the Germans under the Hohenzollern rule he says: "All of this is closely bound up with what Germany feel for the Hohenzollern dynasty and its part in building up a great and powerful empire; and all of it will help prevent a violent disruption of the monarchical foundations of the German constitution."

Mr. Beck calls attention to an important omission in Professor Francke's thesis—the possibility of a German defeat.

"His article would be more illuminating," writes Mr. Beck, "if he had told us what would happen to the Imperial Government if the war's result should be for Germany a Jena and not a Sedan. He also fails to tell us what the German citizen will think when he learns the full truth as to its origin, and when he realizes, as realize he must in due time, that Germany could have avoided this war, with all its infinitely tragic suffering, had its Imperial Government shown any yielding spirit to the almost pathetic pleading of Russia, France and Great Britain for any peaceful adjustment of the controversy. The deliberate deceit then practised upon the German people will also be an element in the reckoning."

Mr. Beck calls attention to the fact that the solidarity of the German people at the beginning of the war was due to the belief that in the midst of Germany's "mediatory" influences to avert war Russia struck a treacherous blow and predicts that when the truth is known the German masses will be "less concerned about the domestic political problems which Dr. Francke discusses, and more with the criminal folly of this atrocious war and the responsibility of their autocratic Government for all its unprecedented horrors."

Mr. Beck refuses to believe the Socialists of Germany are merely making meaningless gestures in demanding reforms and the abolition of the monarchical form of Government, and quotes editorials from Vorwaerts in the days immediately preceding the war to show that the German Socialists realized the great iniquity contemplated by Germany and Austria in bringing on a world conflict.

"Germany may remain an empire," writes Mr. Beck, "and no one can ignore the possibility that the Kaiser may retain his throne, with or without his present powers. But is it not also possible that with the defeat of Germany the Emperor will share the fate of Napoleon III?

"May it not become apparent to every intelligent German, when this war is ended, that the only hope fo a durable peace and the only possibility for Germany to enjoy on equal terms fellowship with the free States of the world, lies in the abolition of its mediaeval monarchy, and the substitution of a limited monarchy, with a different dynasty, or a republic?"

ENROLL EVERY MAN IN N.Z. FOR SERVICE

Police Given Power to Accost All Civilians Now.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, July 25.—The New Zealand police hereafter will enforce that section of the New Zealand military service law which aims at the enrollment of every man of military age in the Dominion in the expeditionary force reserve. Policemen may accost citizens and make enquiries accordingly. Eligible men not enrolled will be liable to a fine of $250 or three months' imisonment. It is hoped by this step not only to ensure that the name of every fit man is on the roll, but to detect men who have failed to comply with the military ballot (drafting by means of numbered marbles and card indexes.) That is, every man who is not in miliary uniform will have to have either an enrollment certificate or a "leave pass" showing that he has been medically rejected. It is expected that the powers thus given the police will lead to many incidents.

Another change under the military service act which took effect this month is relative to the classification of the men of the second reserve division —the married man. Originally this division was to have been classified according to the men's dependents, but lately the Government decided that the basis shall be children only. Thus married men without children will be called up first, those with one child next, and so on. Married men without children are estimated to number about 15,000.

The first of the married men will be drafted in September or October.

MUTUAL CONDONATION NOT TO BE THOUGHT OF SAYS REV. DR. SHIELDS

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Referring to the Pope's peace proposal, the Rev. Dr. Shields, a Toronto Baptist, preaching in Spurgeon's Tabernacle to-night, characterized it as a "suggested mutual condonation which no true Briton could accept so long as the Lusitania, Nurse Cavell and the Capt. Fryatt crimes remained unpunished."

The congregation gave audible assent to the preacher's expressions.

MAYOR OF RENO TO FIGHT.

RENO, Nev. Aug. 20.—Reno is the first city in the West to lose its Mayor in the army draft. Roy Frisch, alderman, who is also acting Mayor, has qualified before the exemption board and when asked if he wished to claim exemption as a civil officer said:

"There will be plenty of men left for aldermen and Mayor, but Uncle Sam seems to need soldiers, therefore I will not claim exemption."

WHY LOAF COSTS LESS IN BRITAIN

Hon. Mr. Hanna, Quoting Baron Rhondda, Says Government Pays Difference

OTTAWA, Aug. 20. — Discussing prices of food commodities in Great Britain, which in some cases are quoted at lower figures than in Canada. Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, issued the following statement to-day:

"It should be borne in mind, when prices of foodstuffs, such as bread, are under discussion, and references are made to the fixing of prices which has resulted in lower cost of living to the British public, that in Great Britain the Government is paying the difference. That is to say, world prices for food commodities are set by the world supply and world demand, as modified by war conditions. Wheat enters Great Britain under those conditions. The Government pays for it at world market prices, but sets the price to the miller, paying out of public funds the difference between market prices such as would pertain were there no artificial interfedence with the law of supply and demand, and the prices as fixed, so that the Government bears the burden and the consumer temporarily gets the benefit of cheaper bread.

"Baron Rhondda, British Food Controller, in his speech in the House of Lords, July 28, describes the method under which food is managed, as follows:

"Imported wheat will be supplied to the mills at a price corresponding with the price determined on for British wheat.

"The price charged to millers for both British and imported wheat will be lower than that at which the Government purchases. The difference in each case will be met by a subsidy from the Exchequer. It is a policy that can only be justified by the conditions in which we are living, and the impossibility of otherwise reducing the price of the loaf, the chief food of the poor. I accept the fullest responsibility for the policy, and indeed urged it upon the Cabinet. Four-fifths of our wheat supplies come from overseas; without these supplies we would starve, and we are not ourselves in a position to determine the price to be paid to the producer abroad.'

This statement is an answer to the many who inquire why the price of the loaf is less in England than in Canada."

FEWER SHELL ORDERS.

Difficulties of Transportation Will Affect Manufacture Here.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—The outlook is not particularly promising for the continuance of shell orders in Canada. Contractors for eight-inch shells largely finished their work last month. Those engaged in the making of 9.2 shells will finish up next month.

As to future orders a statement by Sir Joseph Flavelle may be expected very shortly. It is understood that the munitions business is not shutting down wholly, but it is quite apparent that with difficulties of transport and the great degree of efficiency in this manufacture overseas, Canadian factories cannot expect a continuance of orders on an extensive scale.

A Great Picture At The Royal

"Captain Alvarez" is the Title of a Picture You Should See

In a good programme which will be shown for the last time to-night at the Royal Theatre is a picture featuring Edith Storey in "Captain Alvarez" that is one of the best the Royal has shown recently. See it to-night, the last time shown.

Kaiser's Visit To Fleet May Presage Great Naval Battle

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 20.—Rear-Admiral Hugh T. Hibbert of the British Navy, who was familiar to Americans when the Lusitania was sunk, as flag captain in command of the port of Queenstown, arrived here to-day on an armed merchantman, and is on a special mission for the British Admiralty.

He believes that the Germans will not end the war, however, without a great naval battle, and is of the opinion that they are holding back the navy as a last resort. "I see by the papers," he said, "that the Kaiser recently visited the fleet at Wilhelmshaven, and I am hoping that it foreshadows a move in that direction."

KAISER BELIEVES IN NAVY

Confident of its Ability to Repulse the British.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20.—At the conclusion of his visit to the German high sea fleet at Wilhelmshaven Emperor William issued the following to the fleet.

"After having recently received an announcement that a renewed heavy attack of the enemy in an attempt to break up our sea front in Flanders had been successfully repelled, I have to-day by a visit to my fleet and the island fortress of Heligolannd been enabled to convince myself of the strength and security of this front, too. I express my warm appreciation to all the high seas forces on the water, under water and in the air, and to the fortress of Helligoland, for their untiring, self-sacrificing and successful labour, by means of which they have kept firmly in view and attained this aim. May the fleet remain conscious that the confidence of myself and the fatherland reposes firmly on it."

The Emperor distributed a number of Iron Crosses. His visit is reported to have been caused by the threat of strikes at the Wilhelmshaven arsenal.

RUSSIA IS ECONOMIZING

Special Commission Appointed to Cut Down Expenses.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 20.—In a statement to the press, Minister of Finance Nekrassoff says the Government intends drastically to reduce unnecessary expenditures, and for this purpose a special commission will be appointed. The Government also will refuse new demands for expenditures.

M. Nekrassoff says that extra allowances for soldiers' wives, which the Council of Deputies supports, would cost the state 11,000,000,000 rubles. A half billion rubles is being spent for the maintenance of food committees.

The outlay for the military will be reduced, where the expenditure is not necessary for the efficiency of the army; but expenditures for railroad construction development of water power and in other productive measures will be continued.

Concerning revenues, M. Nekrassoff says it will be difficult to increase taxation. The government proposes new voluntary loans and state monopolies, the latter including sugar, matches and tea. The Minister hopes the budget of 1918, excluding the outlay for the war, will not exceed 7,000,000,000 rubles.

Germany Autocracy Will Terminate With the Kaiser?

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 17.—Underneath every prosopal for peace, however impossible from the Allies' viewpoint, there is always the popular wistfulness to see the war ended. This desire grows stronger with adversity and weaker with success, but when details are reached the Germans shrink from conditions such as indemnity, which they regard as a plea of guilty to the felony of starting a wicked and murderous war.

In the general sentiment for peace, the civilian element has been reinforced by the discontent and the progress of the democratisation idea in the army. Soldiers obey their officers and still fight well, but men who go home after peace will never consent to live under an autocracy that can capriciously involve their country in war.

Of this sentiment in the army, the Generals and the Kaiser are well aware, and, like the civilian unrest, it gives them constant solicitude. Even in Switzerland one meets few persons who claim that the autocracy will last beyond the present Kaiser.

Out of these conditions the demand for peace arises in varying forms and degrees of intensity. The Catholics who, under Erzberger's leadership, organised the July revolt, would naturally give their support to the latest peace initiative from the Vatican.

CONTRAST TO BRITISH POLICY.

In Germany the Government policy exactly reverses that of England. The German theory is that the Government can prevent the weakness and panic which the sudden suggestion of peace might produce by keeping that topic constantly under discussion. This is the pet policy of the Catholic Party, whose leader, Erzberger, advertises that he is constnatly ready to meet any advocate of peace from any belligerent Government, in Switzerland, any day and collaborate for peace on terms fair to both sides.

The British and American Governments take the contrary stand, and advocates of peace are regarded as playing Germany's game. This indicates that, despite the claims for German discipline, that country is less able to hold its people to war sacrifice than are the Allies, but it also indicates that the allied peoples are taught to regard the initiation of peace discussion as an unmistakable weakening, whereas the Germans can shout peace on every street corner without suffering a loss of morale themselves or encouraging their enemies.

After spending ten days in Switzerland and talking with all kinds of people, I believe that it is vain to hope for a popular upheaval in Germany before the war ends. Germany is held in a vise of discipline. Fear is the chief element in its loyalty; but while the people stand in awe of the autocracy, the autocracy also fears the people. It may not be possible, owing to long established mental discipline, for the people to develop and enforce an enlightened and matured public opinion, but waves of emotion are continually sweeping over Germany and sharply react on the Reichstag and the powers behind the throne.

ARMY CHIEF'S POWER SHOWN

Hindenburg and Ludendorff, to whom are now delegated the powers of the autocracy in a proportion as between the two not precisely known, came to-gether from the front and assumed personal, direct control of the sit ation during the political crisis in July. Their authority was recognised on all hands, even the four-party coalition, which had a majority for the peace resolution of more than a hundred in the Reichstag, a body which derives considerable power from its control of money credits, modified its plans in conformity with the dictation of Hindenburg and Ludendorff. It was they who chose Michaelis and indicated the programme he should outline, and it is they who will decide what programme he shall actually carry out when the Reichstag reassembles.

In the tripartite distribution of power by far the greater part resides in the autocracy of which the Kaiser is temporarily the figurehead. On the opposite side are the people with the Reichstag in the middle furnishing a connecting link.

AMERICA MAY HAVE HASTENED CRISIS.

The July crisis may produce by popular unrest, of which the chief immediate cause is said to have been the landing of American troops in France when the food scarcity was at its worst. This thoroughly alarmed the military party. The popular demand for peace and political reform came to the Reichstag with an impact that momentarily transferred the balance of control by which that body is normally held to the adoption of the peace resolution was the result.

The strong-handed intervention of Hindenburg and Ludendorff was favoured by events in Russia during subsequent weeks, and by using through the press submarine statistics which, apparently had been held in reserve until the disappointment over the failure of the Government's promises made when submarine frightfulness started last February had subsided. The German press pointed out that while England had not yet been reduced, as promised, by the U-boat campaign, the destruction of tonnage would yet accomplish that result, and what was even more certain, would render impossible the transport and supply numbers to affect the result of the war.

As the news from Russia has become less favourable for Germany, the press and propaganda have emphasized submarine warfare as the offensive against which the Allies were helpless, and whose silent and invisible blows were winning the war for Germany.

PEOPLE DO NOT RULE.

German Paper Complains of Distribution of Power.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20.—The Leipziger Volkszeitung, an organ of the minority Socialists, says:

"Dr. Michaelis has succeeded Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg as Imperial Chancellor, but the distribution of power in the Empire remains the same. It is not the will of the people or the vote in Parliament that decides the possession of power. Now, as before, the decision depends on the struggle between the interested groups behind the scenes.

"Such a struggle seems to have decided Gen. Groener's fate. He has gone one day after the denial that he would retire. Such a system is the opposite of democracy."

A ushy mixture of ammonia and salt will take white marks of the inside of dark coat collars, but it should be remembered that it is a dangerous mixture.

Stables Fired By Lightning

James Devlin, of Indian River is Loser as Result of Storm

The stables belonging to James Devlin Indian River were struck by lightning and burned last night in one of the most severe storms which have ever visited that part of the country. The cattle in the barns were saved though the shock knocked the cows down rendering it a difficult task to save them.

Crops Damaged.

The storm brought with it a heavy shower of hail and wind which proved disastrous to some fruit and grain crops. The farmers, however, are congratulating themselves that with eggs at 48 cents a dozen no hens were included in the casualties.

OBITUARY

GEORGINA M. DAVIDSON.

Very sad circumstances attend the death of Georgina McKee Davidson, daughter of the late Mr. James Davidson, 11 Dennison Avenue, who passed away at Nicholls Hospital, this morning, after an illness of a few weeks.

Miss Dvidson was born in Smith Township twenty-five years ago. In the city her brightness and general lovable character won for her a warm place in the hearts of a wide circle of friends. She was an active worker in several branches of church work at St. Paul's, and a member of the choir. She leaves to monrn her death her mother and one sister, Hazel, at home.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

JOSEPH S. ARMSTRONG.

The following from the Edmonton Bulletin of Aug. 15, refers to a former well-known Peterborough citizen:

The funeral of the late Joseph S. H. Armstrong, of Irma, which took place yesterday afternoon from the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. T. Williamson, 9638 106th street, was a striking tribute to the respect in which the deceased was held. Not only was there a large attendance of the friends of the family, but members of organizations with which Mr. Armstrong was connected turned out in large numbers, particularly those of the Orange society, of which order he was a past grand master.

After service conducted at the house at 2.30 by Rev. A. E. Aldridge, R. L. Harden, Rev. D. W. Pomeroy, the procession started for the Edmonton cemetery, where the interment was made. Here the concluding prayers were said by Mr. Aldridge, following which the deceased brother was laid to rest with the ceremonies of the solemn ritual of the Orange order.

In addiion to floral tributes from friends of the family, wreaths were sent by the Irma Orange Lodge, of which Mr. Armstrong was a past master, and the Canadian Order of Foresters, South Edmonton, with which he was also associated.

The following were pallbearers: J. W. Graydon, W. G. Walford and H. Burkholder, representing lodge number 2066, L.O.L.; D. Grant and A. H. Richards, representing lodge number 1063, Canadian Foresters, and C. Swailes. The interment was at Edmonton cemetery.

The late Mr. Armstrong was born on Jan. 1 1854, at Peterborough, Ont. On Feb. 26, 1878, he married Miss Eliza Jane Sargent, only daughter of the late Samuel Sargent of Peterborough. The deceased was a prominent worker in Mark Street Methodist Church and was choir master for fifteen years. While living in Ontario he also held the position of grand master of the Orangemen for the Peterborough district. He was also associated with the Canadian Order of Foresters.

He moved with his family to Manitoba in 1899, residing in that province for four years, then coming further west to Alberta, where he settled in 1903. The greater part of his life in Alberta was passed at Irma, with which he was identified from its beginning as a village. Not only did he hold the responsible position of postmaster; he was also chairman of the village council and took an active interest in the affairs of the community. Naturally, he associated himself with the Orange order in the locality and was worshipful master of the local alodge.

The late Mr. Armstrong, who was aged 63 years and seven months, is survived by one sister, Mrs. J. E. Davidson who lives at Peterborough. His widow, three daughters and one son, Mrs. R. T. Williamson, Edmonton; Mrs. (Dr.) J. A. Little, Wainwright; Mrs. W. W. Curtis, Edmonton, and Druggist H. B. Armstrong, who now resides at Brandon Man.

A PROUD RECORD

Prime Minister Calls on Canada to Persevere

"Let us with resolute spirit so maintain our purpose and our effort that in this last and greatest chapter of humanity's striving and triumph, it shall be recorded of Canada that, as at the first, she never hesitated, so to the end she never faltered."

Such were the inspiring words of Sir Robert Borden in concluding his message to the people of the Dominion on the occasion of Canada's celebration of 50 years of Confederation.

There is war work to be done by every man, woman and child in the Dominion. The mobilization of the financial resources of the country are essential to victory. The National Service Board appeals to you to invest in War Savings Certificates. By such investment, the country's savings can be used for war purposes. The man at the front must be clothed, equipped and rationed. Your dollars are needed. F-9

CANADIANS MET HUN COUNTER ATTACK IN OPEN NO MAN'S LAND

Enemy Wouldn't Retreat and Fought Like Rats in a Trap—Nearly All the Germans Were Killed.

TERRIFIC FIGHTING

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Describing the encounter of the Canadians and Germans in the open, Beach Thomas in the Daily Mail wires: The infantry on both sides scrambled over the parapets, out of redoubts, close on the heels of their barrage. The autumn mist clung to the dead earth like blurred twilight as the charge was made. It was a great morning for a surprise. The first clear object the Canadians saw was not a parapet or fort, but through the blue mist the figures advancing of German soldiers. Probably for the first time this was a real counter-attack delivered, for the word means properly in precise military phrase "attack in face of another attack," and simultaneously with it the two storming parties met in No Man's Land, perhaps rather nearer the German than our own lines.

NEITHER SIDE GAVE AN INCH

They met and clashed in the open, but between two walls of shells that made live barriers to the lists of No Man's Land, cutting off the rival champions but for a moment, harming neither except when fragments from one of the shells with more sensitive fuses sent some singing fragments on a longer journey than usual. Bayonets met in these strange lists. Neither side gave an inch. The noise of shells drowned the fierce shouting, but our men had the greater impetus, or skill, or power, or heart. They forced the Germans back and back, or rather forced themselves forward, for there was no retreat by the Germans. A soldier said they fought like rats in a trap. Men died at the point they had reached, or crossed over a dead body.

FIRST SHOCK NOT THE WORST

The first shock was not the worst. As our troops in uneven formation reached the parapet of the German trench system, fresh enemies came up and a second encounter, more desperate than the first, was joined. Most of the work on the side of the Canadians was bayonet work, punctuated by revolver shots of the officers. The Germans used rather more bombs, but had difficulty in distinguishing friends from foe. It is reckoned that the fight in No Man's Land and on the battlements of the German trench lasted a long quarter of an hour, and at the end the lists were mysteriously widened, for each barrage had moved forward to allow for the advance of the men.

NEARLY ALL GERMANS KILLED

At the end almost all the Germans were killed, and the remnants of Canadians was still large enough and strong enough to occupy the trench and consolidate it. This force who met the Germans in midfield shock had advanced south-east upon the outer town of Lens, in which the main road from Arras joins the hub of roads, but it was only half the attack, not necessarily, more important or the greater half. The drama of it, however, drives it into prominence, and will win it immortal fame.

HOGS FED QUOTED $20; PACKERS OFFER $19.25

TORONTO, Aug 22.— Cash quotations for Manitoba oats, No. 2, went up to 70 1-4c., a fractional increase since yesterday. Millfeed in car lots, delivered, Montreal; in bags, is quoted $2 lower, shorts at $43 and middlings $45 to $46. Manitoba wheat quotations remain stationary.

There was a slight drop in the cash quotation for Ontario wheat, new crop, No. 2, at between $2.15 and $2.20. Monday's quotation was $2.25. Ontario wheat, No. 2, winter, per car lot, also dropped from a top quotation of $2.60 to $2.45, and No. 3 winter eased also from $2.58 to $2.43. Besides Manitoba oats, No. 2, taking on one cent to 70c., no new quotations were recorded.

Manitoba wheat— No. 1 northern, $2.40; No. 2 northern, $2.40; nominal, store, Fort William. No. 3, $2.40; No. 4, $2.36.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 70 1-4c.

American corn—Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats — No. 2 white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat —No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.40 to $2.45; No. 3 winter, $2.38 to $2.43, according to freight outside; No. 2, $2.15 to $2.20.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $43; bran, $36; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $45 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12; mixed, $9 to $12; straw, car lots, per ton, $7 to $7.50.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts — 103 cars, containing 1,429 cattle, 181 calves, 1,800 hogs and 1,000 sheep.

There was a heavier run of all cattle generally to-day than on Wednesday of last week, and prices were firm to strong, with the best demands continuing for the choicest stock.

The battle of the markets over hogs is raging no less furiously today than it has been during the past week or two. Drovers asked the good fat sum of $20 per cwt., but the packers bid only $19.25, and at noon no settlement had been arrived at.

Lambs had a light run, and in the face of persistent demand held strong at between $15 and $15.40, nearly 50c. per cwt. higher than yesterday. This is considered only temporary, and is explained by the exceptionally light run as compared with the supply of last week.

Cattle of the better quality continue to hold steady at yesterday's firm prices, with the exception of the common to medium stock, which sold to-day at between 10c. and 15c. lower. Good cows were steady.

Sheep were in strong demand at prices ranging between 8 1-2c. to 12 1-2c.. Calves ranged between 8 1-2c. and 15 1-4c. Good stockers and feeders also had an active trade.

WINTER OF TERRIFIC HARDSHIP PROSPECT FOR RUSSIAN PEOPLE

PETROGRAD, Aug. 22.—Russian working men are receiving the highest wages in history—and cannot buy sufficient food, clothes or shoes. Prices for these necessities are out of all bounds. The winter soon to come will be of terrific hardship for the Russian people and apparently only continuance of stern iron hand control can solve the difficulty.

Premier Kerensky has acute realisation of the problem. He is grappling magnificently with its difficulties, considering it as a war problem pure and simple. Already he has cut through endless circles of obstacles. his main task to-day was in stopping speculation by peasants all over Russia. They are holding back crops, awaiting still higher prices, and becoming more dissatisfied themselves over the declining purchasing power of money. Another feature is the congestion of poor equipment of the railroads and new short hours of labour forced from employers, which has resulted in decreasing the output of manufacturers.

In this economic situation the conference of political parties at Moscow, beginning Sunday, promises to be a battle between liberalism and reactionism. A successful coalition between the cadet party and the workmen's and soldiers' members was believed impossible to-day, unless the cadets yield still further. The workmen and soldiers' leaders insist they have conceded all but their actual existence; the cadet members demand that the workmen and soldiers must surrender all their influence to the Government.

Says There Is Plenty Of Meat In Canada

CATTLE ARE EXPORTED TO THE U. S. FROM CANADA—AND WHAT THEN?

Winnipeg Paper Quotes Prices Showing Meats Cheaper Across the Line Than Here?

Friday night from the city stock yards of Winnipeg there were shipped to St. Paul 45 carloads of cattle, all intended for the butcher

Stock yard statistics show that for the month of July there was shipped from Winnipeg to St. Paul a total of 2,098 head of cattle destined for the butchers.

A comparison of prices that the people of Winnipeg are paying for their beef and meat supplies as compared with the people of St. Paul follows:

Winnipeg prices as advertised:

Fancy round steak, 22c.
Stewing steak, 20c.
Tender shoulder steak, 18c.
Shoulder pot roast, 17c.
Legs or loin of lamb, 30c.
Rib roast beef, 20c.
Sweet Clover bacon, 45c.

St. Paul Prices as advertised:

Fancy sirloin steak, 15c.
Choice cuts porterhouse, 18c.
Tender shoulder steak, 12 1-2c.
Choice pot roast, 10c.
Best lamb steak, 15c.
Rib roast fancy beef, 12 1-2c.
Strip bacon, 30c.

Other prices which are quoted in St. Paul papers are: Sugar-cured hams, 23c per lb., boiling beef, 10c, per lb.; pork chops, 24c; veal chops, 20c; lamb chops, 25c.

Apparently in Winnipeg the consumers are paying from a third to a half more for some of the staple meats than in St. Paul.

Shipping of cattle is said to be going on to the same extent from Ontario to Buffalo, and from Quebec to New York, while west of this there are large consignments going from Saskatchewan, and especially from Albera, down the Soo line to the abattoirs in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Would Stand Aghast.

"If the actual number of butcher cattle that is being shipped from Canada to the States at the present time were known," said a cattle man to-day, "the whole country would stand aghast at the anomaly of the whole thing and would rise in such resentment against the hideous boosting of prices of a commodity of which there is plenty in the country, that they would force the food authorities to take a different course of action to what they seemingly propose."—Winnipeg Free Press.

SEES LOST GIRL IN SHOW.

Boy Recognizes Runaway Cousin Among Players.

CANTON, Ohio., Aug. 22. — "Oh, look! There's Doris!" This exclamation by a small boy in a Wild West show in a carnival at Youngstown ended a State-wide search by a distracted mother, who had been hunting a long time for her fifteen-year-old daughter, Doris Rice, a Massillon school girl.

The boy was a cousin of Doris. The girl ran away and with Helen Fetrow, 16, joined a carnival company at Cuyahoga Falls, as cowgirl dancers. Her mother, who had offered $50 reward for her return, was notified and brought her home.

WEALTH CONSCRIPTION WINS.

U. S. Senate Unanimously Adopted Proopsal to Raise Additional Forty Millions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22. — Advocates of conscription of the country's wealth won a decisive victory when the Senate to-day, by a vote of 7 to 0, adopted the Gerry amendment to the War Revenue bill, raising $40,000,000 additional revenue from incomes.

REMEMBER THE BOYS IN THE TRENCHES.

Remember the boys in the trenches at morn,
When pleading in prayer, with the Father above,
That His mighty protection and care through the day
May be over the friends you so tenderly love.

Remember the boys in the trenches at noon,
And commend them to Heaven on low-bended knee,
For they left all they loved, that their kindred and home
From the menacing horrors of war might be free.

Remember the boys in the trenches at night,
Ere you seek sweet repose from the toil of the day,
And thank God, you can sleep in your bed unafraid,
While the brave lads are keeping the foeman at bay.

Remember the boys in the trenches all times—
It is surely befitting and right so to do;
For night, noon and morning, where dangers are rife,
They are venturing all, for their country and you.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

CHAPTER X.

MIDNIGHT ON THE MOUNTAIN TOP.

And we will talk, until thought's melody
Become too sweet for utterance, and it die
In words, to live again in looks which dart
With thrilling tone into the voiceless heart,
Harmonising silence without a sound.
—Percy Bysshe Shelley.

When Enid asked her if everything was all right, Polly experienced a quick sense of comfort—undoubted comfort, though unaccountable. The alien girl of the valley had somehow divined the element of uneasiness that tinged the atmosphere of the Toll-gate House that night. Polly knew that by her voice, her eyes, by a certain steady alertness of manner that suggested a prepared apprehension, a reasoning appreciation of possibilities that, however, foreign to her, she was still able to recognize.

"All right?" she repeated, half-smiling, in a sort of oddly relaxed way. "Why I suppose so! Only—"

She laughed outright. The other girl had become, if only for a moment, a comrade. "One never knows just what all's going to happen up here!" she confessed. "I reckon nothing much'll turn up, only—there's a right-smart lot of trouble doing to-night and Four Trails is a mighty handy place to stop off at!"

She laughed again, her dark eyes frankly appreciative of the danger and adventure in which she habitually lived, moved and breathed. Then, her tanned, lovely young face grew sober.

"Dad's gone off," she said hesitatingly. "He got sort of upset, wondering how things were going, and seemed like he had to go. I — I feel sort of worried about him. His heart is queer, and he oughtn't to be running about at night, alone."

There was real trouble in her voice. Enid responded to it by starting up with vigor.

"Why on earth didn't you go with him?" she demanded almost indignantly.

"Well—" Polly was rather at a loss as to how to put it. "You were here, and——"

"Polly Mason!" exclaimed the other, without ceremony. "If you dare to say that you let your father go off alone on my account——"

"He wouldn't have let me go with him anyhow," the mountain girl put in hastily. "He hates being watched and babied, and that sort of thing. But if I could have kind of followed, and—and—"

"Well," declared Enid with decision, standing up and arranging her hair with firm little hands, "you're going to go off and 'kind of follow' him right away, do you hear? And I'll go with you."

But of this Polly would not hear. If she did go Enid should insist on her going (which Enid accordingly did) she should go alone. Enid would be quite safe in the Toll-gate House—if she weren't afraid just of 'the lonesomeness.' Polly admitted that it was lonesome there at night sometimes. But Enid stoutly declared that she wasn't the least bit afraid. She would sit by the fire in the living room and wait for Polly to come home.

"And mind you bring your father with you when you do come!" she commanded her.

So Polly set out in the windy dark, and Enid, after watching her off through the shadows that seemed to crowd threateningly close to the Toll-gate House, closed the door upon them and came back to the fire to listen to the old wooden clock ticking off the hours, and to think a vast number of brand-new thoughts.

And so engrossed was she in these meditations of hers that she could not have said how long nor how short a time had elapsed before she heard a step outside the house, and a hand upon the latch.

She almost screamed in swift terror, but the moment of panic was short-lived for the door swung open promptly and disclosed to her the big figure of Martin Hale framed against the night. The quiet of the lamp-lit, fire-lit room which had made her feel oddly safe a minute before suddenly became only a stage setting to throw out by contrast the almost splendid personality of the man who had come so unexpectedly to encroach upon her midnight vigil.

The fate of the Lady of Shalott was a romantic one, take it all in all. She could not, to be sure, taste of the fullness of joy of life, but she had two great blessings: she had no sense of humor, and she could be just as sentimental as she liked. These are boons denied to the modern, all-round girl.

Enid would have loved, just once in a while, to be in a romantic situation, even if it were a tragically romantic one, and best of all, to be able to give her mind to it without seeing its absurdity. But so far, much as she had thirsted for passionate sentiment a perverse imp inside her mind had ridiculed every possibility as it had come up. And anyway, modern life is against that sort of thing, whatever your personal inclinations. I wonder if the Lady of Shalott wasn't happier at her mirror and spinning wheel than Enid was in playing golf and bridge, riding, wearing pretty clothes, and generally enjoying the comfortable realities of existence?

At all events when she confronted Martin Hale in the lonely Toll-gate House with the winds whispering outside and not another sound save the ticking of the clock she felt as though Romance—Adventure—the Fairy Tale element—were for the first time beckoning to her. Not that she loved Jack less, nor that she loved Martin more either—but she was young, secretly emotional (which is the most dangerous way to be emotional) and being furious with Jack, ripe to be attracted by another man. Or, perhaps it would be fairer to say attracted by the possibilities of being alone with another man. She did not mean to flirt with Martin Hale but she had a latent wish that he would try to make love to her—in a very respectable fashion, of course—or at least, want to, and—show it.

In short, she was preparing to engage in the time-honored game called "Playing with Fire."

He came forward slowly, looming huge in the lamplight. Heavens, how big the man was, and how overpoweringly good-looking!

"Well," he said, "I did it."

She gave an exclamation of enthusiasm.

"Gave the warning?"

He nodded.

"Met some of the Sheriff's men, and told them. I feel rotten about it, too—giving the boys away!"

"But it was the right thing!" she urged.

"Oh, yes, it was the right thing," he admitted, but his tanned fair face still held a lowering look.

"I want to tell old Mason about it," he said, looking around.

"He's gone out. Miss Mason, too."

"Polly gone!" His expression was startled and a little anxious. "She ain't alone?"

Then Enid did a horrid thing. She knew that if Martin Hale thought Polly was alone he would go and hunt for her, so after a moment's hesitation she deliberately gave him a false impression.

"There was a woman here," she said, slowly, "a queer looking woman funnily dressed."

"The Widow Short?" His face relaxed into a smile. "So Polly went back with her, eh? I'll go over there after a spell and fetch her back."

He threw his shabby hat on the table and came nearer to her. Big as he was, and untutored in the social graces, there was nothing awkward about him. He moved with natural ease and dignity as a fine animal moves. He could not be clumsy if he tried.

He leaned against the mantelpiece looking down at Enid, her lovely little coral pink in the firelight, her face burnished gold.

"Seems sort of hard—you being here all alone," he said, his big voice softened unaccountably. "Long?"

She was unused to the brevity of hill-talk, and repeated, "Long?"

"Long since they left you — all here alone," he elucidated.

"It seems long," she said truthfully. It was inevitable that she should add with that dangerous candor which is part and parcel of the game of "Playing with Fire": "I'm so very thankful that you came!"

In Martin Hale was the soul of a poet. To him this meeting on the mountain tops with a Fairy Princess such as Enid was like a dream hitherto unrealized, a phantom too long hushed in fancy, a coming true of exquisite unrealities which he had been guarding in his heart of hearts.

Spelling Old Friendships.

So far as men are concerned, the warmest friendship is that which exists between two fellows whose wives have never met. A friend that we have known and liked for years has drifted away from us, and we suppose he feels that we have drifted away from him. We liked each other so well that we wanted our wives to meet and be good friends. Finally they met, and, as might have been expected, they cared nothing in the world for each other. In fact, one of them said she couldn't see what on earth anybody could find in her to admire, and we suppose the other said about the same thing. We felt that our friend knew what our wife thought of his wife, and we were a little ashamed to be in his company. Probably he felt the same. At any rate, we haven't had much of anything to do with each other since. We speak, but no one would ever guess that we once were bosom friends.—Claude Callan in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Spanish Irishmen.

A recent writer draws attention to the connection which has long existed between Ireland and Spain. In the days of the "Wild Geese," when Irishmen were carving out futures for themselves as soldiers of fortune in many lands, they went in large numbers to Spain. Then again large numbers of Irish men and women, many of them belonging to well known families, emigrated to Spain in the early days of the nineteenth century. All these immigrants were adopted by the country, and they adopted it, whole heartedly—so whole heartedly, indeed, that, as the writer already referred to pointed out, hardly any of their present representatives speak English, at any rate as "a native tongue," and they have lost all touch with Irish life. They have retained their names, however, unaltered, and in the Spanish army list are to be found many such names as O'Connor, O'Neil, O'Donnell, Shaw, and so on.—Christian Science Monitor

HARVESTERS! LOOK!

36,000 farm labourers are wanted in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, for the harvesting of the crop.

The Canadian Northern Railway will operate the first excursion trains for the West, leaving Toronto Union Depot at 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. August 21st, and 10 p.m. August 30th, and running through solid to Winnipeg.

The equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars, lunch counter cars, and, in addition, the railway will continue their last year's innovation of keeping a special car for the accommodation of single women and families, and of placing it in the train where the occupants will be separated from the other passengers.

The territory served by the Canadian Northern Lines offers the widest choice of employment with high wages, but regardless of where you may locate, remember we give the best service to Winnipeg, where you will re-purchase to final destination, no matter on what Line it may be.

For leaflet showing special train service, with dates, number of men required at various points and other information, apply to Thos. Mark, Town Agent, or General Passenger Department, Canadian Northern Railway, Toronto. t-t-s-tf-36

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Making an Acquaintance

Method Was Breezy, But Effective

By F. A. MITCHEL

Miss Atherton had gone to the country for the summer. She was a devoted automobilist and had intended to drive herself to the summer home of the Athertons, but the machine broke down the day before she was to start, and so busy were the mechanics that no one was available to make repairs. Miss Atherton therefore reluctantly decided to take a train, and the auto went to the shop to wait till some one could find time to repair it.

From the moment Miss Atherton reached her country home she missed her auto. She busied herself in her flower garden and returned temporarily to the bicycle which she had ridden as a little girl, but none of her devices for killing time sufficed.

A week passed and the auto did not come. To one used to motoring the perambulators provided by nature seem very inefficient. Miss Atherton fretted at having to walk or to remain at home on a bright afternoon when she would like to be spinning along over smooth roads in her car.

One morning she started for a walk. The weather was balmy and rather suggestive of a siesta than trudging along a country road. Miss Atherton's motions were languorous. Presently she passed a spick and span machine standing beside the road. At the end of a long walk was a house. Doubtless the car belonged to some one in the house. The lady stopped and surveyed the machine covetously. It was a car for two persons. The nickel plate of the wheel, the starting and illuminating devices glistened in the sun.

Miss Atherton was tempted to open the door and rest herself on the cushions. Glancing at the house, no one was in sight. No one was coming up or down the road. There was a click and Miss Atherton was in the car. Another click denoted that she had closed the door.

Everything about her was quiet. Only birds sang.

She touched the electric starter. There was a purr-r-r of wheels. Before she realized what she was doing she had completed turning on the power, and the machine moved. How lovely! How easy! How comfortable! How restful after walking! She would run up the road for a short distance, turn and bring the car back to the place where she had found it.

As she moved off Jack Coolidge, the owner of the captured machine, came out of the house and from the porch saw some one running away with his machine. Instead of following on his legs, he ran around to a garage, got out another machine and gave chase.

Quite likely stealing is often at first unintentional. The thief admires something, perhaps covets it. He takes it in his hand. Surprised by some one who enters without seeing his act, he pockets the object, intending to replace it when he can do so unnoticed.

Miss Atherton was about to turn with the auto when she heard the sputter of a motor engine behind her. What possessed her to act as she did was a mystery to her. Hearing the words "Stop thief!" it occurred to her that if she obeyed the order she would be taken to a police station, tried for larceny and sent to state prison. Her first impulse was to put on speed; her second was to put on more speed, and the third was to use all the power of which the machine was capable.

Then followed a mad race. Coolidge got near enough to see that a woman was at the wheel, but he could not see what she was like. But presently, when she turned a short distance ahead of him, he got a better view and was astonished to see one who wore the apparel of a lady. The mystery deepened. Women don't steal auto cars. Such thefts are usually made by men, and very rough men at that. He could not conceive of a lady stealing his car. She was speeding along at such breakneck speed that he began to fear she would come to grief. What to do, he could not decide. He followed on as he had begun.

An auto coming from the opposite direction met the fleeing girl, and the driver saw by the expression and the speed at which she was traveling that she was under some great excitement. She flashed by him, and when in a few moments her pursuer did the same it was evident that a mad race was on between a woman and a man. Was it a real chase or material for a moving picture show? The observer did not know, but having an old fashioned machine he decided not to interfere and passed on, wondering. Other machines were met, and the drivers of most of them, seeing two cars coming like the wind, drew up beside the road to give them a safe passage.

Coolidge was driving a machine not capable of making the speed of the one being run away with, but for a time he gained on it, since he dare use his power to a greater extent. The fugitive for a time maintained some degree of caution, but as her pursuer gained on her she took risks without being fully conscious of their magnitude. Coolidge, having her before him, could see every turn she made and the risks she took, fearing that he was goading her to take them, slackened speed himself, hoping she would do the same.

Unfortunately for this purpose, the lady had no eyes in the back of her head and could not see whether her pursuer was gaining on her or losing ground. However, her ears told her that the machine behind her was making less noise, and had she not lost her head completely she would have reduced her speed accordingly. Since she showed no sign of doing so, Coolidge pressed his accelerator and soon drew up to within hailing distance. He thought of calling, but, remembering the result of his first effort, refrained.

Presently he saw the thief turn a sharp bend in the road. The auto skidded, followed a tortuous course for some distance and brought up against a deserted shanty. Before it struck the chauffeur had succeeded in reducing its speed, and neither she nor the machine was much injured, though both were badly jarred. But Miss Atherton was more rattled at being overhauled than by the jarring.

"Take me to jail!" she cried. "Take me to jail. I'm a thief."

Now, there was everything in Miss Atherton's appearance to belie her confession. Coolidge saw at once that what appeared on the surface was not the truth.

"Are you hurt?" he asked solicitously.

His tone was reassuring. Miss Atherton looked up and saw a gentleman regarding her not only kindly, but admiringly.

Miss Atherton, though she had regained her equanimity and satisfied herself that she was in no danger of being dragged to jail, was still not herself. Nevertheless, she was still a woman. She began to throw the blame on to Mr. Coolidge.

"What were you trying to run me down for?" she asked in no friendly tone.

"I could not see that a lady was driving my machine, so I naturally supposed some one was trying to get away with it."

Miss Atherton looked as if she were about to burst into tears.

"You were quite welcome to use my machine, I assure you," faltered Coolidge, fearing a collapse.

"Then why didn't you say so?"

"How could I say so when I was not on hand?"

"But you cried out, 'Stop, thief!'"

"I supposed some one was stealing my machine. I did not know that a young lady had merely borrowed it."

Miss Atherton was recovering herself slowly. She made no rejoinder to Mr. Coolidge's last remark. He concluded to make an effort to get her either to her home or his, anywhere but where she was. There were two vehicles to be taken care of, but now that she had ceased to be buoyed up by excitement he did not have to trust her to drive either of them. Besides, he did not know whether the one she had been driving would be available after the collision. Opening the door of the car in which he had made the pursuit, he begged her to enter.

"Where are you going to take me?" she asked.

"To your home."

"What will you do with the one I have injured?"

"Leave it where it is for the present."

She walked lamblike to the door he was holding open and entered the car. He entered at the wheel side and, turning into the road, drove back over the course they had been racing. But the return speed was very different from the outgoing. Mr. Coolidge was quite delighted with the adventure. He was pleased that his car had not been stolen and still more pleased to have a pretty girl beside him who had given him an opportunity to show his gallantry by borrowing his car without leave.

She begged him to permit her to send a man to take his machine to a shop and repair it, but he declared that it had not been damaged. Then began an explanation as to how she had come to run away with his car, but it was not exactly the one already given with this story. Up to the point where Coolidge had cried "Stop thief!" it was a succession of excuses. From that point onward it was a lamentation that he had made her think that she was flying from a long imprisonment. Coolidge declared that hanging would be too good for him, but he did not suggest anything else that he could have done under the circumstances. By the time he got her home he had implored her forgiveness, but what for did not matter. There was a sort of reconciliation between them, and everybody knows that making up between a young man and a young woman is liable to stir the emotions. At any rate, when they parted Coolidge had received permission to call in the evening to learn if the shock Miss Atherton had received had been fraught with serious consequences.

Coolidge availed himself of the privilege accorded him, and Miss Atherton had scarcely finished dinner before he was announced. He seemed very anxious lest some sign of physical or mental shock had appeared during the interval since he had last seen her and gave vent to an expression of joy when she assured him that she had suffered no injury whatever, except that she should have placed herself in such an embarrassing position. Coolidge assured her that he understood perfectly the innocence of the motive that actuated her in temporarily borrowing his car and assumed all the blame for causing her to take to flight. These self accusations and his efforts to render them expiatory took up the evening until near midnight, when the gentleman bade the young lady good night and went home.

A few days later Miss Atherton's car arrived, and she did penance for appropriating Mr. Coolidge's machine by inviting him to drive with her.

During the summer the couple took many auto rides together, with the usual consequences. The nuptial festivities were celebrated in the autumn.

Her Recommendation.

A woman prominent as a social worker was in the city to engage a new girl the other day. She visited an employment agency which makes a specialty of finding places for country housemaids and was much pleased with one from the country.

"Why did you leave your last place?" asked the woman.

"I didn't have no last place," answered the girl, "because I ain't had no last place to leave, and I'm still working at it, being for myself that I've been working, and I'm sure I'm a good servant, and I can recommend myself to you, ma'am."—Exchange.

Fanfoot Lizards.

Lizards are abundant in Palestine, Arabia and Egypt. Among these is the fanfoot lizard (Ptyodactylus gecko). It is reddish brown, spotted with white. The geckos live on insects and worms, which they swallow whole. They derive their name from the peculiar sound which some of the species utter.

Woman's Aim.

A bullet shot upward from the earth goes up to aphelion with a retarding or decreasing motion, but a bullet fired by a woman at a burglar will turn a street corner and hit an innocent pedestrian in the leg nine times out of ten.—Florida Times-Union.

Barbers Itch Eczema

BARBERS' itch is in reality a form of eczema. The delicate skin becomes irritated from shaving, a little infection gets in, and soon burning, stinging eczema is set up.

Fortunately, there is cure for Barbers' Itch and Eczema in the well-known Dr. Chase's Ointment, and once you have made the acquaintance of this soothing, healing ointment, you will always keep it on hand to apply after shaving. Not every time, but whenever there is roughness or irritation of the skin.

Mr. Chas. A. Duxbury, Mosford, Ont., states:—"While out in the Northwest I caught barbers' itch, and anyone who has had it will admit that it is not at all pleasant. It began on my neck below the chin, and spread until I became alarmed. It itched so bad that I had to scratch it, and that only made it worse.

"A friend of mine told me to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I did so. The application of this ointment gave prompt relief to the itching, and it was not many weeks until I was entirely freed of this annoying ailment."

Some of the ingredients of Dr. Chase's Ointment are very expensive, and for this reason imitations and substitutes are offered because they afford greater profits to the dealer. They will only disappoint you. The genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment will positively cure.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM WARSAW SOLDIER

Warsaw, August 21. — The Women's Institute are planning the August boxes to send to the Dummer boys overseas and will welcome contributions of fruit cake, cookies, chocolate bars or chewing gum. Thes may be handed in on or before Tuesday, August 28th.

The ladies are reminded that th is the season to prepare fruit for sending to the Convalescent Homes, and Hospitals. A large supply of glass jars is on hand and anyone wishing to obtain any number of the same may do so by applying to Mrs. Albert Helps.

Following is a letter from Corp. Charles L. Perrie to the secretary of the Women's Institute. The box referred to in the letter was one sent by the Institute late in January:

H. M. T. 'Medic'
En route back to G.E.A.
May 26, 1917.

Dear Mrs. Taylor:

It is with a feeling of incompetence that I pen these lines to you to thank from my heart the very kind ladies of the Warsaw Women's Institute for their thoughtfulness and generosity in thinking of a traveller who dwells temporarily in their midst and who at the present time is merely attempting to do his best towards doing his duty. I feel indeed that my pen fails miserably to express my feelings so I must ask you to take the deed for the word where I fail.

As you will see by the above address I am once again on the water. The details which led up to the voyage are: In January towards the end we had very successfully driven the enemy south over the Refugi River, my own battalion participating in the work, and I can assure you we gave them a few very severe bumps, and thumps, after the native element of our brigade had established a position south of the river. (I might say we are or have been up till now, brigaded with native soldiers.) Native soldiers always have to bear the brunt of the heavy work whether it be fighting or trekking, and we were there to keep up the reputation of the white people, by no means an easy job, I can assure you, and a couple of brigades of houris, West African Field Force, had crossed and our position thoroughly secured. All white troops were withdrawn. On returning to the base I was taken ill and was invalided to S.A. a few days after the battalion had left. Arriving at Cape Town I proceeded to Wynberg hospital, and after a short time rejoined the boys who were also lying at Wynberg, and are now on their way back to the East to see if possible the finish.

Now I suppose that you would like to know a little of South Africa as I saw it. Coming into Table Bay we had our first view of Tabe Mountain and Cape Town, and it formed a very beautiful picture. The town which is all around the base of the mountain, is not very deep at any point but one of the deepest is the town itself about two and a half miles from the town itself, about two and half miles from the sea front to the base of the hill. The majority of the homes are either of white stone or cement and many are flat roofed, and the mountain rises up immediately behind, making a very imposing scene. From the town itself the suburbs extend on either side, in some places the hill and ocean being so close as to allow only a road.

Wynberg were we went, is a suburb of Cape Town, but is about 9 miles distant, either by rail, road or tram. In the hospital we were treated very fairly, more especially by the people outside, who were always arranging outings, etc., for our benefit, to places of interest around, theatres, and motor rides around Table Mountain, a distance of 35 miles, which I once had the luck to drop in for.

Whilst in the hospital we had to wear the blues (we were not always in a fit of the blues, but we were always in a suit of them) so as to ensure that no hospital patient was out on other than pass days, etc., but we were granted passes from 12 to 8 on Mondays, Thursdays and Sundays when we were allowed to travel into Cape Town by rail free and get food at the Road House Institute at half price, the remainder in this case being made up by the S. A. Red Cross. The hospital and camp were both near to a Methodist church (Wesleyan) and as soon as I was discharged from the hospital I helped them with their choir the little it was in my power, and continued until I left.

Personally I did not like Cape Town and the district because there is no separation of blacks and whites and the place is overrun with half-breeds. However, on the whole I had a very enjoyable time there amongst the people that I did get to know.

Leaving Wynberg, we proceeded to Durban by rail, a journey of four days and three nights duration, passing through Dee-Aar, Kroonstad, Ladysmith, Colenso, Peitermaritsburg and at most we had a good send-off, and all good wishes for a safe and speedy return. The country which I have heard a lot about and often wished to see, failed to stir up any feelings of pride or any longings to see it again, for it is a vast tract of rough, undulating country with little water, and through which wild and dangerous storms periodically travel. One can I think always get a good idea of a country from its homesteads and these were with few exceptions poor and rough looking until we crossed the line into Natal, then things brightened up considerably and country and homesteads alike had a healthier and wealthier appearance as if live people peopled it.

Durban itself is a semi-tropical place where oranges, bananas, etc., grow well, and is delightfuly situated on a long hill slope from the sea, and facing south east, and our camp was on the sands.

Here there is a decided difference in the native question. They are kept in their places, are respectful to whites, and the half-breeds are few and far between, making one feel more at home and happier in the fact that one lives in a more moral town.

We only stayed at Durban for a week, most of which I spent in eating, so that when the time comes presently when we have to go hungry I will have something to fall back upon.

The day we came on board a small mail arrived for us and it was distributed on board. Now a parcel is to us a very difficult thing to analyze, because everything from home and freinds is of the best. The smallest thing brings warm feelings, and memories of the days that were, and that we all hope will soon return, are recalled.

Mail day to soldiers in East Africa is almost as sacred as Sunday, so once more I repeat I feel unable to do justice to my thoughts and heartfelt thanks for the kindness you ladies of the W.W.I. are showing me. The socks are very acceptable, as the army socks are useless to me as to most of the fellows and home made socks are the best from all points of view. The tobacco and cigarette have their value greatly enhanced by the fact that they came from Canada; writing paper and envelopes are always welcome and chewing gum is a very fine thing on trekk in the east, and is not procurable in East Africa.

Well, now, I must close this long letter hoping that it will not bore you to distraction. Please remember me to all friends in Warsaw, all of whom I hope are well and prospering as well as the war will let them.

Once more thanking you for the parcel of good things, believe me to be,

Sincerely yours,
C. L. Perrie.

DYSENTERY —IS— DANGEROUS

Dysentry is one of the worst forms of bowel complaint. It comes on so suddenly, the pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges occur with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood, and the action on the system so weakening that its termination often proves fatal.

When the bowels get loosened up in this way, and you wish to check the unnatural discharge without bringing on constipation, there is only one remedy to use, and that is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

This remedy is not an experiment as it has been used in thousands of Canadian homes during the past 72 years.

Mrs. Albert Fearon, Bryant's Corner, N. B., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for the past ten years, and I would not be without it in the house.

Last fall my little boy, three years old, took very bad with dysentery. After taking 3 or 4 doses of "Dr. Fowler's" he began to improve, and before he had used all the bottle he was entirely cured. I sincerely recommend it to all."

There are many cheap imitations of this sterling remedy on the market. Ask for Dr. Fowler's and see that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DECORATION GIVEN FOR AIDING BRITONS

Reason for Award of Decoration to Mr. Gerard Made Public.

LONDON, August 22.—The statement that King George had conferred the Order of Knight Grand Cross of the Bath an J. W. Gerard, former American Ambassador to Germany, appears here for the first time in unofficial announcement in the Daily Mail, which says the decoration was given Mr. Gerard in recognition of his unceasing and courageous efforts to ameliorate the lot of British prisoners in Germany.

The Daily Mail adds that the decoration was offered Mr. Gerard in February but that he was unable formally to accept it until his retirement from the diplomatic service. The "G. C. B." (Knight Grand Cross of the Bath), involves knighthood with the prefixed title of "Sir."

Canadians Advance Again at Lens

French And Italian Prisoners Number 24,776

CANADIANS PUSH FORWARD THEIR ENCIRCLING LINES AROUND LENS

Fighting Around That Point is the Hottest on British Front But General Currie's Men Have Made Gains Southeast of City---Prisoners Taken By the French Have Increased to 8,426 and by the Italians to 16,350---New Positions Taken By General Canorna.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:—

LONDON, August 23.—Lens was still the hottest point in the fighting on the British front to-day, but despite all resistance the Canadians advanced their circling lines slightly.

Field Marshal Haig's report said the slight advance was Southeast of the French coal city.

"On the Ypres battle front, east of Langemarck, a hostile attack at a strong point under gun fire, was repulsed," the British Commander-in-Chief asserted. "In the neighbourhood of Lombartzyde the enemy raided a forward post. Two of our men are missing."

PARIS, August 23.—Prisoners in France's greatest drive taken since Monday were increased to-day to a total of 8,426, according to the War Office statement.

Of these 7,640 were unwounded; 600 were hospital cases, and there were 166 officers. Other fruits of the French victory were twenty-four cannon and more than two hundred machine guns.

The fighting to-day apparently slackened a trifle. The official report merely declaring: "North of the Aisne, the German artillery was most active throughout the night, especially at Braye and Hurtebise.

"On the left bank of the Meuse the French artillery was very active during the night, dominating the German guns."

The War Office also reported a bombardment by French aviators of Fribourg-en-Brisgau, over the aviation grounds there, of stations at Colmar and Schlestatt, and enemy bivouacs in the Verdun region.

LONDON, August 23.—British seaplanes nightly bombing expeditions announced for last night by the Admiralty to-day comprised: Zeebrugge —The Mole, shipping and batteries attacked, some hits observed. Chistilles —Aerodrome the aim of bombs. One shed set afire. All British machines returned.

ROME, August 23.—Italian forces have captured 16,350 Austrians in their sweeping advance, the official statement announced to-day. Of these 350 were officers.

The War Office announced: "New successes on the south wing. Dosse Faits with strong positions were carried."

GRAND HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, August 22.—The French to-day held all the advantages gained, and made a further push forward, capturing large numbers of prisoners, bringing the total to more than 6,000. The bombardment maintained was of almost unprecedented violence, especially on the left bank of the Meuse, where the Germans resisted strongly with the aid of fresh troops hurriedly brought to the scene.

The slopes of Le Mort Homme have the appearance of a crumbling edifice from the effects of the fire from pieces of great calibre, while the subterranean fastnesses on this hill have been reduced to heaps of stone, large units of Germans being temporarily buried under the wreckage before being taken prisoner.

Along the Valley of the Meuse hundreds of Germans deserted, one large batch coming in with mail for their comrades, who surrendered yesterday morning.

FRENCH TOWNS RECAPTURED.

The Town of Samogneux, and also Regnieville, fell into French hands to-day, and, going forward with the utmost vigor and bravery, the French took a long series of trenches uniting Samogneux with Hill 344, after bloody hand-to-hand fighting, in which they drove the Germans before them from traverse to traverse. The extreme violence of the German barrage fire and the volumes of gas did not effect in the slightest the dash and impetuosity of the French troops. They felt themselves masters, and showed it. However strong the enemy confronting them ,the German resistance was overcome by French will-power.

During the first day of the battle, when the double summit of the famous Le Mort Homme was attacked by Zouaves and Tirailleurs and carried with magnificent courage, the French troops reached the German batteries, stationed forces on the creek, and blew up eight gigantic mortars, whose breech-pieces they carried off. It was on the right bank of the Meuse where the greatest progress was made. Here the French troops were the same as won the victory at Peppr Hill on Dcember 15. They were obliged to charge on this occasion wearing gas masks, and within an hour had gained 3,000 yards, and held it all, despite a furious rain of shells.

FRENCH TROOPS ELATED.

The troops to-night are so pleased with their great victory that they demand to be led forward to drive the Germans farther back. The honours of organizing the successful offensive belong, apart from General Petain, to Generals Fayolle and Guillaumat.

25,000 Prisoners in the Last Three Days

LONDON, August 23.—The Allies on the western front have taken twenty-five thousand prisoners in the last three days, and a total of 32,500 prisoners on the western front in the month of August, declared General Frederick B. Maurice, CChief of the British Army Intelligence Department, to-day.

Discussing the Russian situation General Maurice said this was not so bad as thought. The Germans had made only local gains on the eastern front, and there was no likelihood of a Russian defeat.

PARIS, August 23.—Fifteen wounded men, including three German prisoners, and twelve nurses, mostly males, were killed when German aviators bombarded a French hospital within the French lines near Verdun. When orderlies tried to extinguish the hospital flames, the German aviators turned machine guns on them. Eventually the brutal raiders circled aloft and got away. The hospital was plainly marked as such and well known to the Germans.

BOUNDARY IS ADJUSTED.

PARIS, Aug. 22.— A despatch from Turin to the Journal Des Debats says the Cabinets of Rome and Paris have reached an agreement to rectify the frontier near the railway line under construction from Nice to Ventimiglia and Cuneo, whereby the entire Torrent Roja becomes Italian, and Italy cedes to France several square miles of territory toward Moliesas.

GREAT ASSAULT COSTING THE TEUTONS STAGGERING LOSSES

Enemy Casualties in Present Allied Offensive Reach Close to 100,000 in Dead and Wounded While 24,000 Have Been Captured

ATTACKING THE RUSSIANS

LONDON, August 23.—The Allies' great offensive unceasingly boring ahead to-day has already cost the Germans and Austrians close to 100,000 in dead and wounded, and at least 24,000 prisoners on the British, French and Italian fronts.

But despite these staggering losses and no let-up to-day in the deluge of both shells and men against their lines on the West and Italian fronts, Germany is starting an offensive of her own against the Russian lines. The drive has already gained ground on the Riga front.

The British theory is that the German war chiefs, apprehensive of a loss of public morale because of the enormous losses and forced giving away on the Western and Italian fronts, have started a military move which they will use to keep other front news subordinated. The Russian army's weakness in munitions and supplies permits a relatively small force of well organized Germans to make a strong impression against them.

The British and French onslaught on the West front, and the Italian drive to the south, gained more ground to-day, after enduring a night of the most violent counter attacks.

Acute Crisis Developing In The House

Liberals Are Obstructing Unfair Sections in Soldiers' Voting Bill

OTTAWA, Aug. 23. — A most acute crisis is developing at Ottawa. Liberals have already given strong indications of the deliberate obstruction of the soldiers' voting bill unless the Minister of Justice agrees to the elimination of certain alleged unfair sections by means of which the Opposition claims it is the intention of the government to mass votes where they please in all close constituencies. This morning Messrs. Carvel and MacLean have been summoned to a conference with the Premier and Mr. Doherty in order to see if some compromise may be reached. Both of these men are out and out conscriptionists, so that their obstruction to the bill was taken very seriously by the government.

Fishing Party At Trent River Had A Narrow Escape

An accident which might have proved fatal to three parties, happened Tuesday afternoon in the Trent River, opposite Ward's Landing. Mrs. A. H. McKeel and her nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bakes of Campbelford, were out fishing in Mr. McKeel's punt and while anchoring at the cement pier, Mrs. McKeel lost her balance and fell into the water. Mr. Bakes immediately jumped in to rescue her but failed to do so. Mrs. Bakes, not knowing how to manage the boat, drifted some distance away, but her calls for help were heard by Mr. Jack Garneau, who was on his return trip from being down the river. Mr. Garneau managed to get to the pier in time to save the unfortunate parties who, we are pleased to hear, are none the worse of the event. All parties immediately concerned feel very grateful to Mr. Garneau for his heroic act and recognized the fact by presenting him with a handsome gold watch and fob and fancy signet charm on which his name was engraved. Mr. Garneau should receive the customary medal for his noble rescue.

CANADIANS ARE CRAWLING INCH BY INCH INTO LENS SAYS CORRESPONDENT

(By Wm. Philip Simms, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, August 23. —A few yards was all that more than thirty successive and desperately waged German counter-attacks thropghout last night could wrench from the Canadians' grip around Lens. To-day found the Maple Leaf fighters still beating back the picked Teutons' troops and still crawling inch by inch into the city.

In the western outskirts of Lens, in utter pitch darkness after midnight, the Canadians attacked the pithead, Fort St. Louis, and mines adjacent, forging still closer to the centre of the French coal city.

The Canadians' losses remain comparatively light. The troops from the Dominion gained many points of vantage by gallant and spectacular charges, and the Canadians' gunnery was excellent.

WAR VETERANS TO TAKE PROMINENT PART IN LOCAL EXHIBITION

Demonstration of Trench Fighting May Be Given If Necessary Machine Guns and Other Equipment Can Be Secured---Representatives of Peterboro' Industrial to Confer With G. W. V. A. Executive To-night--To-day's General Military News.

It is likely that the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association will take a prominent part in the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition next month. The Veterans may possibly put on a demonstration of trench fighting if the necessary machine guns, star shells, etc., can be secured for the occasion. An exhibition of souvenirs of the Great War under the auspices of the veterans is another suggested feature. Nothing definite has yet been arranged, but representatives of the Exhibition will confer with the executive of the G. W. V. A. at its meeting in the Barrie Buildings to-night, and following the conference there will probably be a definite announcement to be made. The veterans are anxious to assist and if the necessary arrangements can be made the boys in khaki wil be in the limelight at Peterborough's big fair. A demonstration of the methods of trench warfare would be an intensely interesting feature.

Members of the executive of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are reminded of the meeting to-night in the club rooms at the Barrie Building.

Signaller Bob Armstrong, famous centre player of last winter's 247th Battalion hockey team, who enlisted with the Divisional Signallers after being discharged from the 247th, was in Peterborough to-day on his way home to Fort William on leave. "Armie" has been in training at Ottawa for some months with the Signallers and may go overseas shortly.

The Toronto Star says: Captain Martin Dunsford, of Peterborough, a grandson of Col. George T. Denison, chief magistrate of Toronto, has been wounded. Col. Denison received the news to-day. Captain Dunsford, who was fighting with a London, Ont., battalion of the second division, was wounded at Hill 70. This is the same battalion that the late Lt.-Col. Geo. T. Denison, Jr., son of Magistrate Denison, was fighting with when killed.

Lt.-Col. Gordon Morrison, son of Curran Morrison, Police Court clerk, who is home convalescing, following an operation for appendicitis, is the officer in command of this battalion.

Since the war started Col. Denison has lost seven relatives killed in action, and five wounded. They include his son George T., killed in action, and Garnet, wounded. Also several grandsons, nephews, and cousins.

A GET-RICH-QUICK SCHEME.

Two young Irishmen in a Canadian regiment were going into the trenches for the first time, and their captain promised them five shillings each for every German they killed.

Pat lay down to rest while Mike performed the duty of watching. Pat had not lain long, whe he was awakened by Mick shouting:

"They're comin'! They're comin'!

"Who's comin'?" shouts Pat.

"The Germans," replies Mick.

"How many are there?"

"About fifty thousand."

"Begorra," shouts Pat, jumping up and grabbing his rifle "our fortune's made."—London Opinion.

Kingston, Aug. 22.—The 57th Regiment C.D.F. detachment, Peterboro, has arrived at Barriefield Camp to become part of the Eastern Ontario depot battalion. The detachment consisted of Capt. Watt, Capt. Lech, Lieut. Quinn, Sergt. Jay and Sergt. Rogers, with 14 privates.

Announcement is to be made shortly of the retirement from imlitary service of a number of officers at Barriefield Camp. Decrease in the number of men to be trained has made it necessary to cut down on various staffs, particularly that of instrumental work.

The Royal Flying Corps will be leaving Canada in a few weeks, to take up new camps near Dallas, Texas, is the report from Camp Mohawk and Rathbun. Last year the aviators tried flying in cool weather. High altitudes proved so disagreeable that a change was necessary.

Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion has received the following drafts in the last four days: Thirty-eight men from the 24th draft, two n.c.o.'s and 20 men from the 21st draft, two n. c. o.'s and five men from the 15th Regiment, C.D.F., 11 men from the 2nd draft, 20 men from the 38th draft, 15 men from the 253rd draft, five men from the 21st draft, one n.c.o. and one man from No. 3 S.S. Co., four men from the 38th draft, and four men from the 253rd draft.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22. — It is announced that Acting Major A. R. Bawden, of Winnipeg, was killed in action Aug. 15. He had the distinction of being No. 1 in the Canadian Expeditionary Force and was a colour sergeant in the First Winnipeg Rifles Battalion. He was wounded at Festubert.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Lieut.-Col. D. S. MacInnes, Royal Engineers, formerly of the Canadian militia, is gazetted for the Croix d'Officer Legion of Honour. Col. MacInnes holds the D.S.O. and the C.M.G. He was brought to the notice of the Secretary for War for valuable service in January.

LONDON, Aug. 22. — Lieut. A. C. Husband, of the Yorkshire Light Infantry, has been court-martialed at Hull for absence without leave. He came to England as a private with the Canadians. He was a medical student at an Ontario university and received a commision after good service in France. He told the court he met friends in London and asked consideration of his previous record. Sentence will be promulgated later.

Mines' Production Shows Increase

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—An increase of over two million dollars in value of metalliferous production of Ontario mines is shown for the first half of this year over the same period for 1916 according to a statement issued by the Provincial Bureau of Mines to-day.

PRICE OF MILK RAISED.

GUELPH, Aug. 21. — All the local milk dealers who had not already done so boosted the price to the consumers this week. They are now selling milk at slightly over nine cents a quart, or 21 pint tickets for a dollar. Some had previously sold it at 25 tickets for a dollar.

BRITISH TROOPS GAIN IN FLANDERS FIGHTING

Have Captured Important Strategic Positions For a Mile Along the Ypres-Menin Road, Field Marshall Haig Announces.

MUCH AIR FIGHTING

LONDON, August 23.—The British troops, attacking fiercely again to-day, have captured important strategic positions for a mile along the Ypres-Menin road, to a depth of nearly a third of a mile, and farther to the north carried forward their front about a half-mile over an extent of two and a half miles.

The fighting, according to the official report from British Headquarters to-night, was of the most desperate nature, the prisoners taken bearing a small ratio to the losses inflicted on the Germans. The text of the statement reads: "Successful operations were undertaken by our troops this morning to the east and northeast of Ypres for the capture of a series of strong points and fortified farms lying a few hundred yards in front of our positions astride the Ypres-Menin road, and between the Ypres-Roulers Railway and Langemarck.

Counter-Attacks Fail.

"Bitter fighting has taken place at all points. The enemy again launched repeated counter-attacks, which suffered heavy losses from our artillery and machine-gun fire.

"The struggle was particularly fierce in the neighbourhood of the Ypres-Menin road, where the enemy fought desperately to retain command of the high ground. Here our line has ben advanced to a depth of about 500 yards on a front of about a mile.

"A position giving important observation to the eastward was captured by us, and our troops established themselves in the western portion of Inverness Copse. Farther north our line has been carried forward on a front of two and ahalf miles to a greatest depth of over half a mile.

"The garrisons of the captured farms and strong points resited with the greatest stubbornness. In many cases isolated positions were only reduced after fighting lasting throughout the greater part of the day.

"In thes operations we captured over 280 prisoners, but by reason of the obstinate nature of the fighting the prisoners taken bear more than the usually small proportion to the losses inflicted on the enemy. The number of prisoners taken by us in the course of yesterday's fighting in the neighbourhood of Lens is 194, bringing the total in this neighbourhood since the mornig of August 15 to 1,878. In the same period we also captured in this area 56 machine guns and 21 trench mortars, so far counted.

Much Air Fighting.

"Yesterday there was again great activity in the air on both sides. Severe fighting took place. Twelve German airplanes were brought down by our machines. Five others were brought down out of control. Twelve of our airplanes are missing, including two which collided behind the enemy's lines during a bombing raid."

"SEA ADLER" IS REPORTED SUNK BY BRITISH WARSHIP

Famous Sea Raider Which Created Terror in South American Waters Last Winter Has Been Sent to the Bottom

A FEW MEN SAVED

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 23. — The German sea raider the Sea Adler, which created terror in South American waters last winter, has been sunk ,according to members of a British steamship's crew here. The German raider, they said, went down fighting hard after a battle with a British warship. Only a few of her men were saved.

Winners of Examiner Estimating Contest On Dollar Day Jar

The Examiner contest on Dollar Day, as usual, created a great deal of interest. The estimates on the sealer of peas varied greatly, the lowest was 679, while the highest was 30,027. Two Ashburnham ladies had the same number, namely, 10,400. First and second prizes are divided between Miss Payne, 84 London street, and C. Ryan, 221 Princess street, with an estimate of 4,800 each, only three from the correct number. Mr. Ryan had only one estimate in. The remarkable feature of the contest is that Miss Payne, who paid for a year's subscription of $4.00, estimated so well that each ticket got a prize, winning in all $13.50.

The following is the list of winners and the winning numbers:

1—4,800, Miss Payne, 84 London street.
1—C. Ryan, 221 Princess street.
3—4,792, Miss Payne.
4—4,821, Miss Payne.
5—4,782, Mrs. J. Craig, 221 Charlotte street.
6—4,780, Mrs. J. W. Lillico, 579 Homewood Avenue.
7—4,773. L. White, 511 Stewart street.
8—4,769, R. White, 511 Stewart street.
9—4,768, Miss Payne.
10—4,766, W. E. Leal, 247 Aylmer street.
11—4,766. R. White.

If the above will call they can secure their prize money.

Organize To Get Out Vote For Shoe Factory By-law

The organization of the city through the ward machinery employed preparatory to the voting on the Hunter street bridge by-law, is being revived for the Ackerman Shoe Factory by-law. Mayor Duffus is communicating with the Aldermen, Board of Trade members and other citizens, urging that the organization be made as thorough as possible to insure the granting of a fixed assessment for ten years to the new shoe industry. Only two weeks remain and no time should be wasted if the large vote desired is to be polled.

A general meeting of the Greater Peterborough Association will be held shortly, notably next week. An announcement to that effect will be made shortly.

FUTILE FORBIDDING.

Hon. Mr. Hanna, our food controller, is somewhat of a disappointment. He started well by offering to serve without remuneration. The force of that patriotic abnegation has been rather neutralised by the extravagant remuneration provided for his subordinates. That is the first disappointment. The next is the futility of Mr. Hanna's decrees to serve the asserted object of his office, to conserve and cheapen food supplies.

With this laudable object, he forbade the use of wheat for the distillation of whisky, thus diverting the enormous amount of 27,000 pounds of wheat from being wasted to produce whisky, and permitting the continued use of the trifle of 98 millions pounds of other grains for the purpose. That is trifling with the seriousness of the situation; and is merely a sop to the moneyed interests who profit from whisky production. They won't suffer much in pocket from the prohibition of wheat they do not use, so long as the grains almost solely used in making spirits are not barred.

Equally futile, almost, is his decree proscribing meatless days for hotels and eating houses. He forbids only beef and bacon, leaving the choice of substitution of all other meats—veal, lamb, mutton, etc. It will be no saving to the meat supply for home use or exportation if a hotel barred from serving beef or bacon, substitutes the unforbidden forms of meat. There will be no important conservation of general meat supply. It would be better to forbid the use of veal and lamb also in the interest of the future stock breeding industry. Farmers have been urged to not kill their calves in order to prevent the decrease of the stock of the country, and the farmers have been urged to grow more sheep. Neither will be done if a futile food regulation encourages the consumption of veal and lamb—in a way killing the goose that lays the golden egg.

While Canada at home is sparring for party position, Canadian soldiers in France are taking German positions.

AN EMPTY PHRASE.

His Holiness the Pope in his well-intentioned proposals for peace, pleads, among other things, for "freedom of the seas." That is what Germany also demands—and is now trying to enforce—freedom of the seas, to sink, destroy, drown innocent ship-passengers, women and children. Why demand "freedom of the seas" We have it now, and have had it for long. The paths of the seas are clear to all nations for legitimate navigation purposes; and we should have absolute "freedom of the seas" but for the condition of outrage—the virtual piracy—of Germany. The seas of the world are open to all nations upon equal terms. Great Britain has, it is true, secured a splendid preeminence at sea; but she has not stood in the way, except by virtue of superior enterprise and adaptability to maritime pursuits, of any other nation, or nations, doing the same. Great Britain, by a policy of trading freely with all the world, has drawn to herself the commercial treasures of the world. She has trade with every part of the world, simply because she has left the ways open for unhampered free trade with herself. The opportunity of doing the same, as far as free use of the sea was concerned, was open to Germany. Because she could not successfully compete in commercial enterprise with Great Britain, in the spirit of violence and brute force that influences her policy, Germany wishes to accomplish by forces what she has failed to accomplish by the employment of legitimate enterprise.

The phrase "freedom of the seas" has no meaning as basis of demand for it. The seas are now open to all the world, except for the menace and fact of German submarine atrocity, as they will be absolutely free when the power behind the present evil is crushed, and when not only freedom of the seas, but freedom for all the nations and peoples of the earth shall have been secured. "Freedom of the seas" as a condition of peace has no meaning; it is the jargon of the Junkers.

The reconstruction of the Borden Cabinet seems to consist in putting an expensively whitewashed piece of furniture in the backyard.

A NEW DEAL NEEDED.

Hon. Robert Rogers, in his foxy letter of explanation to Sir Robert Borden of his reasons for leaving the Cabinet, speaks of Sir Robert's "most generous proposal of coalition." The generosity consisted in an invitation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to a coalition with a Cabinet that contained Hon. Robert Rogers—a condition that assured Sir Robert that his "generous offer" involved the elements of rejection by any self-respecting public man. It is said that negotiations are still progressing looking to the formation of a union government. In his reply to Mr. Rogers, Sir Robert Borden intimates that since the first of May he has been trying, and is still trying, to implement his decision, that "a union of both political parties was necessary in order that Canada, etc."

Sir Robert may be technically justified in asserting these things, but his actions, and that of the government, show that party considerations and party interests, have a predominating influence with him, his government, and following. In answer to Mr. Rogers' charge of "inactivity," Sir Robert cites, as a sort of campaign document, what he has done since the middle of May is disproof. He mentions among other things, the conscription bill; the imposition of a tax upon incomes; railway legislation, and the military voters' bill.

In these, with the exception of conscription, Sir Robert has quite ignored his desire for "a union of both political parties." Partisanship to the hilt—buying the favour of the big interests, the over-fed and over-fat financial interests—marked the "railway legislation," which against vigorous Liberal protest was jammed through the House by party strength, committing the country to a financial responsibility of at least thirty millions dollars to acquire the Canadian Northern Railway, which might have been acquired without the payment of a cent of taxation, simply by the foreclosure of a mortgage the government took on the railway in consideration of a grant of 45 millions, to be foreclosed in case of default of interest payment, which default was made. The bill to tax incomes might have, as sub-title—a bill to exempt large wealth from the payment of a just share of taxation—was conceived in the interests of the big interests behind the party, and carried through parliament against the vigorous protests, in the interests of fair play, of Liberals, without regard to Sir Robert's desire for "a union of both political parties." The "military voters' bill" accepted in principle by both parties in the House, was in the details of application made a part of the partisan machine to win party advantage in recording soldiers' votes.

From every point of view, probability precludes attributing other than diplomatic quality to Sir Robert's assertion of a desire for "a union of both political parties"; and forces the conclusion that under present leadership a "union" government is neither desirable nor practicable. No union would be consented to that did not retain the predominating influence and element of the government. Sir Robert would be Sir Robert still, and Mr. Rogers would still be an element in some form, for the cheap theatricals of concerted correspondence read in Parliament, deceives nobody.

The only way out of the impasse is breaking through the present obstruction and calling in new leadership—leadership that will lead and gather about it the strongest elements of Canadian administrative ability and patriotism, a patriotism that will have country and country's interests, and not any party or party's interests, as its inspiration. A new deal is called for.

At present the Canadians in France are doing more than the politicians in Canada.

THE POPE'S RELATIVES.

The latest peace proposal put forward by the Pope calls fresh attention to the character of the man who heads the Catholic Church throughout the world. Pope Benedict XV. was elected to the pontifical chair some four years ago, but had hardly got settled in his office before the Great War was started. As the chief Catholic nations of the world are fighting against one another he is doubtless anxious that the carnage should be stopped as soon as possible. Despite the fact that the Pope is not on very friendly terms with the Italian Government, several of the Pope's relatives are fighting in the Italian Army against the Austrians and Germans; two nephews are in the cavalry and another one in the artillery, while a brother is an admiral on the reserve list of the Italian Navy. The Pope is sixty-three years of age, and has generally been described as a man of liberal tendencies.—Exchange.

UNCLE SAM IN EARNEST.

Uncle Sam will not stand for any trifling with conscription. The two New York judges who accepted of bribes, and gave certificates of unfitness to slackers, will repent of their sins during the two years they will spend in prison. They deserve all they got.—Kingston Whig.

A RICH PATRIOT.

Sir Herbert Ames is a rich man himself, and he wants people to know that he meets just as patriotic men among the rich as anywhere else. He give an instance:

"I have heard a patriotic rich man say, 'I don't want to have a dollar more when this war ends than I had when it started.'"

This patriotic rich man disavows any desire to make money out of the war, in which respect he is vastly different from many others—men who, each in his own community, is being wiached by a thousand eyes as he extracts profit and advantage for himself out of the sorrow, suffering, and waste of war. But this patriotic rich man, while he does not want to make money out of the war, evidently does not want the war to take any money out of him. He does not want to make a fortune out of the war, as so many are doing. This is his great act of renunciation. He just wants to go through the war keeping his wealth solid and intact.

An equally good patriot with several sons, none of them under arms, might say: "I don't want to have a son more when this war ends than when it started." All he wants is that if he leaves the war alone, it will leave him alone. He wants no truck or trade with it. So, a slacker! He does not want any more lives after the war than he had when it began—just the same life. The carrying on the war is other people's work; he is not looking for gain out of it, and he is taking care that he shoulders none of the labours, dangers, losses and griefs of it.

There are so many of these "neutrals" among us, complacent bystanders throughout the whole trouble, that there is immediate need for an equitable application of a system of national compulsory service both as regards men and money.—Toronto Star.

BIRD CRAZED BY THRIST.

Flocks Fly Into Wells in Search of Water.

SMITH CENTRE, Kan., August 22 — The drought in this section has caused all upland wells to go dry and nearly all farmers are hauling water long distances for the live stock which they have been unable to ship out of the country.

So acute is the condition that birds are perishing by the hundreds, and in their quest for water they are proving a nuisance by flying down into wells, along creeks and into standpipes in the towns. This part of Kansas is credited with an annual rainfall of twenty-six inches, but since the first of August last year only 2.91 inches has fallen.

How The Application Of Conscription May Be Hampered By The Details

OTTAWA, August 10. — Although nine amendments were proposed and rejected the Conscription Bill slipped through the Senate smoothly enough. The newly appointed C.O.D. Senators were on the job and voted brikkly.

One amendment was accepted which shows the — way the wind blows. It was a Government amendment and was introduced by Sir James Lougheed who is the Government leader in the Upper House. Briefly the amendment was that no prosecution could be had under the Act—that is under the Military Service Act—unless it was first consented to by the Ministed of Justice for Canada.

This means that the provincial authorities cannot discipline refractory persons under the Military Service Act, but that all cases must be referred to the powers at Ottawa. That is to say if twenty thousand or thirty thousand or one hundred thousand persons selectively conscripted choose to declare that they will not serve, nobody can proceed against them until the Minister of Justice for Canada gives permission. The Minister of Justice is going to be a busy man under the Military Service Act because the work will pile up on him and naturally there will be great delay in getting on with the prosecutions. In many cases the war will be over before the Minister of Justice gets cleared away.

Critics of the Government say that this amendment proves the Government has no intention of enforcing the Act drastically either in Quebec or anywhere else. On the contrary there is every reason to believe that the Government is backing away from the consequences and that the Military Service Act is to be used merely as a stuffed club. It will look fierce enough but it will always bend in the middle as the blow descends. In other words the Military Service Act is intended to hurt nobody but the Laurier end of the Liberal Opposition. It is a party manoeuvre pure and simple and the reinforcements it brings are intended for the Borden Government.

Staunch friends of conscription on both sides of politics deplore this lack of sincerity on the part of the Borden Government although they had suspected as much from the dilatory apparatus with which the Act is provided — the elaborate machinery of the exemption tribunals for example. If the exemption tribunals perform in the same spirit as the Lougheed amendment they will be thrones of mercy rather than seats of justice.

Meanwhile the Military Service Act has every outward aspect of sternness. It has more than that. It has a gag clause for the Press which vies with anything the greatest despot in history could conceive. Russia under the Czars never had a harsher press censorship than this one of Arthur Meighen's can be if the Borden Government so chooses. It is as deep as a well and as wide as a church door and it wil swallow naughty editors like flies. This gag clause is such that if a newspaper opens its mouth to criticise the Government or the operation of the Military Service Act ever so remotely the newspaper may be suspended and the editor thrown into jail from two to five years. Some Senators breathed a fear that the gag clause was wide enough to include campaign speeches and prevent Members of Parliament from repeating on the stump the truth they were privileged to tell on the floor of the House.

Whereupon Sir James Lougheed shrugged his shoulders and hoped they would "express their opinions frankly." Sir James probably regards the gag clause as another bluff — something to scare the bystanders but not meant for real use. Some persons have been unkind enough to say that the Military Service Act is built on that principle all through. Its bark is very savage but its bite has no teeth in it.

The Military Service Act is now law. That is to say it is on the statute book and all it awaits is the word of the Government for its enforcement. Quebec is almost docile under the prospect. Sir Wilfrid Laurier tells his fellow countrymen to obey the law and Sir Lomer Gouin reiterates the good advice. The law is the law even if it is disagreeable to minorities.—Ottawa Letter.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

FORMER LOCAL BALL PLAYER LEADS CANUCK TEAM IN ENGLAND

Ted Maddocks Formerly Short-stop of Arthur Johnston's Fast Midland League Team, is Captain of Canadian Team Which Beat Picked American Team in a Game at Lords Before 15,000 People.

The following from the Toronto Star refers to Ted Maddocks, who formerly played short stop for the Peterborough ball club when Art Johnston was the Ban Johnston of baseball in Peterborough. Maddocks was one of the stars of the team and will be remembered by the fans.

How five Toronto ball players and four from Montreal, Winnipeg and Owen Sound playing for the Duchess of Connaught Hospital at Taplow Bucks, England, beat an American ball team composed of players from different American units who are training in England "for the championship of Europe" is told in a letter written by Ted Maddocks, the former Toronto player, which he sent to Jimmy Graham, manager of the Beaches team.

Maddocks, who was captain of the team is a son of Charlie Maddocks, the former ball player and well-known umpire. Maddocks played with the R. C. B. C. team in the Beaches league before moving to Ottawa, where he resided when he enlisted. The Toronto players on the team beside Maddocks were Bob Stanley, the former Capital pitcher and 204th man; Latimer, of Capitals; Rehill and Reid, two other well-known players.

The game was played in London on Lords Cricket Field before 15,000 spectators. The large attendance is an indication of how the Canadians have taken the Englishmen by storm in playing ball. It was a benefit contest for the Canadian soldiers' widows and orphans, and the grand sum of over $4,500 was realized at the gate. This is how the Canucks are helping to do their bit while getting ready for the big fray or while resting after doing their "bit" in France. Thousands of wounded soldiers were admitted free, and were transported to the grounds in omnibusses and motor coaches.

STANLEY IN FINE FORM.

Stanley held the Yankees to nine hits, while his team-mates gathered 17, including four doubles and three triples. The Canadian team won 12—3. Concerning the game, Maddocks, who was captain of the team, writes as follows:

"I suppose you will be surprised to hear I am playinb baseball again over here. We have a swell team at this hospital and we are at the top of the league, and have not lost a game since I came here. Stanley and Latimer, of the Capitals, of Toronto, are playing with us, and I think we would make them all hustle in Toronto. We have a fellow by the name of Bishop playing first-base, and he sure is a wonder all right. I am playing just as well as ever, although my arm and leg are neither any too strong as yet, but still I have plenty of nerve, and am able to get around with the old-time speed.

"We played a big game in London with a team composed of players from different United States units now in training here. The game was staged at Lords Cricket Field in London before 15,000 spectators for the benefit of Canadian soldiers' widows and orphans, and took in over $4,500 at the gate, so you can see there are lots of ways you can help on doing your bit, even after you have been damaged in France. We beat them 12—3. Stanley sure is pitching some ball this season and Latimer is hitting and fielding like a fiend. Remember me to all the boys."

The Canadian team was: Latimer, Toronto, third base; Beswick, Owen Sound, r.f.; Maddocks, Toronto, s.s.; Stanley, Toronto, p.; Bishop, Montreal 1b.; Rehill, Toronto, c.f.; Reid, Toronto, l.f.; McPhail, Winnipeg, c.; and Conway, Montreal. Latimer got three hits, including a triple. Maddocks had three, one being a double. Stanley had three clouts; Bishop one. Rehill two, Reid two, and Maden three.

The patrons were: H.R.H. Princess Louise (Duchess of Argyll), Lady Drummond, Mrs. Waldorf Astor, Lord Hawke, the Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Vice-Admiral Sims, Lord Harris, G.C.S.I., and Mr. Vanderbilt.

TWENTY-TWO INNINGS IN BROOKLYN GAME

Superbas Score Victory in Longest Game Ever Played in National League.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 22.—Brooklyn beat Pittsburg to-day by 6 to 5 in twenty-two innings. The game broke the National League long distance record of twenty-one innings set by New York and Pittsburg in 1914. With one out in the 22nd inning Hickman drew a base on balls from Jacobs and took second on O'Rourke's single. Otto Miller forced O'Rourke, Boeckel to Pitler, Hickman taking third, and while Pitler was disengaging himself from O'Rourke and preparing to relay to first for a double play Hickman went home. Brooklyn knocked Cooper out of the box in seven innings. Jacobs finished the game. Cadore was knocked out in five innings. Cheney pitched from the sixth to the twentieth, inclusive. Marquard finished and was the winning pitcher. The second was called on account of darkness after two innings. Score:

Pittsburg:
0010020000000000000000—5 19 4
Brooklyn:
1220000000000000000001—6 28 5

Batteries—Cooper, Jacobs, and Wagner, Schmidt; Cadore, Cheney, Marquard and O. Miller.

At New York—New York played sensational ball behind Benton's fine pitching and shut out Cincinnati in the last game of the series by a score of 3 to 0. Benton allowed only four hits, two of them by his opponent, Schneider. Schneider did not permit a hit until the fifth inning, after which he was touched up freely. Score.

Cincinnati	000000000	0	4 1
New York	00002100x	3	7 0

Batteries—Schneider and Wingo; Benton and Rariden.

At Boston — Boston won the last game of the series from St. Louis today by 6 to 1. A home run by Powell in the first inning with Kelly and Maranville on base, and two triples and a single by Konetchy in three times at bat were the features. Watson knocked Ed. Walsh senseless in the second inning, hitting him on the back of the head with a pitched ball. The Boston man was carried from the field, but recovered in a few minutes. Score.

	R.	H.	E.
St. Louis	000100000	1	5 1
Boston	40001001x	6	11 1

Batteries—Doak, Watson, May and Gonzales; Walsh, Nehf, and Meyers.

At Philadelphia — Hard hitting and Alexander's excellent pitching gave Philadelphia a five to nothing victory over Chicago to-day. In the fourth inning the home team piled up four runs on home run drives by Stock and Cravath, followed by singles by Luderus and Whited, a base on balls to Killifer, and Paskert's single. Score.

FIRST ROUND STRATTON TROPHY

The first round of the Stratton Trophy as published at the Golf Club House, must be completed on or before Thursday, August 30th.

One week will then be allowed for each subsequent round, unless otherwise arranged by the committee; and it shall be considered that any player who shall be ready to play his match on the Saturday afternoon in any week shall win his game by default if his opponent shall not be ready to play at 3:00 o'clock, unless it shall have been previously mutually arranged to play on some other day. Players please note. H. Dearle, Sec.

RED SOX REDUCE WHITE SOX LEAD

Tigers Shut Out Yankees, Although They Only Got Two Hits.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22 — Boston cut Chicago's lead down to two games today, when they won the final game of the series, 5 to 1, in a loosely-played game, thereby getting an even break in the series.

Claude Williams was unsteady throughout the game, and finally gave way to Danforth after the bases were filled in the seventh inning. The visitors then proceeded to bunch hits, and with the aid of some erratic playing clinched the game. Leonard pitched a steady game and was given fine support.

As a result of to-day's game the standing of the leaders is:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Chicago	74	46	.617
Boston	70	46	.603

The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Boston	010000400	5	12 3
Chicago	000010000	1	6 2

Batteries—Leonard and Agnew; Williams, Danforth, Faber and Schalk.

At Detroit.— Detroit only got two hits off Cullop and none off Mogridge, but won from New York to-day, 2 to 0. Both runs were scored in the sixth inning on a base on balls and wild throws by Cullop and Peckinpaugh.

Before the game the two teams gave a military drill before Lieut.-Col. Raymond Sheldon, the officer detailed by the War Department to inspect the American League teams and decide the winner of the $500 prize offered by the league for the best-drilled team. President Johnson of the league, accompanied Lieut.-Col. Sheldon. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
New York	000000000	0	8 2
Detroit	00000200x	2	2 0

Batteries— Cullop, Mogridge, Walters and Ninamaker; James and Spencer.

At St. Louis.—Washington won the first game of to-day's double-header with St. Louis, 2 to 1. St. Louis won the second, 9 to 4. In the first game Washington outhit St. Louis 7 to 4. Poor throwing lost the second game for the visitors, who made eight errors, seven of which were wild throws. Scores:

First game—	R.	H.	E.
Washington	010000010	2	7 0
St. Louis	000010000	1	4 2

Batteries—Harper, Johnson and Ainsmith; Groom, Rogers and Severoid.

Washington	100003000	4	8 8
St. Louis	50011002x	9	9 0

Batteries—Dumont, Gallia and Ainsmith; Davenport and Severoid.

At Cleveland — Cleveland made a clean sweep of the series with Philadelphia, winning to-day 6 to 5. Cleveland made all its runs off Bush, whom it drove from the box in the fifth inning. Philadelphia hit Lambeth hard in the seventh, and Coumbe had to go to his rescue in the ninth. Score.

	R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia	000100400	5	10 2
Cleveland	00000600x	6	10 1

Batteries— Bush, R. Johnson, Seibold and Haley; Covaleski, Lambeth Coumbe and O'Neill.

MUNITIONS BOARD IN BRITAIN NOW EMPLOYS OVER 2,000,000 PEOPLE

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Col. Winston Churchill, Minister of Munitions, has begun the reorganization of the British Munitions Department. In a statement last night he says the Department is now employing 2,000,000 persons and the Headquarters Staff 3,500, and that it is controlling an expenditure of between 600,000,000 pounds and 700,000,000 pounds a year. Col. Churchill says the work the Department has done has made the British armies "the best equipped and most formidable armed in Europe."

"But," the Minister adds, "after these great efforts and in the fourth year of the war, we no longer are tapping stored-up resources of the national energy or mobilizing. We are applying them for the first time to the war. The magnitude of the effort and achievemnt approximates continually the limits of possibility. Already in many directions the frontiers are in sight, and it is necessary therefore not simply to expand, but to go back over the ground already covered and by thrifty and harmonious methods glean a further reinforcement of war power."

For this purpose, Col. Churchill says, it has been decided to form the fifty departments of the Ministry into ten groups, each to be presided over by an experienced officer of the Ministry, who will constitute a council, the function of which will be similar to those of the Army Council.

Bulk of Grain Crop Cut But Not Gathered

The harvest hasn't waited for the urban agitation to secure assistance. Citizens have earnestly and feverishly bestirred themselves at the eleventh hour, the Manufacturers' Association endeavoured to move its members to turn squads of workmen out into the hay and grain fields for a month, in fact there was a general running around of well-intentioned city dwellers crying "help, help," and all the time the farmer rose at dawn to avail himself of the only resource he could trust—daylight. He was tried, but he wasn't found wanting.

To-day all reports indicate that the most critcal labour difficulties have been surmounted. The hay has been cut and practically all of it stored, and the grain fields have also been laid low. So rapidly did the crops ripen that the general plan followed by the farmers was to continue cutting through field after field, with the intention of leaving the storage until the last. The result is, according to reports, that most of the grain has been cut and stooked, but there is great deal of it yet to be drawn into the barns.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie stated to-day that he had sent out a large number of men, especialy those who were not employed. Finally, when this supply was exhausted workmen responded to some extent, and every appeal for labour was met. Hence, if some farmers are in difficulties they have themselves largely to blame.

It is expected that the bulk of the grain crop will be gathered by September first, and the rest should be plain sailing. There are vacancies occurring even now, and persons desiring to work in the country can be readily accommodated.

MILLBROOK PERSONALS

MILLBROOK, Aug. 23.—The Union services held in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning, and in the Presbyterian Church, in the evening, were largely attended, and the sermons delivered by Rev. Joseph Wilks were highly appreciated. The union choir rendered excellent music both morning and evening, and Mrs. (Dr. Metzler (nee Miss Maud Nugent), sang a solo in her usual splendid voice at each service. There will be union service again next Sunday. In the Presbyterian church in the morning and in the Methodist church in the evening. Rev. Mr. Wilks will preach.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Fred Fallis is improving nicely after a very successful operation.

The ladies of Millbrook intend giving a picnic at Bewdley on Thursday, Aug. 30th, for the soldiers' wives and their families. Several autos will convey them to and from Bewdley. There will be a general good time. There will be no expense for the soldiers' wives or families. Autos and free luncheon provided by the ladies of Millbrook, who are requested to leave their baskets at Mr. John McBride's store, on the morning of August 30. The autos will leave at 12.30. Everybody welcome who provide their own conveyances and luncheon. Make this a pleasant day for the wives and families of our brave boys who are at the front. There will be games of various kinds, foot races, etc.

Presentation To Rev. P. J. McGuire At Ennismore

After two years' service as parish priest at Ennismore, Father Maguire bid farewell last night to the parishioners amongst whom he was well beloved, and it was on this occasion that the congregation presented him with a handsome purse of gold, a token of their love and sincere regret at his leaving to take up new duties.

The parish hall of St. Martins, Ennismore, was crowded with parishioners and friends from far and near, including a number from Peterborough.

After the addresses and presentation, the Reverend Father thanked his friends in a characteristic speech, sparkling with Irish wit, and expressed his sorrow a leaving the people who had become so dear to him.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

SINGING BY EYE.

A deaf person can now train himself or herself to sing or play any instrument correctly without the aid of an instructor. In other words, the study of music has been reduced to a science; and instead of depending upon a sense of hearing for determining the purity of correctness of a sound, the eyes are resorted to in studying an animated screen.

The device which has made this marvel possible is known as tonoscope. It is not strictly a novelty, since the first model was built in the phychological laboratory of the University of Iowa in 1902; yet it is only recently that the tonoscope has become a commercial device.

The tonoscope works on a principle analogous to motion pictures. It converts the sound vibrations into pictures on a screen. The screen, which may be seen through the opening on the front of the tonoscope, has 17,500 dots which are so placed that, when acted on by a sensitive light, they arrange themselves in characteristic figures for every possible pitch within the range of the human voice. Each figure on a graduated scale points to a row of dots on the screen which indicates the pitch.

The dots are arranged in 109 rows: the first row comprises 110 dots; the next row 111 dots; and so on, each successive row having one more dot than the preceding one until the last row is attained which comprises 219 dots.

When a sound of a particular pitch is caused to act on the tonoscope, the row which has the dot frequency that corresponds to the vibration frequency of the tone appears to stand still, while al the other dots continue to move and thus tend a blur.

It is the row which 'Stands Still" that indicates by a corresponding number on a scale the pitch of the tone.

The screen is arranged for readings, covering but one octave, but tones above or below the octave can be read on the same screen by multiples.

The conditions under which a reading is made with the tonoscope are absolutely natural, since in conjunction with a detectaphone, accousticon, or even the ordinary telephone, the tone may be registered without the use of a speaking tube or horn, or even from a distant point. The mechanism of the tonoscope is not as complicated as might be supposed. The revolving screen carrying the dots is driven by a synchronous motor which runs in step with a tuning fork. The sound waves to be analyzed cause a manometric flame to flicker, and the resultant intermittent light selects these moving objects which synchronize with the vibrations, tone and light of the manometric capsule used may be equipped either for the direct transmission of the sound waves through a small trumpet, or it may have electrical connections with a highly sensitive telephone, as previously mentioned.

The reading of the apparatus, which is in terms of vibration and the accuracy of which varies with the steadiness of the tone measured, is instantaneous. The moment one sings or plays a note, the pitch of that note in terms of the number of vibrations per second can be instantly read.

The record of the instrument is very much finer than the ear can hear; according, it not only furnishes an objective record of pitch, but also magnifies details.

It is ony recently that the tonoscope has been developed to a point where it may be used for teaching the inflections of the voice to the deaf. It seems that this appeal to the eye will furnish a short cut and, indeed, new possibility for attainment in pitch control of the voice of the deaf.

The tonoscope is also available for the conservatory, where it serves a wide variety of purposes not the least of which is the developmnt of the voice. A singer, standing before the instrument sees in clear form every pitch movement of the voice; he sees exactly how many vibrations per second the vocal organs are producing, and thereby can tell, at the very moment of singing a note, what error is involved, even down to the hundredth part of a note. The singer can practice before the instrument by the hour with the opportunity of seeing the error in every tone, and controlling the voice and the ear by the eye. He can study in detail the attack, the sustaining, and the release of a single note. Likewise can the player of the violin, flute, cornet, or any other musical instrument use the tonoscope to advantage.

NERO'S FIDDLING.

There is a tradition that Nero fiddled while Rome was burning. A political writer might make much of this fact at the present time, but even he should know what "fiddling" meant in those spacious times. First of all, let it be understood that Nero did not fiddle at all, for the plain and sufficient reason that no member of the violin family had been invented in the first century of the Christian era. It would be an anachronism to draw Nero as a temperamental 'cellist, a violinist. He might be drawn as playing on a reed or on a rude flute. Artemus Ward said his son was an ethereal cuss. "He played onto the flute." But however ethereal Nero was, it is probable that his musical performances were not of the wood-wind persuasion. His instrument, in all prebability, was the kithara or large lyre, invented by the Greeks and transferred to Rome as a thing desirable for aristocratic pleasure.

The kithara had eighteen strings, and thus was the fore-father of the harp, but its tuning arrangements were crude and it must have been a fragile instrument at best. Only one string was struck at a time and — probably one was enough. The poet was in the habit of chanting his own verses, not to an accompaniment, but with kithara interludes. In a word the prospect of a little kithara music kept the mind of the audience off the poetry, and the prospect of a brief recitation aided the audience to endure the kithara. On a fifteen stringed instrument the notes played ranged from A below the staff to A above it, treble clef, the basis being what we understand now as the natural diatonic scale. The Greek system of music was involved. Plato said that the study of music and gymnastics would make a perfect man. Against that we have Nero, who had studied both and yet had some points of imperfection if History may be credited. But he did not fiddle. He harped.

OPERA IN ENGLISH.

In the opinion of Mr. Fricker, the new conductor of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir the persistent effort of Sir Thomas Beecham in London to give Grand Opera in English has had at least one effect. There is a bigger demand than there used to be for the cheaper seats. In every English speaking city where Opera is an established feature of the musical season the gallery generally has been occupied by Italians who take Opera seriously, know the score of each of the classics and give hearty support to Italian singers. English people are beginning to buy gallery seats, at least for the productions of Sir Thomas which, by the way, are never cheap or tawdry. On this continent there has always been a certain popular support for Opera in English. The name of the Aborns of New York has been associated with this enterprise for many years, and many people have agreeable memories of a Wagnerian touring company directed by Col. Savage. Some day the world will wonder why Opera had to be sung in a foreign language before the conservative critics would sit up and take notice.

Canadian Fuel Controller Will Help Peterborough Get Supply Of Municipal Coal

Ald. Dobbin Reviews the Progress of the City's Fuel Venture, its Aims and its Motives—Citizens Advised to Apply First to Local Dealers.

MUNICIPAL COAL HERE SOON

The expected arrival of a supply of coal for sale and delivery by the city has prompted Ald Dobbin, Chairman of the Council's Committee to review the progress and the prospect of the venture as follows:

During the last few days, and since the paragraph appeared in the local papers that the city had coming forward a number of cars of coal, many have come and offered orders and money, this to secure delivery as soon as possible for individual needs. And having got so far in this municipal venture, and as it is a public matter, it may be as well to frankly tell the people how the matter stands. For, while the coal is shipped, no one can tell when it will get here. The shipment has to run the gauntlet of embargoes, commandeering, etc., and it may be a long time, say three weeks yet before it turns up. But let us hope.

So soon as the coal passes Toronto, the invoices will reach the City Treasurer. Then a notice will be placed in the papers advising that orders will be taken. These should be given to the City Treasurer, and invarisbly accompanied with cash or a cheque. Orders will be registered and delivered, up to the amount of coal in sight from week to week. It is expected that once started that cars of coal will come forward, sa two or three per week. The coal will be delivered off the cars, for now, at any rate. This should lessen the cost of delivery as handling the fuel into storage will cost money.

Delivery will be made under a contract of so much per ton, to any part of the city. A foreman, acting, and working, for the city, will fill the bags, (where bagging is needed) at the cars, weighing the bags on a scale. If the buyer wants the coal weighed on the market scale the buyer will indicate and a ticket from the market clerk will verify the weight.

NOT DEARER THAN $10.

The upset price will be $10.00 per ton. If the coal can be delivered for less, after paying charges for freight, bagging and delivery, and the cost of the coal, any balance will be refunded.

The Council has decided that coal shall not be bought and delivered if the cost to the consumer exceeds $10 per ton. Experience will pretty soon show how the thing is working. Then if it runs above $10 the Council will have to decide what it will do before going on. Shipments can be stopped at any time on reasonable notice. It is proposed that the money of the people shall not be wasted or spent unwisely, so far as the committee can prevent it.

WILL DISTRIBUTE EVENLY.

The committee has not as yet decided how much coal will be served to any one citizen at once. Certainly as much as two or three tons. But it would not do to fill up a number with fairly large orders and hold off the smaller buyers. That is not the idea of the venture. The people, as a whole will be served.

A quadruplicate record system of delivery sheets, or slips, will be used, very much the same as now used by local dealers. One sheet for the order, one for the customer to retain; one for the delivery man and one for office record. Customers will be careful to verify the number of bags, (when delivered in bags) or have the market scale voucher for weights. Bags are weighed at the cars. The cost price includes the delivery, but not carrying upstairs. That is for the customer to arrange him or herself.

GOOD QUALITY OF COAL.

The quality of the coal will be as delivered. The Committee will get the best grade procurable, but it is just now a favour to get any, so remonstrance as to the quality will not count, so far as the city coal is concerned. In any event a good deal of kicking against coal is due to the carlessness of the person firing the furnace. Local dealers do not knowingly deliver inferior coal, when they can get better quality. They have to take that which is sent and use it. The city is in even harder shape than the local dealer, for while the dealer can, and does, buy from a line company, selling standard grades of coal, the city must buy from whom it can, and take what is sent. To start to dispute as to quality would mean that no coal would come forward. It is a favour, just now, to get any coal. Indeed it was on Friday last that the first offer to sell coal, in four months came to hand.

THE BIG DEALERS.

Perhaps it may be as well to explain how this comes about, this matter of not getting coal from certain coal companies. There are, broadly speaking, two sets of operators. Those which own both mines and a trunk line of railroad, reaching the large centres. These are known as the Line Companies Others known as Independent Companies own a mine, or lease one, but may have only a short line of rails from the mine to the trunk line. Hence the independent company is not in nearly so good shape to freight out coal as the line company, and has to pay for the deficiency.

INDEPENDENT COSTS MORE

For this reason independent coal will cost at least one dollar per ton more than the line coal. That makes the price to the city higher. Some people think that the fact that the City of Peterborough was going into the coal supply was of such importance to the coal companies that any one of these would be glad, even in a hurry, to supply coal. Not on your life. The coal company cares not one button for the City of Peterborough. And further the companies are doing just what good business is to do, protect the dealers who have stood by the company for years and have been steady customers. It is safe to say that not a pound of line company coal can reach Peterborough for the municipal supply.

It is true that the city does not seek to make a profit, even if it could. It is not in the coal supply to run a counter business to the local dealers. But the more coal that can be brought into the city, both by the local men and for the city, will make us all safer for the winter. That is all. We need the coal—not a profit in a business, that normally we have no business to be into. But this is a fourth year war. It may be true that the foreign demand, such as from Italy, has made the visible supply less, and that prices have advanced. Speculators are trying to grab something off the heap, that is sure. If we can bring in some coal and supply it, so much will be done.

Look at the situation. In self-defence if on no other ground your City Council had to do something. What it may result in can only be told after experience. But to have sat idle and made no attempt, would have deserved censure. And the public are assured that the council desires to be as helpful as the public will let it be.

Try Dealer First.

Now, friends, do not run away with the idea that the municipal supply is going to take care of the whole situation. Plainly, we could not bring in enough coal to supply the whole city, even if people felt inclined to buy from the city all they need. Citizens are most earnestly advised, that if the local dealer will supply the coal to go to him or them, and get it. Pay what he asks, in reason. He has his difficulties of supply to contend with. And there is this to remember. That we know a few things now that we did not know late last winter. And we know this, and it can be stated in fairness to the dealer, that the situation in Peterborough, while bad enough, was not nearly so bad as in many other places, and that Peterborough was supplied with coal at even a lower price, by our local dealers, than prices that prevailed and were paid elsewhere. We as citizens can only do this thing that we have started in on, by being fair all around and fair to the dealer, as well. The dealers will be with us for many years yet, same as poor city councils and a lack of bathing facilities. But we have to put up with all. Still there are hundreds of families in the city that have not had coal. True, the tenant has always hesitated to buy in advance. But he is willing now to do so, and can't get it. Of course there will be two months yet to run before the home fires are kept burning, and people want to know what they will burn and where they will get it.

Will Publish Records.

It is probable that the city treasurer will publish, from time to time statements of the results that the public may be advised. A little frank publicity is a great thing to keep down friction. When the people know what is going on they will be reassured, even if not satisfied. It is the money of the people that will finance the venture and the people have a right to know. In the event of the price of coal dropping, as a result of the city venture and that the city coal might not be sold at except a loss, the coal will be shot into storage, so long as the price remains reasonable and the supply fair in quantity. Then there will be a reserve to draw on during the winter, if needed. In any event money will not be wasted for if that looks as probable, the venture will stop for instructions as what to do. We shall have only ourselves to blame if that is done which is not wise. The council can clap on the brakes at any time.

Just as soon as the coal is in sight notice will be given. Delivery will commence when it reaches the city. The city is in communication with the Fuel Controller for Canada who has his office in Pittsburg Pa. and he writes yesterday that he is sending forward advice as to where to buy, and from whom, and to give all assistance. His statements may be relied on implicitly. Thats what he is there for. In the meantime we have to wait.

ANNUAL EXCURSION WAS A SUCCESS

The annual excursion of the Gilmour Memorial and Selwyn Baptist Sunday School was held yesterday, and under the able management of a competent committee, passed off, on the whole, a very great success.

The trip was on the steamer "Stoney Lake," with Stoney Lake as its destination, the excursionists being given two hours ashore for dinner and an hour for supper. About 220 borded the boat at Bridgenorth and about 20 at Selwyn, with a few at Indian Village. The weather was perfect, and the water in the proverbial mill-pond condition. While the arrangemnts of the committee left nothing to be desired.

The refreshment booth was a popular feature of the day.

After a day of lovely weather, beautiful scenery, good company and lots of good things to eat, Bridgenorth was reached at 8 p.m. amid the strains of "God Save the King" and the Doxology.

Mystery Veiling Hamilton Fatality Remains Uncleared

Woman Heard Cries for Help and Premises Where Dr. McRobbie Was Found Dead Were Brightly Illuminated.

RESULT OF BRAWL?

HAMILTON, Aug. 21.—No solution has as yet been found by the police of the mystery surrounding the death of Dr. Douglas G. MacRobbie, who was found in a dying condition on Sunday night on the premises of the Crescent Oil Company, Cannon street west. It is hoped by the authorities, however, that the inquest, which will be resumed on Thursday night, will help to explain the cause of death. The theory advanced to-day was that MacRobbie came to his end as the result of a brawl. Whether he was struck or collapsed falling with sufficient force to fracture his skull on the iron bars where his head rested when he was found by the caretaker, Asselstine, is still to be dtermined. Beyond stating that death resulted from an extensive fracture of the skuil, Dr. M. H. Langs and Dr. J. R. Perry, who performed the post-mortem, declined to discuss what the examination revealed.

Harry Smith, manager of the Crescent Oil Company; Walter Scott, architect and J. J. McAuliffe, held without bail as materiall witnesses are al claimed by the police to have been heavily under the influence of liquor. Asselstine, the caretaker, who found the dying man himself explains that the three men were so deep in sleep that he made no attempt to arouse them. The police believe that the two were ignorant of what was going on or were to helpless to do anything for MacRobbie.

Woman Heard Calls.

Detective Harry Sayer, who is in charge of the case, has secured an interesting witness for the inquest. She is a Mrs. Powis, whose house runs back to within 20 yards of the premises of the Crescent Oil Co.

"I distinctly heard four calls for help Sunday night about 11 o'clock," declared the woman. "It just seemed as if the man was shouting right below my window, it was so close. The shouts were loud, but they sounded to me like someone must have put his hand over the man's mouth. One of the shouts was a short, loud cry, then a muffled noise, and then silence." She heard the noise of men tramping about, especially after the calls for help, she stated. She said that the building had been lighted up all evening, and that men had been seen about the place. She could not tell what they were doing. The woman also stated that she saw an auto drive up to the corner of Cannon and Caroline streets about ten o'clock. Another man and Asselstine, the nightwatchman, were in it. The nightwatchman, she said, got out of the car and went along Cannon street in the direction of the Crescent Oil Co. An Italian woman who lives at the corner of Cannon and Caroline streets said she never saw the building so illuminated before.

Constable Thomas said to-day that he passed the building of the Crescent Oil Co. at 7.30 o'clock, 8.30, 9.30 and 10.30. From 8.30 on the entire building was lighted up. At 10.30 he saw an automobile standing in front of the building.

A woman was sitting in the back seat of this automobile, the officer said. Herbert Asselstine, the night watchman, was standing pumping up a tire. He nodded to the officer as he passed. A man who was standing in the doorway said to him as he walked by. "This is one of the joys of motoring."

Yesterday afternoon a man, whose home is near the building in which the lifeless body of Dr. MacRobbie was found, came into the police station and volunteered a piece of information to Detective Shirley. He declared that he had seen the night watchman, Asselstine, drive away from his home, two doors from the oil company's building, returning and leaving several times between 8 o'clock and 9.30 o'clock.

Watchman's Story.

In his statement to the press, following the finding of the body, Asselstine stated that he had found the body about 10.30, after which he immediately left the room and called up Bell. Asselstine claimed that he had returned from a motor drive in the country about that time with his wife, and in passing the building he noticed a light in the office, which was something unusual. Reaching the second story by a side door, he found Dr. MacRobbie's body on the floor. Smith, McAuliffe and Scott were asleep on the floor a short distance from the dying man, but in such a state of intoxication that they could not be aroused. Harry Bell, a member of the firm, when seen, told an entirely different story, as far as the time of his arrival was concerned. In fact, there is such a difference in the time of his arival and when he received notification of the accident.

"What time did you hear of the accident?" Bell was asked.

"About 11.40 Sunday night," he replied.

"What time did you leave the office?"

"I left about 11.45 and reached there about 12 o'clock. When I got there Dr. MacRobbie was on the pile of iron valves. Scott was downstairs in a chair in the office and Smith and McAuliffe were in the top room near MacRobbie's body."

When asked what had taken place between the time he arrived and the time that the call was put in for the police Bell stated that about five minutes after his arrival Dr. Langs was sent for, and when he reached the scene he immediately went to work on the body of MacRobbie. Dr. McNichol, coroner, was then notified. It was then 12.30, and it was not until Dr. McNichol had reached the scene that the police were informed of the case.

Patriotic Fund For Families Of Men On Special Service

The Peterborough Branch of the Patriotic Fund has continued to assist the families of returned men who have been transferred to Special Service units. In this respect Peterborough has practically stood alone and the fairness of its action has been recognized and approved by the general adoption of this practice, authorized by the head office. The following note in the August issue of the Patriotic Funds publication covers it:

"It has recently been arranged that men returned from overseas and detailed for duty in Special Service Companies in Canada shall continue to be regarded as overseas men and their families granted assistance at the usual rates by the Patriotic Fund."

The following is another interesting matter:

Out Patients.

"Hitherto it has been the policy of the Fund not to assist the families of men who are outpatients of Military Hospitals. Such men generally live at home, receive full pay and separation allowance plus a subsistance allowance of 60 cents a day. This has meant a total income for the family of $71.00 a month.

"Recently strong representations have been made that this income is in some cases insufficient and after communicating with our larger branches it has been decided to change the policy in this respect.

"Commencing from August 1st, therefore, the wives of men who are outpatients of Military Hospitals, and who have children dependent upon them, will be entitled to an allowance of $6.00 for each child, with a maximum of $18.00 per month. It is hoped to induce the Government to increase the subsistance allowance of outpatients to one dollar a day, in which event the Patriotic Fund allowance may be discontinued."

Toronto branch had discriminated against the man who went overseas, but did not reach France. The new regulation makes no distinction.

The patriotism of some men is limited to red, white and blue poker chips.

There are times when the brave deserve immunity from the fair.

The wife who chases her husband with a poker rules him with a rod of iron.

Many fall shipments are already on our shelves. This alone is no indication of the nearness of the season, as we purchased our stocks months and months ago. But early sunsets and chilly winds are ample proofs that soon there will be a desirable snugness within the folds of woolen wraps. Every woman should remember the continual advance in prices and purchase at the earliest possible moment. There will be a marked scarcity of fabrics as the season advances and a corresponding rise in prices. Now is the time to buy if your money is to bring the most in return.

Suitings

The materials are broadcloths, serges, velours, pebble suiting, gabardines, tweeds and novelty weaves. We lay particular stress on the popularity of serges and broadcloths. Serges of course are always within the inner circle, and broadcloths this season have a double significance—they are exploited in the most alluring shades, namely: taupe, beetroot, Java (dark brown), purple and charleause.

WE ARE SHOWING a most striking range of light novelty wash Silks for Blouses, 36 inch. Priced at $1.50 and $2.00 yard.

Coatings

Tweeds that assume large, flaky weaves are much in favor with Fashion and are shown in great profusion in fawn shades, with a great preponderance of green in the patterns. Of course fawns are not the only colours, yet there is a marked partiality shown in their direction. $8.50 per length.

Silks

For dresses and skirts, great prominence has been conferred upon silks, if they possess a dark ground patterned with wide stripes or large plaid patterns so much the better. It is a just distinction for never before have silks been developed in such appealing designs. 36 inch. Prices $2.75 and $3.25 yard.

Irish Of North And South Fought A Valiant Fight

Overcome Strong Defences and Unfavourable Ground in Advance Between Fortuin and Frezenburg—Cut Way Through Unbroken Barbed Wire

BAVARIANS WERE OBSTINATE; DIED FIGHTING

British Front in France and Belgium, Aug. 21.—The story of the valiant fight waged by Irish battalions, both Ulstermen and Southern Ireland men, in the latest British offensive north-east of Ypres, forms one of the most remarkable pages in the history of this sanguinary battle. As was the case with the intrepid Londoners in Polygon wood to the south they did not achieve the success which they sought, but the struggle they made against overwhelming odds will make their names immortal in Irish annals.

The ground over which the Irish troops fought Thursday may roughly be placed as lying between Fortuin on the north and Frezenburg on the south. Before them lay strong Bavarian positions scattered over a territory which at first blush made an advance seem impossible. Stretching out from the Zonnebeke-Langemarck road across the centre of the battle field was a ridge which dominated all surrounding ground, and from a myriad of machine guns on the crest could be poured a deluge of bullets into the advancing ranks.

Every Knoll Fortified.

Through the southern portion of this section the swollen Zonnebeke River poured its muddy waters, and scattered along both banks of the stream were many steel and concrete redoubts holding from 20 to 100 Germans, all well armed. Immediately in front of the Irish was undulating ground. Every knoll was a strong Bavarian position, and the whole section was filled with concrete redoubts and shell hole nests lined with machine guns. Depressions in the ground were a mass of knee-deep mud caused by recent rains and the flood of the river. The Irish battalions were muddy and wet when they began the attack.

The Ulster men were on the left of this battlefield, and the men of the south on the right. Shoulder-to-shoulder they moved out among the heart-breaking obstacles at the break of day, bogging at every step, and all that human beings could have done under such circumstances they did. As they advanced they first encountered the customary thinly-held line of German outposts among the shell craters. These Bavarians fell back, and almost immediately the Irishmen found themselves facing a fire from every machine gun before them, vicious, rapid fire, whipping out a steady stream of lead breast-high across the whole battlefield.

Amidst this hail of bullets and crashing shell the Irishmen pushed doggedly forward. The Ulster men first struck a position called Pond Farm below Fortuin. Here were many machine guns placed in concrete pits behind which towered strong redoubts and deep dugouts. The Ulstermen plunged into the gun pits, and a fierce struggle followed. The Bavarians would not surrender, and they fought until the last German lay crumpled beside his gun. A small garrison was left to hold this place, and the Irishmen pushed on. There was constant and bitter fighting at every step.

Cut Way Through Wire.

Near Pond Farm they were held up by partly cut barbed wire entanglements, and as they struggled through this they were swept with bullets. Numerous redoubts were encountered beyond, and in most cases it was hand-to-hand fighting to a finish with a stubborn enemy. The southern Irish at a given hour went forward with all the coolness which made them famous at Ginchy and other places. They surged on through the mire to some of their objectives, but they had passed numerous unsilenced machine gun emplacements, and following waves of infantry were held up by these.

North of Frezenberg was a redoubt called Borry Farm holding 60 to 80 Bavarians with machine-guns. The position was too strong for the infantry to take, but the Irishmen battled on until those troops which had essayed an attack on the fortification lay dead or wounded before it.

But others pushed forward to Hill 35 as this ridge which dominated the surrounding ground was known, and for a time that eminence was actually in British hands. But it was too important a position for the Germans to relinquish. They massed great numbers of men behind it and hurled them against the Irish. The latter met the onslaught with bayonet and clubbed rifles and fought as their forefathers fought, fiercely and determinedly.

Were Greatly Outnumbered.

But they were greatly outnumbered and gradually they were forced to fall back until the Germans had regained their hold on the hill. The Bavarians then began a series of heavy counter-attacks, and the Irish many of them wounded and all exhausted, retreated slowly, fighting every inch of the way until they reached the trenches which they left at dawn and which they held. No more heroic effort has been made since the war began than this. There had been many instances of individual heroism, a striking case being that of the chaplain who gave his life while working among the men he loved. They tried to keep him back, but he had been with them in Ginchy and other struggles, and he would not desert his boys now, so he continued to work on the shell-torn, bullet-swept field, his kindly face seen now beside some wounded man, now beside another who was dying.

It was while he was kneeling to give absolution to some badly wounded man that a German shell broke near him and he was killed. It was a great loss to the Irish troops and his name was spoken with tears by those left behind. Another who will not be forgotten is the doctor who for five days and nights continued his work of rescuing the wounded under heavy fire.

$10 War Certificates To Be Sold At $8.60

Ottawa, August 21.—A war savings certificate which will sell at $8.60 and return to the purchaser $10 at the end of three years will be placed on sale immediately at all banks, and money order postoffices in Canada, according to an announcement by Sir Thomas White to-day.

Up to to-day $10,000,000 has been made available for the purposes of the war through the sale of war certificates; over 140,000 certificates in the denominations of $25, $50 and $100 having been sold since last January. During the past several months sales have ranged from $200,000 to $300,000 a week.

LOCAL SINGERS ARE THANKED

When the Bay of Quinte Conference tent meeting committee recently met at Belleville to wind up their business they passed a resolution expressing their deepest obligation to the Misses Muriel and Dorothy Harshorn of 512 Stewart street, Peterborough, for their effective services in singing the gospel at the recent tent meeting at Oak Lake, and for their self denial in coming at a day's notice, and at great personal loss and inconvenience to assist in the services.

Roumanians Find Foes On Two Sides

Germans No Longer Needed to Face Russians Massed Against Them

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS OF THE RUSSIAN ARMY Aug. 22.—The bitterest part of the tough task which falls to the high command of the Russian army in restoring discipline is the plight of the small, heroic and loyal Roumanian army, which is resisting a crushing attack. The Germans, without troubling themselves to conceal the movement, are massing against the Roumanians, troops taken from the trenches in front of the Russians.

The Roumanians are really well armed in this campaign, and each regiment, organized by French officers according to French army methods, can hold its own against any equal force.

The Roumanians are eager to show the Russians how well disciplined they are. The "Tovarish" (Comrades), as the Russians have been nicknamed, since they fraternized with the Germans and retreated out of Galicia, are inadequately supporting the Roumanians. The Russians' lack of loyalty to their ally makes them deserters, as far as the Roumanians are concerned. Among the "Tovarish" deserters many German agents are and have been busy. But the Roumanians are bearing themselves heroically against both the enemies behind them and those who face them.

Many Killed In Barcelona Riots

BARCELONA, Aug. 22.—Violent rioting has been taking place in Barcelona and the neighbouring towns since last Monday, when a general strike was proclaimed. Firing from the rooms of houses and from behind half-closed shutters has been going on daily. A considerable number of persons have been killed and many have been wounded, though no reliable figures are available.

BANK CLEARINGS FOR THE WEEK

That business in the city is steadily increasing is indicated by the bank clearings, which this week are practically double the clearings of the same week two years ago. The clearings also show a substantial increase over the same week last month.

Clearings ending August 23, 1917, $625,115.

Same week last month, $603,718.

Same week last year, $518,697.

Same week two years ago, $390,217.

Gerard Story Ends Allied Peace Talk

REVELATIONS AS TO KAISER CALLED PROOF GERMANY CAN'T BE TRUSTED.

LONDON, Aug. 19—European diplomacy is beginning to recognise that the American Government has really rendered a great service in the timeliest manner to the cause of the Entente Allies by permitting the publication of the remarkable revelations by former Ambassador Gerard concerning the origin of and responsibility for the war and the circumstances antedating and surrounding the inauguration of ruthless submarine operations.

While the entire narrative is very interesting to the British public the most important chapter is that dealing with the submarine situation. Mr. Gerard's story has already largely broken down whatever sentiment existed in this country in favour of considering peace without complete victory. Realization of the impossibility of dealing with Germany and of holding any hope that engagements and treaties, or even humanities, would be recognized by the present Berlin Government has been driven home by these revelations as by nothing else heretofore.

Some persons in England seemed to be hopeful that the German Government, considering that a complete victory is now impossible, might shed the mask of hypocrisy and deal squarely, but the experience of Ambassador Gerard shows that such a change of German front is still impossible.

"If Germany's position was admittedly desperate eight months ago," one paper points out.. "what is it today? She reckoned on the success of the submarines, gambling on the inertia of America; the submarines have failed and America is in the war. Against these facts can be placed only the temporary decline of the Russian power.

Germany's intentions are precisely the same to-day as they were when Mr. Gerard described them, the only difference is that she is attempting to gain by intrigue what she failed to gain by foul fighting. It is a unpalatable fact, but if the war were ended to-day the middle Europe part of the German dream would be realized."

COAL RATIONS MAY BE PUT ON CANADA

Sir George Foster Also Intimates Train Services May Be Further Cut

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—In answer to a question in the Commons this afternoon Sir George Foster stated that there would be no increase in the production of coal in Canada this year, and that heavy importation would be necessary. In the United States the production of coal had increased since April, but the consumption had also increased. Transportation facilities had much improved.

It was not improbable, said Sir George, that if conditions continued the United States and Canada would have to be put on rations as to coal. With the elimination of all unnecessary train service together with individual saving just the same as in food. "This," he said, "I believe will be absolutely necessary."

C. N. R. OBLIGATIONS

E. M. MacDonald, Pictou, asked whether the June obligations of the Canadian Northern had been met by the banks with a promise from the Government to recoup the banks. If so, what banks had met these obligations.

Sir Thomas White replied that he did not know to what obligation Mr. MacDonald referred, but advised him to repeat his question to committee later.

WAS ASSENT PROMISED?

Emanuel Devlin, of Wright, enquired of the Minister of Justice as to what progress was being made in the establishing of tribunals in connection with the Military Service bill.

Mr. Doherty replied that some general progress was being made. They had to wait, however, until the Governor-General had given his assent to the bill.

"Then may I ask," said Mr. Devlin, "whether when Mr. Plaxton was appointed to secure information from members and arrange for tribunals the Government, as bound by the Constitution so to do, had secured assurance from his Excellency that such assent would be given?"

Mr. Speaker interposed. "I should suggest" he said. "that the honorable gentleman place his question on the order paper."

"The question is one of very great public importance," persisted Mr. Devlin.

"That is exactly why I advise that it be put on the order paper," said Mr. Speaker. "It is a question which the honorable minister cannot be expected to answer off-hand."

A voice: "Why not?"

"Then I am to understand that my question is not in order?" said Mr. Devlin.

"It should be placed on the order paper," said the speaker.

CUT IN SOFT COAL PRICES.

Largest Retail Firm Announces Reduction of From $1 to $1.80 a Ton.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—The Consumers' Company, said to be one of the largest retail coal dealers in the world, to-day announced a slash of from $1 to $1.80 on soft coal, effective immediately. This is in line with the price fixed by President Wilson. Other dealers will make similar cuts at once, it was said. It was estimated the reductions will cut Chicago's coal bill by $30,000,000.

Heintzman Hall Repeats Dollar Day For the Rest of the Week

The primary object of establishing Dollar Day was for the purpose of providing an outlet for the merchants to clear their shelves of obsolete or unseasonable goods at the end of each season. While this has been the main objective of the merchants they have not confined their sales to this particular class of goods, but have taken advantage of the occasion to offer special concessions on many lines of regular goods.

Encouraging results have been reported in many cases; but none more satisfactory than that reported by Mr. B. H. Britton, manager of "Heintzman Hall." Such an overflow of sales was the experience at his store, that the manager has decided to repeat Dollar Day benefits for the rest of this week. Naturally it caused some surprise to hear that such special benefits could be conferred by Dollar Day on a piano and music store. In fact, it is stated that on the day before some friends of the manager wondered why he was preparing for Dollar Day—"what had he to offer?" etc. They were told that he would take advantage of the day not only to advertise his new and handsome premises, but that he would find plenty of splendid musical attractions. The result evidently justified Mr. Britton in his good business sagacity.

NEW MEAT IN AN EGG.

A Gilmour street lady in breaking one of several eggs to poach for the usual morning meal of her children, discovered that the egg, quite normal in external appearance, contained what appeared to be a large fish-worm about four inches in length. It had the appearance of a water-soaked dew-worm, whitish in colour. If it was really a fish worm the problem consists in explaining how it came to get into the egg. Or it may have been an abnormal growth of some kind developed from the material contained in the egg. Anyway it was not an appetising condition to encounter.

MORE EVIDENCE IN THE HAMILTON CASE

May Help to Solve the Mystery—A Peculiar Affair

HAMILTON, Aug. 22.—The police have found some new evidence in connection with the death of Dr. D. G. MacRobbie on Sunday night, and believe it will help in explaining his death under unusual circumstances. Herbert Asseltine, the watchman, who says he found the doctor in an unconscious condition about 10.30 Sunday night, has told the police that about that time two men called to see Harry Smith, one of the men under arrest, and that it was while he went to get Mr Smith that he found the doctor lying on the floor in the storeroom of the Crescent Oil Company's premises. These men are known to the police and will be called to the inquest Thursday night. It is believed that an adjournment will be asked for, to enable the police to further investigate the case.

Asseltine has added to his former statement by saying that McAuliffe, another of the three men under arrest, was taken into the yard by him as McAuliffe was in a drunken condition when he entered the room where he found Dr. MacRobbie.

Local doctors are taking a keen interest in the case, and have made tests of stains about the room in which the body was found, with a view to giving evidence as to what probably happened in the room that night. It was stated to-day that the blood spot found on the buggy might have been caused by the dying man throwing his hands out. It is also stated that the doctor's collar was ripped off his neck, and that part of his necktie was lying under his body. There are finger marks on his neck, which might have been made by himself.

RISING PRICES IN JAPAN.

Claimed That There Is No Reason for Increase.

TOKIO, August 19. — A bag of rice which only a few years ago cost $1.25 now sells at $2.50, an increase of 100 per cent. But this staple is only typical of nearly all other articles of household use. No legitimate reason exists for this increase.

Rice is raised in Japan. Wages are slightly higher, no doubt, but not sufficiently so to add 100 per cent. to the cost of an article of necessity. Such a rise in price of necessities is an avoidable hardship. The Government can check it, if wisely directed. The rice market, like wheat in America, should be the last to suffer from violent manipulation. It is the food of the people and Government should fix a limit for its price.

Local Harvesters For The West Are Fewer This Year

The Harvesters' Excursions to the West, run by the C.P.R., whether on account of the shortage of men or the greater production movement at home have been much less patronized this year than formerly.

During August two excursions have taken harvesters from Peterborough, one which started from the city on the 21st, on which 35 left, another from Toronto on the 23rd, which took two from the city.

The first excursion included residents of the city, mostly with a few from the rural districts.

The next excursion, which starts on August 30th, will, it is expected, carry a much heavier traffic than the former two.

GREEN APPLES FATAL

CHATHAM, Aug. 22.—Norman, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs Earl Glover, Centre street, died this morning. The cause of his death is said to be stomach trouble as a result of eating a number of green apples which he had found Friday last. The child was taken ill Friday evening and his condition gradually grew worse. The dead child was an only son.

THROUGH GAS CHAMBER

U. S. Troops in France Are Made Accustomed to German Vapours.

With the American Expeditionary Army in France, Aug. 22.—The "little green door," behind which lies the gas chamber to accustom troops to German vapours, had an extraordinary fascination for American troops today.

A steady stream of gnome-like, drab-clad boys passed through the door to-day, all with masks firmly adjusted, and emerged, without having a whiff of the lachrymose stuff, plainly tickled at the unique experience. The entire first contingent is being schooled in the gas chamber.

MUST BANISH AUTOCRACY.

Only When This is Agreed to Will Peace Become a Possibility.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Answering the Pope, the United States and her allies will declare that the only peace possible will be one with autocracy banished.

That interpretation was placed by experts to-day upon a withering blast from Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in reply to a pacifist's letter. It squared with the utterance of the past week of Premier Lloyd George and Sir Robert Cecil in England.

Redfield's letter was the first formal utterance on the subject of peace by a Cabinet minister since the Pope's proposals were received. It is assumed that Redfield knows President Wilson's mind. In that case his letter will indicate that the President will repeat even more strongly than heretofore his views on German autocracy, ruthlessness and intrigue.

Of the two opposing ideals in the world—autocracy and democracy — one must go down before the other Redfield declared. America will wage her war until democracy is triumphant.

Board of Trade Prepared to Go into the Business in Case of Shortage.

GUELPH, August 22.—The Guelph Board of Trade is actively interesting itself in the coal question and rather than see a shortage this winter, is prepared to import cars of coal and sell them to the public. After making careful investigation of the situation the coal committee of the board was able to offer to the coal dealers of the city about twenty cars of coal now on the track at the bridge for immediate delivery. The wholesale price was slightly higher than is now being paid by the dealers, and they did not consider the situation sufficiently acute to pay the extra and ask their customers to do likewise. There is more coal in the cellars of the people of Guelph at this moment than there has been at the same time in any other year.

Slaughtering Germans, Eating Bread And Asking For Jam At Same Time

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 21.—People can get used to anything, even to this business of war. Were it not so, those who have to keep on killing Germans month in and month out, would go mad and bite somebody.

To-day I was out among the guns pounding the Germans to pieces in the neighborhood of Lens. It was tea time. Overhead seven British planes were winging past on their way to a wrestling match with the enemy in the clouds. Now and then a six-inch shell exploded in the vicinity of the British batteries.

Under a scrap of canvas serving as shelter from the midsummer sun, sat a Canadian major, commander of a battery of howitzers. He was bareheaded. On a wooden hand-grenade packing case was a cup of tea. By it lay a slice of buttered bread. The major was in his shirt sleeves. In his hands was a book and a copying lead pencil. Jotting something down in the book the major laid it face down on the case and took up the slice of buttered bread, bit off a mouthful and chewed awa for some thirty seconds, then called out to one of his gun crew nearby:

"Number two . . . four seven five nine!"

No. 2 crew lifted a huge shell into the howitzer's breech, closed and locked the breechlock, sighted and stood by, one of the men holding the laniard taut in his right hand. In his left he held a piece of bread.

Swallowing a gulp of tea the major picked up his gunnery book and casually ordered: fff fff

"Number One! Fire!"

The howitzer next to No. 2 belched so the country around about echoed and rocked to its thunder. The major set down some figures and refreshed himself with more tea and bread.

"Hey, Bill!" sang out the gunner of No. 1 crew. fff

"Watcher want now?" an ammunition tender growled. He was busy chewing and opening a can of some sort of tinned food. fff

"Wehre's that jam?" said the laniard chap.

"Jam?" queried Bill as he worked away. "What jam?" You mean the rhubarb jam?"

"Naw!" replied the laniarder, "not the rhubarb jam; the strawberry jam. I'm fed up on that strangy rhubarb jam."

AND BASEBALL IS REMEMBERED

"Number One!" bawled out the major. "Six O five three." Then after a swallow from the enameled cup: "Number Two! Fire!"

No. 2 blazed away and a huge shell tore through the air screaming in terrifying fashion and likely enough it found its mark and tore to shreds a dozen dupes of the Kaiser.

"Yes," said the Canadian gunner who had pulled the trigger, "that was certainly some game! Two men out, man on third, score tied and the ninth inning. Old Ty Cobb was at the bat with two strikes on him. Ty whaled away at it and——"

"Number Two!" shouted the officer. "Four seven five eight!" Then: "By Godfrey!" he murmured to himself, "wonder where'n the devil they got this butter; "Number One! Fire!"

Again the howitzer shivered and leapt, and, as the recoil threw it back into position, Bill came up with a tin plate in his hand.

"Here sourface," he said to the laniard puller, "here's your bloomin' jam. Shall I fetch you a fingerbowl?"

And so the manslaughter went on. Dispassionately and as coolly these men fed and fire their howitzers. When lunch time comes they may knock off work for a time and eat it comfortably, sitting on a pile of shells any one of which contains enough explosive to blow up the Woolworth Building. Or if for any reason it is necessary to keep on firing, the gunners eat and talk and fire the guns without a pause.

They seldom talk about the war. Rather they tell their experiences the last time they went on leave. They talk about the shows they saw, and the good things they had to eat, the pretty girls they met, what they are going to do when the war is over and the rest.

In the trenches it is precisely the same. Between raids, dodging trenchmortar stuff they play checkers and other games, write letters, have their tea and talk about food and girls and shows and things.

Of course, these men do not love the war. Nobody loves the war. But they are game and the Prussians having commenced the war, are going to see it through. And the way to see it through is to make the best of things, to get used to it all and quit worrying. Sprinkle the enemy with shot with one hand and pass the jam with the other. That is the only way. The French have found it. So have the British. The Americans will have to . . . . . and will.

Ancient Jerusalem Is Now Held As Modern Fortress

Turks Directed By German Experts Turn the City Into Great Stronghold Say Returned Missionaries—People Are Starving

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Jerusalem one of the objectives of the British campaign in Palestine, is now a strongly fortified city, protected by modern armament, and its Turkish defenders, officered by Germans of high command, have prepared a defence which, to be overcome, will require an effort on a parity with the trench campaign in Flanders, according to members of a party of missionaries which arrived here from Turkey and surrounding mission fields.

A spokesman for the party, who for several years was in charge of the work of a foreign mission board at a city in Palestine, asserted that, in his opinion, Jerusalem could never be taken by a frontal attack, and could only be conquered by extensive flanking operations. This defense of the Turks, he said, had been prepared with every ingenuity of the German military mind, and it had been under way since January.

"In December, or even in January," he declared, "the city could have been taken with ease by a single army corps."

The Turks, however, as well as their German allies to the north of the city, are not being allowed to rest in peace, he added, but are being continually subjected to air raids from the British camp.

'Reports that have gone forth from German sources that the British are destroying sacred relics on Mount Olivet are inspired propaganda," he continued. "The historic mountain has been subjected to aerial bomb attacks, but nothing of value to Christianity has been destroyed, for the reason that there is nothing there of that nature, aside from the mountain to destroy.

"The only structure of any consequence on the mount is a German school—and that has been taken over by the Turkish military authorities and is used as headquarters by Djemal Pasha and his staff."

The missionaries said there was both plenty and starvation in Turkey—the army officers have the former and the people have the latter—but such is the hold the military authorities have that the people dare not rebel.

"As regards the war, the Turkish forces seem to be well established, and able to hold their own for a considerable time to come," the spokesman continued. "The Turkish army has constantly been underestimated, and, as a consequence, failures have resulted to the Allies. The fact that the people of the country are starving will not make the slightest difference to the Government in prosecuting the war.

"Would Turkey be willing to conclude a separate peace? She is in the condition of a man holding a live wire—she would like to let go, but she can't. In spite of effusive journalistic declarations, Germany is undoubtedly the least loved country in Turkey.

"There are still remaining in Turkey about 150 Americans. There is no cause for alarm on the part of their friends, for, while they are surrounded with very trying conditions, they have the means of keeping themselves from want, and the attitude of the government officials is, on the whole, friendly to Americans. The people of the country consider America their best friend."

The missionaries said that with the breaking of diplomatic relations with Turkey the centres through which they received help from relief societies and friends have been closed to them. In the interior mission work has largely ceased, owing to internal conditions and the seizing of buildings for military purposes. In Constantinople, Smyrna, and Beirut, however, the educational institutions have remained open, and apparently enjoy special favours from the Turkish government.

There were fifty-seven persons in the party that reached here, including representatives of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, American Board Christian Alliance, Roberts College, and the International College. They came from Constantinople, Smyrna, the interior of Asia Minor, Syria, and Jerusalem. They received permission to return home in May, but had to wait until July 27 for the American Government to vise their passports. Then they got a special train, which carried them to Switzerland from which country they made their way to a French port.

Cavan Township Barn and Contents Were Destroyed

Spark From a Threshing Engine Burned Its Way Through the Roof and Set Barn on Fire

CROP DESTROYED

Special to The Examiner:

MILLBROOK, Aug. 27.—On Saturday afternoon about two-thirty o'clock, a spark from a threshing engine set fire to the barn and contents on the farm occupied by William McLaren, 8th Concession of Cavan township. The barn was a total loss, including three hundred bushels of wheat, three hundred bushels of barley, one hundred bushels of oats, four pigs, a horse-rake and numerous other articles. The farm is the property of Robert Snr, Millbrook and was leased to William McLaren. The contents were not insured. All the season's crop, with the exception of twenty acres of oats was consumed. The grain separator which is owned by Amos Fisher, of Cavanville, was damaged, but will not be a total loss. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting the mill out of the barn, as the fire spread very rapidly.

The spark from which the fire originated is believed to have first burned its way through the roofing material and then dropped down between two of the roof boards to the mow below. The fire started in the mow farther away from where the men were working. The men had been threshing for about an hour and a half when the fire broke out. The value of the contents will be at least one thousand dollars.

EMPRESS EUGENIE HOLDS TO LIFE TO SEE HUNS DRIVEN OUT OF FRANCE.

ALDERSHOT—In the frequent journeys of King George and Queen Mary to Aldershot to review and inspect troops they always call on the former Empress Eugenie of France at Farnborough Hill. Despite the latter's ninety-one years, she is alert mentally, says the Liverpool Post, and she keeps in touch with the war news as few women of half her age do. Those who know her say her greatest hold on life is the fact she has so strenuously made up her mind she will not pass into another world until the German invader is driven from France with no hope of returning.

Germans Make A Dead Set On Hospitals Near Verdun

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 25. — Proof that Germany is deliberately attacking field hospitals in aerial raids was obtained to-day. A German aviator brought down behind the French lines was found to be carrying a photograph of the hospital at Vadelaincourt which plainly showed the Red Cross insignia on the roof.

To date the Germans have bombarded four hospitals in the Verdun region—at Dugny, Mont Haison, Belrupt, and Caledaincourt. They have killed 43 nurses and patients and wounded 55. Most of their bombs were incendiary. Nearly always the aviators swept close to earth and fired machine gun bullets at fleeing nurses and patients.

The French Government has bestowed the Legion of Honour and the War Cross on half a dozen women nurses for bravery during these attacks.

Wounded Flyer Faces Death To Save Comrade

SYDNEY, Australia.—One of the most striking war incidents involving Australians is the deed by which Lieut. F. H. McNamara of the Australian flying corps won the Victoria Cross in Egypt a few months ago.

McNamara is 23 years old and a son of the head of the Victorian (war) wheat commission. Before the war he was a public school teacher in Victoria. His home is in Canfield. An army surgeon named McDonald wrote in a recent graphic letter to his father regarding McNamara's exploit and its aftermath:

On Monday last Lieut. McNamara of the Australian flying corps flew out from the aerodrome and later on passed beyond Beershula. Here he came upon the Turkish cavalry. They immediately opened fire. His wings were several times perforated by bullets, but he just flew around and dropped his shells. They were shells timed to explode. Usually bombs are carried and they explode only on contact.

"McNamara dropped four and released a fifth from his bomb vest. It exploded prematurely under the aeroplane. A piece of shrapnel tore its way through his ear and penetrated the body of the machine. It ended by entering his thigh, making a huge, ugly wound.

Fellow Airmen in Distress.

"He immediately dropped two smoke bombs as a signal of distress. But a that minute he saw another airman drop two smoke bombs and hover down through engine trouble.

"As McNamara said to me: "I could not let the poor devil stay down there and not try to rescue him." Well, he descended, but as his aeroplane was built for only one, the other man had to climb into the space between the planes. All this time the Turks were busy shooting at them.

"With his extra passenger McNamara tried to ascend. But the leg was terribly painful, with the result that the machine swerved and toppled over as it was moving along the ground preliminary to rising. They were prisoners for a certainty unless they managed to make the other machine go.

Nerve Saves Their Lives.

"They ran over to the other machine and tested the engine. Wonderful to relate, it went. So in they climbed and soared into the air, pursued by shrapnel from the Turks.

"On the way back McNamara nearly fainted several times through loss of blood and pain, but by putting his head outside into the rushing air he recovered. It would have been smash and death for both if he had fainted. They arrived back safely.

"That night McNamara was cheered to the echo. His deed is known all over this part of Egypt. It will be the V. M., or, if not the V. C., then something pretty good."

CORONER SCORES CARELESSNESS.

KINGSTON, Aug. 23.—A jury found that the death of Freddy Belwa, hit by an automobile, was accidental, but Coroner Dr. Mundell scored drivers who are careless, and said he would hold an inquest in every case of a person killed by an automobile, and that if it was found that the driver had been reckless he would push the case to the limit.

Houston Freed of Negro Troops; Murder Charged

Thirty-four Men of Mutinous Regiment Are Formally Accused of Slaying—Town Again Peaceful After Killing of Seventeen

HOUSTON, Texas.—Fear of further clashes between white men and negroes abated to-night when it was learned that orders had been received for the immediate removal from Houston of th negro soldiers of the Twenty-fourth infantry, who last night precipitated a riot which resulted in the death of seventeen persons, the wounding of more than a score and the terrorization of the community. Of the 125 negro soldiers involved in the riot all but eight have been accounted for, while scores of military and civilian patrols to-night are searching the district for the fugitives.

Blanket charges of murder were filed by District Attorney John Crocker against thirty-four negro soldiers of the Twenty-fourth infantry who are held in the county jail. The charges marked the first move indicative of an attempt by the State to retain custody of the soldiers rather than turn them over to the army for punishment.

Major-General George Bell, Jr., will arrive to-morrow to take charge of the situation, relieving Brigadier-General John A. Hulen, appointed commander by Governor James E. Ferguson when the State Executive declared the city and county under martial law. General Hulen's appointment later was confirmed by Major-General Parker, in common of the Southern Department.

CLIMAX TO MINOR TROUBLES

The riot was a climax to minor troubles between the negro military police, who were guarding Camp Logan, the mobilization camp for the Illinois National Guard. The rioting started about nine o'clock. Stealing company ammunition, about 125 of the negroes seized their rifles and left the camp, starting toward the city, shooting indiscriminately. Warning immediately was given and mounted police officers sought to halt the mob, surrendering their lives in vain efforts to drive the soldiers back. Illinois soldiers at Camp Logan soon arrived on the scene, but only in time to throw a cordon between the negroes and crowds of Houston citizens who had armed themselves and quietly gathered to oppose the raiders The negroes then took to the open country in flight, some returning to camp, where they were placed under guard, others hid in buildings and ditches in nearby roads.

Two squads of armed citizens, sworn in as Deputy Sheriffs, each squad with a captain in command, aided the military forces during the day in the search of the San Felipe district for negro stragglers. As fast as a negro soldier was found he immediately was placed in custody of either the civilian authorities or under guard at Camp Logan.

TROOPS SENT TO GUARD CAMP.

While the armed forces devoted the daylight hours to that work, commanding officers under General Hulen arranged for protection of the camp through the night. The addition al force of approximately six hundred men from Fort San Houston, detailed from the Nineteenth infantry, arrived during the afternoon and was disposed to best advantage.

Earlier in the day a detachment of Coast Guard artillery from Fort Crockett, Galveston, arrived and relieved the Illinois soldiers who had been on patrol duty throughout the night without rest and these, with the fresh troops from San Antonio, assumed full control.

Sentries placed on street corners in the business district in the morning were withdrawn gradually until only a few streets where trouble might develop were under guard. Much of the sentry duty during the early hours of the day had been left to Texas troops, who lacking arms, obtained shotguns and rifles from the stock of hardware stores. Saloons were closed and all clubs obliged to observe military orders against the sale of liquors.

CAMP BUILDERS HALTED.

At Camp Logan, building activities were at a standstill, workmen being refused admission through the guard lines established around the camp. In the resident district immediately adjacent to the camp site, many homes were deserted during the afternoon.

Indignation over the outbreak was expressed particularly because of the savageness displayed by the negroes toward the white police officers, who were slain and whose bodies in nearly every instance had been hacked with bayonets. Among the Illinois soldiers also much feeling was evident because of the mutilation of Captain Joseph Mattes, one of the first to be slain by the rioters.

Because of that feeling General Hulen at noon ordered the public morgues in which the bodies were held to close their doors to all except immediate relatives of the victims.

Funeral arrangements for the victims of the riots were made during the afternoon. The four police officers who died fighting will have a public funeral Sunday afternoon

The chief of police, Mr. Brock, issued a statement concerning the cause of the riot in which he asserted both he and Lieutenant Shekergian, of the Twenty-fourth infantry, had conferred for two hours on Thursday afternoon regarding the possibility of an outbreak and preventive measures to be taken. Neither, however, believed the trouble would reach a crisis so quickly, the Chief asserting fear only that a dispute between one of his officers and a negro sergeant might prove the spark to start a conflagration.

That regular troops should be involved in the rioting means that drastic measures of a disciplinary nature will be taken when the facts are known. The fact that the outbreak occurred during a war makes the situation far more serious than it otherwise would be. Drumhead court martial law could be applied. But on the other hand the government may feel inclined to leave punishment of offenders against civil laws to the civil authorities.

"Private Windsor" Is The Third Son Of King George

Prince Henry is Enjoying Himself at Officers' Training Camp

Not as Prince Henry, but as "Private Harry Windsor," is the third son of King George and Queen Mary known in the Eton College Officers' Training Camp. When he is wanted, it is "Private Windsor" that the sergeant major calls out. And Private Harry Windsor doesn't mind. In fact, he is thoroughly enjoying himself.

"He is impervious to everything except the joyous spirit of youth," writes a correspondent of Tidworth, which is the name of the place, "somewhere in England" where the camp is located, "and even the mud—and there are miles of it—doesn't depress him. Life is a gay adventure to him. 'Keep smiling,' is Private Harry Windsor's motto.

"He was smiling when I ploughed my squelching way through limitless seas of mud to the tent door where I found him energetically cleaning boots, and a man who can smile in the midst of a four-day, non-stop rain, standing ankle deep in mud, is some Mark Tapley. And he was still cheerful when carrying tent boards and unloading boxes, and he smiled still more—this time with the honest smile of gratification at good work opportunely appreciated—when his officer came round and announced that Private Harry Windsor was a great success as tent orderly.

"The army of to-day has no time for nice social distinctions; Private Harry Windsor does his duty as a simple soldier, honestly and well. He has no 'side'; he is just one of the 'boys.' And when I left him he was cleaning the eternal mud from his own boots."

COR. GEORGE & CHARLOTTE

WE ARE HERE TO SERVE YOU

When a great man dies, especially if the circumstances seem obscure, there are always many people who will continue to believe he is still alive. It was so with Mr. Parnell, and also with General Hector Macdonald.

It is nearly a year ago now since one heard that Lord Kitchener was still alive, which I believe, originated among some Indian soldiers, many of whom refused to believe in "the great chief's" death. Very circumstantial stories about Lord Kitchener being still alive on an island got to Scotland Yard, and inquiries were made, but the Yard soon found they led to nowhere.

It has, however, come to the sceptical public as something of a sensation that Mrs. Parker, Lord Kitchener's sister, has declared her belief that her brother is still alive. But it would seem that Mr. Parker has no "evidence" more worthy of credence than that which has already proved untrue.

Mrs. Parker meets with more general public support in her belief in 'the hidden hand," which she declared at a public meeting on Tower Hill. The spies who have already been caught and put to death afford a glimpse of a widespread system of espionage on British naval and military dispositions. But there is reason to believe that Germany has an even more dangerous system of agents whose mission is cunningly favourable to German schemes and fatal to Britains permanent interests.

It is of course easy for the campaign of subtle suggestion to be carried on in this country where some people comfort themselves with the belief that it acts as a sort of safety valve to let others say "jolly well what they like." Hence the immunity enjoyed by such organizations as the Union of Democratic Control which is has nothing democratic about it but its name.

LIMITED EXPORTS TO NEUTRALS

Washington Already Arranging a Plan to Ration Neutrals.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. — The Exports Council has practically all the information that is necessary to assist in formulating a policy of rationing neutral countries contiguous to Germany upon principles declared by President Wilson. Temporary agreements are being negotiated with the neutrals, the terms of which are being kept secret, but it is known that the quantities of supplies permitted to be exported by them are comparatively small, and that some use, connected with the war, will be made of part of the neutral shipping. This use is believed to be for relief work at the present time, as the agreements cover only specified amounts of grain and other food and foodstuffs.

The neutrals are not yet permitted to export from this country materials which are needed for the manufacture of war supplies, such as steel, and the amount of coal they may purchase here for shipping and for fuel is extremely limited.

Ancient Jerusalem Is Now Held As Modern Fortress

Turks Directed By German Experts Turn the City Into Great Stronghold Say Returned Missionaries—People Are Starving

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Jerusalem one of the objectives of the British campaign in Palestine, is now a strongly fortified city, protected by modern armament, and its Turkish defenders, officered by Germans of high command, have prepared a defence which, to be overcome, will require an effort on a parity with the trench campaign in Flanders, according to members of a party of missionaries which arrived here from Turkey and surrounding mission fields.

A spokesman for the party, who for several years was in charge of the work of a foreign mission board at a city in Palestine, asserted that, in his opinion, Jerusalem could never be taken by a frontal attack, and could only be conquered by extensive flanking operations. This defense of the Turks, he said, had been prepared with every ingenuity of the German military mind, and it had been under way since January.

"In December, or even in January," he declared, "the city could have been taken with ease by a single army corps."

The Turks, however, as well as their German allies to the north of the city, are not being allowed to rest in peace, he added, but are being continually subjected to air raids from the British camp.

'Reports that have gone forth from German sources that the British are destroying sacred relics on Mount Olivet are inspired propaganda," he continued. "The historic mountain has been subjected to aerial bomb attacks, but nothing of value to Christianity has been destroyed, for the reason that there is nothing there of that nature, aside from the mountain to destroy.

"The only structure of any consequence on the mount is a German school—and that has been taken over by the Turkish military authorities and is used as headquarters by Djemal Pasha and his staff."

The missionaries said there was both plenty and starvation in Turkey —the army officers have the former and the people have the latter—but such is the hold the military authorities have that the people dare not rebel.

"As regards the war, the Turkish forces seem to be well established, and able to hold their own for a considerable time to come," the spokesman continued. "The Turkish army has constantly been underestimated, and, as a consequence, failures have resulted to the Allies. The fact that the people of the country are starving will not make the slightest difference to the Government in prosecuting the war.

"Would Turkey be willing to conclude a separate peace? She is in the condition of a man holding a live wire—she would like to let go, but she can't. In spite of effusive journalistic declarations, Germany is undoubtedly the least loved country in Turkey.

"There are still remaining in Turkey about 150 Americans. There is no cause for alarm on the part of their friends, for, while they are surrounded with very trying conditions, they have the means of keeping themselves from want, and the attitude of the government officials is, on the whole, friendly to Americans. The people of the country consider America their best friend."

The missionaries said that with the breaking of diplomatic relations with Turkey the centres through which they received help from relief societies and friends have been closed to them. In the interior mission work has largely ceased, owing to internal conditions and the seizing of buildings for military purposes. In Constantinople, Smyrna, and Beirut, however, the educational institutions have remained open, and apparently enjoy special favours from the Turkish government.

There were fifty-seven persons in the party that reached here, including representatives of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, American Board Christian Alliance, Roberts College, and the International College. They came from Constantinople, Smyrna, the interior of Asia Minor, Syria, and Jerusalem. They received permission to return home in May, but had to wait until July 27 for the American Government to vise their passports. Then they got a special train, which carried them to Switzerland from which country they made their way to a French port.

Germans Make A Dead Set On Hospitals Near Verdun

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 25. — Proof that Germany is deliberately attacking field hospitals in aerial raids was obtained to-day. A German aviator brought down behind the French lines was found to be carrying a photograph of the hospital at Vadelaincourt which plainly showed the Red Cross insignia on the roof.

To date the Germans have bombarded four hospitals in the Verdun region—at Dugny, Mont Haison, Belrupt, and Caledaincourt. They have killed 48 nurses and patients and wounded 86. Most of their bombs were incendiary. Nearly always the aviators swept close to earth and fired machine gun bullets at fleeing nurses and patients.

The French Government has bestowed the Legion of Honour and the War Cross on half a dozen women nurses for bravery during these attacks.

Wounded Flyer Faces Death To Save Comrade

SYDNEY, Australia.—One of the most striking war incidents involving Australians is the deed by which Lieut. F. H. McNamara of the Australian flying corps won the Victoria Cross in Egypt a few months ago.

McNamara is 23 years old and a son of the head of the Victorian (war) wheat commission. Before the war he was a public school teacher in Victoria. His home is in Canfield. An army surgeon named McDonald wrote in a recent graphic letter to his father regarding McNamara's exploit and its aftermath:

On Monday last Lieut. McNamara of the Australian flying corps flew out from the aerodrome and later on passed beyond Beershula. Here he came upon the Turkish cavalry. They immediately opened fire. His wings were several times perforated by bullets, but he just flew around and dropped his shells. They were shells timed to explode. Usually bombs are carried and they explode only on contact.

"McNamara dropped four and released a fifth from his bomb vest. It exploded prematurely under the aeroplane. A piece of shrapnel tore its way through his ear and penetrated the body of the machine. It ended by entering his thigh, making a huge, ugly wound.

Follow Airmen in Distress.

"He immediately dropped two smoke bombs as a signal of distress. But a that minute he saw another airman drop two smoke bombs and hover down through engine trouble.

"As McNamara said to me: "I could not let the poor devil stay down there and not try to rescue him." Well, he descended, but as his aeroplane was built for only one, the other man had to climb into the space between the planes. All this time the Turks were busy shooting at them.

"With his extra passenger McNamara tried to ascend. But the leg was terribly painful, with the result that the machine swerved and toppled over as it was moving along the ground preliminary to rising. They were prisoners for a certainty unless they managed to make the other machine go.

Nerve Saves Their Lives.

"They ran over to the other machine and tested the engine. Wonderful to relate, it went. So in they climbed and soared into the air, pursued by shrapnel from the Turks.

"On the way back McNamara nearly fainted several times through loss of blood and pain, but by putting his head outside into the rushing air he recovered. It would have been smash and death for both if he had fainted. They arrived back safely.

"That night McNamara was cheered to the echo. His deed is known all over this part of Egypt. It will be the V. M., or, if not the V. C., then something pretty good."

KINGSTON, Aug. 23.—A jury found that the death of Freddy Belwa, hit by an automobile, was accidental, but Coroner Dr. Mundell scored drivers who are careless, and said he would hold an inquest in every case of a person killed by an automobile, and that if it was found that the driver had been reckless he would push the case to the limit.

Cavan Township Barn and Contents Were Destroyed

Spark From a Threshing Engine Burned Its Way Through the Roof and Set Barn on Fire

CROP DESTROYED

Special to The Examiner:

MILLBROOK, Aug. 27.—On Saturday afternoon about two-thirty o'clock, a spark from a threshing engine set fire to the barn and contents on the farm occupied by William McLaren, 8th Concession of Cavan township. The barn with a total loss, including three hundred bushels of wheat, three hundred bushels of barley, one hundred bushels of oats, four pigs, a horse rake and numerous other articles. The farm is the property of Robert Snow, Millbrook and was leased to William McLaren. The contents were not insured. All the season's crop, with the exception of twenty acres of oats, was consumed. The grain separator which is owned by Amos Fisher, of Cavanville, was damaged, but will not be a total loss. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting the mill out of the barn, as the fire spread very rapidly.

The spark from which the fire originated is believed to have first burned its way through the roofing material and then dropped down between two of the roof boards to the mow below. The fire started in the mow farther away from where the men were working. The men had been threshing for about an hour and a half when the fire broke out. The value of the contents will be at least one thousand dollars.

EMPRESS EUGENIE HOLDS TO LIFE TO SEE HUNS DRIVEN OUT OF FRANCE.

ALDERSHOT—In the frequent journeys of King George and Queen Mary to Aldershot to review and inspect troops they always call on the former Empress Eugenie of France at Farnborough Hill. Despite the latter's ninety-one years, she is alert mentally, says the Liverpool Post, and she keeps in touch with the war news as few women of half her age do. Those who know her say her greatest hold on life is the fact she has so strenuously made up her mind she will not pass into another world until the German invader is driven from France with no hope of returning.

Houston Freed of Negro Troops; Murder Charged

Thirty-four Men of Mutinous Regiment Are Formally Accused of Slaying—Town Again Peaceful After Killing of Seventeen

HOUSTON, Texas.—Fear of further clashes between white men and negroes abated to-night when it was learned that orders had been received for the immediate removal from Houston of th negro soldiers of the Twenty-fourth infantry, who last night precipitated a riot which resulted in the death of seventeen persons, the wounding of more than a score and the terrorization of the community. Of the 125 negro soldiers involved in the riot all but eight have been accounted for, while scores of military and civilian patrols to-night are searching the district for the fugitives.

Blanket charges of murder were filed by District Attorney John Crocker against thirty-four negro soldiers of the Twenty-fourth infantry who are held in the county jail. The charges marked the first move indicative of an attempt by the State to retain custody of the soldiers rather than turn them over to the army for punishment.

Major-General George Bell, Jr., will arrive to-morrow to take charge of the situation, relieving Brigadier-General John A. Hulen, appointed commander by Governor James E. Ferguson when the State Executive declared the city and county under martial law. General Hulen's appointment later was confirmed by Major-General Parker, in common of the Southern Department.

CLIMAX TO MINOR TROUBLES

The riot was a climax to minor troubles between the negro military police, who were guarding Camp Logan, the mobilisation camp for the Illinois National Guard. The rioting started about nine o'clock. Stealing company ammunition, about 125 of the negroes seized their rifles and left the camp, starting toward the city, shooting indiscriminately. Warning immediately was given and mounted police officers sought to halt the mob, surrendering their lives in vain efforts to drive the soldiers back. Illinois soldiers at Camp Logan soon arrived on the scene, but only in time to throw a cordon between the negroes and crowds of Houston citizens who had armed themselves and quickly gathered to oppose the raiders. The negroes then took to the open country in flight, some returning to camp, where they were placed under guard, others hid in buildings and ditches in nearby roads.

Two squads of armed citizens, sworn in as Deputy Sheriffs, each squad with a captain in command, aided the military forces during the day in the search of the San Felipe district for negro stragglers. As fast as a negro soldier was found he immediately was placed in custody of either the civilian authorities or under guard at Camp Logan.

TROOPS SENT TO GUARD CAMP.

While the armed forces devoted the daylight hours to that work, commanding officers under General Hulen arranged for protection of the camp through the night. The addition al force of approximately six hundred men from Fort San Houston, detailed from the Nineteenth infantry, arrived during the afternoon and was disposed to best advantage.

Earlier in the day a detachment of Coast Guard artillery from Fort Crockett, Galveston, arrived and relieved the Illinois soldiers who had been on patrol duty throughout the night without rest and these, with the fresh troops from San Antonio, assumed full control.

Sentries placed on street corners in the business district in the morning were withdrawn gradually until only a few streets where trouble might develop were under guard. Much of the sentry duty during the early hours of the day had been left to Texas troops, who lacking arms, obtained shotguns and rifles from the stock of hardware stores. Saloons were closed and all clubs obliged to observe military orders against the sale of liquors.

CAMP BUILDERS HALTED.

At Camp Logan, building activities were at a standstill, workmen being refused admission through the guard lines established around the camp. In the resident district immediately adjacent to the camp site, many homes were deserted during the afternoon.

Indignation over the outbreak was expressed particularly because of the savageness displayed by the negroes toward the white police officers, who were slain and whose bodies in nearly every instance had been hacked with bayonets. Among the Illinois soldiers also much feeling was evident because of the mutilation of Captain Joseph Mattes, one of the first to be slain by the rioters.

Because of that feeling General Hulen at noon ordered the public morgues in which the bodies were held to close their doors to all except immediate relatives of the victims.

Funeral arrangements for the victims of the riots were made during the afternoon. The four police officers who died fighting will have a public funeral Sunday afternoon.

The chief of police, Mr. Brock, issued a statement concerning the cause of the riot in which he asserted both he and Lieutenant Shekergian, of the Twenty-fourth infantry, had conferred for two hours on Thursday afternoon regarding the possibility of an outbreak and preventive measures to be taken. Neither, however, believed the trouble would reach a crisis so quickly, the Chief asserting fear only that a dispute between one of his officers and a negro sergeant might prove the spark to start a conflagration.

That regular troops should be involved in the rioting means that drastic measures of a disciplinary nature will be taken when the facts are known. The fact that the outbreak occurred during a war makes the situation far more serious than it otherwise would be. Drumhead court martial law could be applied. But on the other hand the government may feel inclined to leave punishment of offenders against civil laws to the civil authorities.

"Private Windsor" Is The Third Son Of King George

Prince Henry is Enjoying Himself at Officers' Training Camp

Not as Prince Henry, but as "Private Harry Windsor," is the third son of King George and Queen Mary known in the Eton College Officers' Training Camp. When he is wanted, it is "Private Windsor" that the sergeant major calls out. And Private Harry Windsor doesn't mind. In fact, he is thoroughly enjoying himself.

"He is impervious to everything except the joyous spirit of youth," writes a correspondent of Tidworth, which is the name of the place, "somewhere in England" where the camp is located, "and even the mud—and there are miles of it—doesn't depress him. Life is a gay adventure to him. 'Keep smiling,' is Private Harry Windsor's motto.

"He was smiling when I ploughed my squelching way through limitless seas of mud to the tent door where I found him energetically cleaning boots, and a man who can smile in the midst of a four-day, non-stop rain, standing ankle deep in mud, is some Mark Tapley. And he was still cheerful when carrying tent boards and unloading boxes, and he smiled still more—this time with the honest smile of gratification at good work opportunely appreciated—when his officer came round and announced that Private Harry Windsor was a great success as tent orderly.

"The army of to-day has no time for nice social distinctions," Private Harry Windsor does his duty as a simple soldier, honestly and well. He has no 'side'; he is just one of the 'boys.' And when I left him he was cleaning the eternal mud from his own boots."

McDERMID & JURY

The Safe, Satisfactory Druggists

COR. GEORGE & CHARLOTTE

When a great man dies, especially if the circumstances seem obscure, there are always many people who will continue to believe he is still alive. It was so with Mr. Parnell, and also with General Hector Macdonald.

It is nearly a year ago now since one heard that Lord Kitchener was still alive, which I believe, originated among some Indian soldiers, many of whom refused to believe in "the great chief's" death. Very circumstantial stories about Lord Kitchener being still alive on an island got to Scotland Yard, and inquiries were made, but the Yard soon found they led to nowhere.

It has, however, come to the sceptical public as something of a sensation that Mrs. Parker, Lord Kitchener's sister, has declared her belief that her brother is still alive. But it would seem that Mr. Parker has no "evidence" more worthy of credence than that which has already proved untrue.

Mrs. Parker meets with more general public support in her belief in 'the hidden hand," which she declared at a public meeting on Tower Hill. The spies who have already been caught and put to death afford a glimpse of a widespread system of espionage on British naval and military dispositions. But there is reason to believe that Germany has an even more dangerous system of agents whose mission is cunningly favourable to German schemes and fatal to Britains permanent interests.

It is of course easy for the campaign of subtle suggestion to be carried on in this country where some people comfort themselves with the belief that it acts as a sort of safety valve to let others say "jolly well what they like." Hence the immunity enjoyed by such organizations as the Union of Democratic Control which is has nothing democratic about it but its name.

LIMITED EXPORTS TO NEUTRALS

Washington Already Arranging a Plan to Ration Neutrals.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. — The Exports Council has practically all the information that is necessary to assist in formulating a policy of rationing neutral countries contiguous to Germany upon principles declared by President Wilson. Temporary agreements are being negotiated with the neutrals, the terms of which are being kept secret, but it is known that the quantities of supplies permitted to be exported by them are comparatively small, and that some use, connected with the war, will be made of part of the neutral shipping. This use is believed to be for relief work at the present time, as the agreements cover only specified amounts of grain and other food and foodstuffs.

The neutrals are not yet permitted to export from this country materials which are needed for the manufacture of war supplies, such as steel, and the amount of coal they may purchase here for shipping and for fuel is extremely limited.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

And Polly cuddled into his coat, and watched him with softly brilliant eyes.

There are many types of men in the world, attracted by many types of women, but there seem qualities very nearly usual in the decent male: the little boy spirit that adores being mothered and spoiled, and falls in love with almost any sympathetic woman who does it well; and the protective instinct which makes them absurdly charming and tender to helpless things—to children and small animals, and especially to women, who need this care and lean upon this strength.

That this is rooted really in masculine vanity is a truism, but only partly true, like most truisms. It has something much sweeter and nobler than that in it, and even egotism turned to such good use becomes a fine thing. There is nothing prettier and more touching to watch than the gentleness of a big man with a fragile little woman or a baby.

So it was that Jack Radnor treated Polly with the hurt ankle as she had never been treated before, with a consideration and a kindness, and half-teasing, half-bullying, wholly tender protectiveness that made her ready to kneel down and worship him.

It was only after he had kindled a fire on the hearth, lighted a guttering candle which he found on the shelf of the shack, and after softly examining the foot, found that there was nothing wrong with it other than a painful wrench, that he really remembered that Polly was not only a weak and suffering creature to be cared for but a very lovely woman as well—one to defend himself against at that. He had never been unconscious of the fact, as has been intimated, but the realization had been kept in abeyance by her helplessness. Now, in the rosy glow of the leaping fire, she looked a little less helpless; even—for Radnor was not new to the game and could analyze, even admit, facts when he met them—a little dangerous.

There are flowers that one longs to touch and to breathe the fragrance of. Polly was like one of those flowers. Not essentially more material than other girls, in fact, in most essentials less so, she still exhaled a lure that drove men distracted in spite of themselves. It was not a wicked lure, for she was not a siren by avocation, but it was the sort of enchantment that sings to you from the heart of a lovely rose when dusk falls and the hour gives to it all its sweetness and wonder.

It was very well for Polly to make him out a sort of emasculated figure-head of romantic manhood; he was not, and there was an end to that. No woman, much less one so innocently provocative as Polly Mason, could move about with those naive caressing touches, those eager lingerings of eyes and smiles, without having a spark under a manhood which was anything but emasculated. Radnor was in no sense a Don Juan and a young girl under any ordinary circumstaces could have travelled round the world with him without having her ideals even faintly besmirched by the mud of misunderstanding. But the conditions were peculiar.

First of all, one must take into consideration what one never does take into consideration: his present attitude of mind—or mood, if that elastic phrase happens to please you best. Young men and women are not supposed to be swayed by emotions, but it happens that they are. And the emotions are violent and complicated according to the situations in which they are fostered. Jack and Polly were both in love—he with Enid, and she with Martin—but that, terrible as it may seem to the Victorian understanding, did not prevent them from being still human.

In Polly's brain, inherently literal in spite of an extraordinary coloring of sentiment, was a sort of boundary line between Gentlemen and Men. This is a peculiarly unlucky type of hallucination, because the two sorts, practically speaking, cannot exist independently. A real man must have something of the gentleman in him before he can pass muster among his kind; and may God deliver us from the "gentleman" who is not first of all a man.

However this is beside the question. Polly stood in the position of a traveler in a strange land in which she is assured she will have full legal and actual protection whatever she does. Hence, she took liberties with Jack Radnor which she would never have dreamed of taking with one of the mountain men to whom she was accustomed.

He stood on a side of the line supposedly innocuous and, being a creature of another and more subtle and refined world, was assumed by her to be beyond vulgar male instincts or temptations.

How much of her delight in adventuring in this Safe Land was due to her intuitive attraction to Radnor is not to be recorded here. Certainly, she did not recognize it; that much may be recorded, at any rate.

So she was very much surprised, and enraged, when, whipped beyond endurance, he kissed her.

He could not help it.

Could you help smelling a bunch of violets if it were held close to your face? And Polly was so close to him, that he felt her. We won't explain that in case some one out of the many readers we hope to have chance to understand it.

Her lips were deep-red—not scarlet-coral in tint—and as he crushed his to them they made him vaguely giddy. Staggering back from that close, mad clasp, he felt a frantic distaste and revulsion of feeling. Such kisses should have been kept for Enid only—he felt very sure that Enid would not have accetpe hdetmwi would not have accepted them.

Which shows just how much he knew about it.

Polly in a wild revulsion of feeling, a frantic turbulence of disturbed ideals, shot backward half across the room as white as she had been rosered before.

"How—dare—you?" she stammered.

Jack Radnor knew that there were no words in which to excuse himself to her, and he felt horribly, abysmally ashamed. He would not say the machanical: "I beg your pardon," for it was altogether too inadequate. He merely stood with lowered head, tense in every muscle and wondering whether he should ever be abl to look Enid in the face again.

"I thought you were a gentleman," Polly flung at him.

"So did I," was his simple response.

She laughed an angry low laugh, and she had never looked lovelier in her life, though he could not know it since he was not looking at her.

"I wish your girl joy of you!" she went on fiercely sullen. "Why don't you make love to her for a change? She's alone, and might like it!"

"Alone!"

Polly retreated even further before the look in his eyes, and the tone in his voice. She had not told him before that Enid Forsythe was alone at the Toll-gate House. She did not quite know why.

"Miss Forsythe is alone?" repeated Jack Radnor, all softness gone from his clear brown eyes. "You left her there,—alone"

Polly, who liked to play with fire, but hated to admit it even to herself, nodded, with her head turned away.

"She's alone, all right!" she retorted. "And it seems to me that is a fine question for you to ask!"

For the first time since the fatal kiss, they looked at each other, and it was as though they met the eyes of strangers. Suddenly they had slipped back across their crossed trails, and regarded each other with a hostile or at least an alien gaze.

It is a curious fact that, as Jack Radnor and Polly Mason kissed, they had not thought of one another. Now, facing the cold disillusionment of afterwards, they wondered both of them, how the thing could have ever happened. Polly was not a passionate woman, in spite of her appearance, and she did not like being made love to too desperately. Jack was altogether too passionate to be able to endure—for more than a passing moment—anyone except the girl whom he really loved with all of him—heart, soul and body.

"Miss Mason," he said, with his eyes now very far from her face, "I am afraid that we would better go on toward the Four Trails Crossing. We—we may find some news of your father there——"

It was lame, and he knew it. Polly, throwing her cape about her, knew it, too, and she looked at him with a deep and resentful scorn.

Jack went quickly out into the open air and breathed the night wind in deep gulps. He felt—it is hardly worth while to put down what he felt. Anyway out of the many self-reproaches which the Black Evils in his conscience hurled at him, and kept on hurling relentlessly, there was one which seemed to stay fixed in his heart like a barbed and poisoned arrow. Without intention, and without consequence, he had played Martin Hale false. All his life that would be a debt to be paid somehow—whether Martin Hale ever knew it or not.

CHAPTER XIII.
MALONE'S SHACK.

"...This life is wine, red wine,
Under the greenwood boughs! Oh, still to keep it,
One little glen of justice in the midst
Of multitudinous wrong.
—Alfred Noyes.

"Listen!" exclaimed Polly, sharply.

Jack sprang to the door and flung it open. Voices and galloping hoofs were rapidly nearing the shack.

Farther away rang out a shot, and then came the crash of a horse taking to the shrubbery. With an exclamation Jack turned back, and picked up Polly and carried her to the one other room the cabin boasted. If there was to be any trouble she must at least be as far out of range of it as possible.

Then turning quickly, he stood still in amazement, for it was Ralph's voice that he heard, and he was saying rather breathlessly:

"Come on, Hale. This is our best chance—old Malone's shack. It's built to stand a good bit of a siege, if I know Malone!"

Into the cabin dashed Denby and Martin Hale, closing the door, and lowering the great bars into place as soon as they were inside. Jack realized for the first time how unusually stoutly the shack was prepared for defense.

Then the two men turned and saw him. After one gasp of mutual astonishment they promptly dismissed the stranger that had brought them together again under these circumstances and went to work closing the wooden shutters, and otherwise strengthening their position.

"It's the train-robbing crowd," said Ralph hurriedly to Radnor. "Or at least a detachment of them. They separated us—" he indicated Hale—"from our own men and we had to run for it. Old Heaton will round them up of course, but meanwhile—too bad to get you mixed up in it like this, Jack!"

"Rot!" said Jack, who was ransacking the cabin for firearms. But even as he hunted he was wondering how on earth Martin Hale and Ralph Denby should be on the same side, and why, if they both were with Sheriff Heaton's men, they should come so confidenly to Malone's for refuge? The thing was getting more mixed up every minute. And the complications were not helped by Polly's presence in the next room. What would Martin Hale say to that? He remembered very well how he himself had felt that evening when he had come upon the young mountaineer and Enid in the Toll-gate House.

However, a gun was the thing he wanted now, and he could not see the sign of one.

"Damn the man—Does he keep them locked up?" he growled impatiently.

"Not armed, Jack?" said Denby. "You were, earlier in the evening."

"I lost that," said Radnor shortly. Until he understood the situation more clearly there was nothing to be gained by stating that it was Hale's revolver that he had lost.

"By Jove, that's a pity!" exclaimed Denby. He turned to Hale: "He is a crack shot—better than I am—and I'm willing to bet he's better than you' too!"

"Easy enough," said the young hill man briefly. "I'm fair, but I'm not a dead shot."

"Hello!" cried Denby, in suppressed excitement, "I believe they are coming!"

Crash after crash in the underbrush and a sudden shout told them that their enemies had seen the light in the cabin window.

Denby turned impressively to Jack and held out his revolver.

"I hate to be out of a scrape," he said, "but I can't use this as well as you can! Go to it!"

And the same moment Hale held out his weapon to Radnor.

"Here's old man Mason's," he said. "Better keep yours, Mr. Denby. I'm not needing it to-night!"

Ralph stared at him. Outside the cabin the rush and stumble of horses sharply stopped filled the brief pause.

"But—" Denby began.

Hale stopped him. "These fellows outside are my crowd," he said simply. "I couldn't pull a gun on them, could I?"

A heavy knock came on the door. "Is Billy Malone there?" demanded a rough voice.

"No!" said Denby, clearly.

IRON OF THE FUTURE.

No Danger of a Shortage Because of Increased Consumption.

That iron is the very basis of our industrial civilization will be admitted by the thoughtful, and many of our greatest supplies of iron ore are being rapidly depleted because of the increased per capita consumption of iron the world over, an increase which is destined to be greater in the future when the races in Asia and Africa increase their consumption of iron.

These conditions of increasing consumption and decreasing reserves have often in the past, particularly about the beginning of this century, been used to create a scare, on the ground that our supplies of usable ore were being so rapidly depleted that their exhaustion would occur within two or three generations.

This is a preposterous point of view, because as we lower the percentage of iron in the rock which we call "ore" the quantity of such ore increases at a rate out of all proportion to the decrease in iron content, and as we use leaner and leaner ores technical improvements will be made which will minimize any tendency to increased cost of production.

The same thing has happened in gold, silver, copper and other ores, and today copper ores are being worked with only 1.5 per cent of copper in them.—

"TOO FAR AWAY TO BE A TOOL."

Cleveland Plain Dealer:—"Nicholas goes, not as a punishment, but because it is unsafe to let him remain at Petrograd. He is still the symbol of the old regime, the lay figure about which the forces of reaction would like to rally. At Tobolsk he will be too far away to be a tool. Neither the remnants of autocracy nor the German paid agitators can do much with a Tsar on the Irtish."

"HE BECOMES THE HERDED WARD."

Pittsburg Leader:—"Over the railroad that was to mean so much in the plans for a powerful Russian empire goes Nicholas Romanoff, ex-Tsar of all the Russias, a prisoner to Siberia.

"As the most conspicious personality of an autocracy that was crushed literally by the weight of its own sins, he becomes the herded ward of a vigorous, although unsteady, young democracy."

"THE WORLD DOES MOVE."

Boston Post:—"It is the same excursion as that to which so many tens of thousands of the men and women among his former subjects have been condemned by his authority. These, released by the revolution, have in great numbers swarmed back into Russia proper. The Tsar and his entourage now change places with them.

"And this has all happened within the space of less than six months. The world does move."

"CAN BE NO SERIOUS CRITICISM."

Philadelphia Public Ledger:—the act of the provisional government of Russia in taking this step, since it has been more than tolerant of the former supporters of the imperial pretensions and has dealt not unkindly with the deposed ruler and his family. But if retributive justive is ever to overtake the Romanoffs it cannot take a more deserved form, albeit it is a fairly harmless one, than that they should be sent where so many abler men and women have been exiled before, into Siberia."

"AN EXILE WHICH WILL BE PERMANENT"

Buffalo Commercial:—"The manner of the Tsar's exile shows some consideration on the part of his former subjects. The extreme radicals, no doubt, would have preferred to shoot Mr. Romanoff or at least to consign him and his entourage to hard labour, handicapped by the ball and chain, in Siberia's famous mines. But from the point of view of the present it promises to be an exile which will be permanent so far as Petrograd is concerned. The seeds of a counter revolution will not thrive in that soil."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Farmer's Daughter

By JOHN Y. LARNED

I was peddling tinware on the Massachusetts coast, driving a pair of horses attached to a wagon on which I carried my merchandise. I stopped at a farmhouse at noontime and exchanged some kitchen utensils for a dinner. The farmer's wife did the cooking, and his daughter waited on the table. Another stranger besides myself partook of the meal—a short, thickset man with a bushy beard.

We peddlers are usually gifted with a good deal of talk, which we find essential in selling our goods. I rattled on at the farmer, and, he appearing to be taciturn, I let fly at the stranger, who sat opposite me, asking where he had come from, where he was going, what business he followed and other questions usually attributed to the curious New Englanders. But this idiosyncrasy was assumed, I having been born and bred in Maryland. The truth is I began by asking him which way he was going, thinking that if his direction and mine were the same I would give him a lift for company's sake. He seemed to be averse to telling me of his movements, and I noticed that his reluctance interested the farmer's daughter, who at the time was standing behind him. On her account I pursued my questions till the man abruptly arose and left the table. A few minutes after this, looking through a window, I saw him riding on horseback the same way I intended to go.

Having finished my dinner and turned over in payment to the farmer's wife a washboard and a dozen tin pie plates, I got into my wagon and drove on. About a half hour after starting I heard the sound of a horse's hoofs behind me and, looking back, saw the farmer's daughter coming. She was so intent on her own thoughts as she passed me that she was not conscious that I had dined at her home. Her gait being faster than mine, I, jogging along behind a pair of horses drawing a heavy load, was soon left in her rear. As I drove on I was thinking about the man I had questioned and the girl's interest in his answers, or want of answers, and wondered if her coming had anything to do with him. The anxious look on her face both in the farmhouse and on the road caused me to think that he might be bent on something she wished he wouldn't do.

I saw nothing more of either of them during the afternoon. I stopped at several houses, plying my trade, and about dark, reaching a point where the road passed within a hundred feet of the ocean, I came upon a house in which I thought I would ask for lodging during the night. But, unfortunately, I found it closed. I was about to drive on when it occurred to me to see if I could effect an entrance to the barn. I pulled out a rusty staple, thereby opening the barn door, and, driving my team in, unhitched the horses, fed them and went to the house.

I had no more difficulty in getting into the house than the barn.

I was awakened in the middle of the night by a shot. I listened and heard another and another, the second and third seeming to come from directly above me. Then there was another from the outside. Next I heard the sound of a pair of heavy boots, followed by a pair of light ones, rapidly descending a staircase from the second floor and continuing down into the cellar. Soon after this the front door of the house was smashed in, and several men rushed into the room where I lay and flashed a bullseye on my face.

"By thunder!" exclaimed one of them. "If it isn't that confounded Yankee peddler!"

I recognized the voice of the man I had questioned so closely at dinner the previous day.

"Are you one of the gang?" he asked.

"What gang?"

He told me that smuggling had been going on at some point near where we were, and they had located it in the house we were in. I told him how I happened to be there, and he believed me. Then he explained to me that my questions had annoyed him because he wished to keep the object of his presence in the neighborhood a secret. Then it occurred to me that the farmer's daughter was interested in the smugglers, had suspected the man's errand and had ridden on to warn them. I hurriedly told him of my having heard footsteps going downstairs, and the party rushed to the cellar expecting to find her quarry.

We found a lot of goods, but no living person. Opening a door, we stood in a tunnel which we followed and came to a recess in the rocks on the shore. Hearing the sound of oars, we knew that the smugglers had escaped.

I said nothing of my suspicion of the farmer's daughter, since I had no wish to implicate her. The next time I went her way I stopped and told her that I was in the house when the revenue officers had attacked it. After I had won her confidence she told me that there was but one smuggler, her husband, and owing to my inquiries of the man she had served at dinner she suspected his errand and had ridden on to give him warning. She was with him at the time I entered the place and saw me come in. She had gone down the staircase and escaped with him. He had since abandoned smuggling and had gone west, where she was soon to join him.

Cancer Not Hereditary.

That cancer is not inherited in man seems to be proved by statistics collected by Arthur Hunter and presented to the Association of Life Insurance Presidents. Mr. Hunter investigated the history of policy holders and found that when both of a man's parents had died of cancer only two grandparents out of 234 had died of this disease. Among 814 sons and daughters of parents both of whom had died of cancer be could find not one case of cancer. He considered only those above the age of forty.

He found only nine cases of cancer among 301 brothers and sisters of cancerous pairs. Of the 810 sons and daughters above forty in 488 families of which one parent had died of cancer only three were known to have had the disease.

Corn and Water.

To those engaged in the handling of grain the natural shrinkage of shelled corn while in storage and in transit is a matter of prime importance and often a source of dispute because of shortage reported at time of receipt at warehouse and a further loss at date of final sale. In order to determine the amount of shrinkage or loss of weight occurring in corn the department of agriculture conducted an experiment with 500 bushels of shelled corn. At the time of storage the moisture content was 18.8 per cent and at close of the test 14.7 per cent, or a loss of 4.1 per cent. The weight per bushel had decreased from 54.7 pounds to 50 pounds, and the total loss of weight was 1,970 pounds, or slightly more than 7 per cent.

Keeping Track of Time.

Each boundary rider on the immense sheep ranches of Australia has a district to look after and he has to keep the wire fences in repair and see that the sheep come to no harm. It is a hard lonely life, in which the rider rarely sees another human being. Many of the men have strange ways of keeping count of the days.

One rider named Eagan tried several plans to keep count of the days, but always failed. At length he hit on a novel and attractive method. He made a big damper—the name the Australians give to a cake of flour and water with a seasoning of salt—on Sunday, and marked it into seven parts. Each section was a day's allowance, and the slices that remained told him the number of days that must pass before Sunday came again.

For several weeks this method never failed him. Unfortunately, one Tuesday he fell in with a fellow-rider who was very hungry. Eagan stinted himself in order that the ravenous one might be satisfied with that day's section of the damper. But it was no use. The host saw the knife cut the boundary-line and the hungry rider carve into the almanac. He could stand it no longer.

"Stop, now, stop!" he yelled as he clutched the remains of the damper and glared at his visitor. "There," he went on, "you've eaten Tuesday and you've eaten Wednesday, and now you want to slice the best of the mornin' off Thursday! Not if I can stop it, sonny! I won't be knowing the day of the week!"

WARNING THE JAPANESE.

Famous Oriental Scholar Speaks to His Countrymen.

A warning against the spread of pro-German sentiment among the Japanese people has been uttered by Dr. Inazo Nitobe, a famous scholar. Through the columns of a popular business organ he has declared that two dangers confront his people during the present war. The first is the pro-German illusion and the second the tendency to luxious living.

He said: "Though Japan is one of the belligerents, we did only a little fighting at the outset of the war, and for the rest we did nothing but make gain. We realized unexpected profits through war trade. Some Japanese make no hesitation in offering unstinted tribute of admiration at the German altar.

"This is no time for the Japanese to indulge in lauding the Germans and disparaging the Entente peoples. If Germany should win victory in this war and control Europe, it would be an appalling calamity for all the states of the Orient. If the Japanese were so much bewitched by the splendid German organization as to adore other objectionable German qualities, such as disregard of justice, humanity, and international treaties, it would be a most deplorable misfortune for the nation.

"If the German ambitions should be realized, Japan herself, unless she were conquered by Germany, would have to become ultra-military, and sacrifice all other aims of civilization at the altar of accumulation of war-like weapons and military preparedness. With a country like Germany roaming about at large in the world there could never be a guarantee of peace without powerful military strength."

Dr. Nitobe condemns the extravagance of those who have become rich through the war ,and says they are exercising a degenerating influence on the morality of the masses of the people.

Guard the Railways.

Beyond all things the present war has been a railway war. Not only have vast armies had to be munitioned and supplied on a scale hitherto undreamed of, but vast bodies of men have had to be transported to different parts of the same battle front or to another theatre of operations safely and expeditiously. Not only have existing systems to be maintained in the best of operating conditions but new lines have had to be built for strategic reasons, while temporary narrow-gauge roads have been laid in large numbers for the distribution of supplies, the transport of munitions to the trenches, and in the building of various forms of defensive work.

Even at some distant point from the front the work of a single explosive mine or bomb might impair the forwarding of fresh troops or needed supplies and prove disastrous beyond measure. Consequently to-day in Europe at least half a million soldiers are engaged solely in protecting railway track, so that there is an average of about five men for each mile.

Scattered among the railway employes in Europe are spies and detectives, working to frustrate any plot to damage the right-of-way or its structures, or to cause train wrecks. Such protection naturally has suggested in this country a corresponding field of action for home-defense leagues.— From "Railway Transportation in War," by Herbert T. Wade, in the American Review of Reviews.

Summer Suits in Java.

White and khaki suits are about the only kind worn in Java. The white drill is made up into regulation style two-piece suits, but the so-called "tutup" (meaning "closed up") coat, which is closely buttoned up to the chin but is worn without shirt or collar or tie, is very popular there and still more so in the Malay States. The collar is quite stiff, with two buttons or studs, and the front of the coat has five to seven buttons. These are sometimes sewed on, sometimes detachable like those used with white and colored waistcoats, only larger. Many use silver nuggets or brass plated with gold instead of the dat pearl button.

These suits are very comfortable and cool, as there is nothing else worn on the upper body except what is known here as the singlet, an undershirt of cotton or wool. The Chinese tailors make these suits, furnishing material, for $4.50 in Straits money or $2.55 Canadian currency. The buttons come separately at a cost of $0.30 to $0.50 Canadian, bringing the total up to, say, $2.75 to $3 for the "tutup" in drill. In khaki it costs about $3.70. The regulation two-piece suits, made of drill, cost a little more. When of better material their cost depends, of course, upon the kind of material used; but the best quality of cloth can be made up here by the Chinese tailors at surprisingly low prices, so that little if any summer-weight clothing for men is imported.

Early Diplomats to Turkey.

Some of the early diplomats accredited to Constantinople had unpleasant experiences even in times of peace. In 1673 the grand vizier, having intercepted some French dispatches, tried to borrow the cipher of the embassy. Delahaye, the first secretary, who refused to accede to this request, was thrown into prison, where he was bastinadoed and all his teeth were broken. Louis XIV. was then at the height of his power, yet no reprisals were made for this treatment of his representative. Until the middle of the eighteenth century the foreign envoys in Constantinople were under close supervision. They were forbidden to visit one another's houses or to meet elsewhere.

How 18 Starved To Escape Draft: The Ruse Failed

Exemption Board in New York Grinding Steadily With Few Rejects

CHINAMAN READY

NEW YORK, Aug. 24--Only thirty-seven out of 162 exemption claims were allowed yesterday by the District Board of Appeals. Following the strict application of the draft rules as laid down in its first sessions the Board rejected a big majority of the exemption claims presented.

Most imporant of the cases passed on yesterday was that of Carlton O. Miller, wenty-seven years of age, who was to have gone to Paris next month to take charge of Y.M.C.A. war relief work, including the spending of $3,000,000. Affidavits submitted by Fletcher F. S. Brockman, secretary of the War Relief Committee, showed Mr. Miller had been selected for the post of supervising the work in France because of ability proven in the last two years.

Mr. Miller made no claim for exemption, but stated he was ready and willing to do any service the government assigned him to do. Officials of the Y.M.C.A. persuaded Mr. Miller to permit them to make an appeal, based on the ground that his services would be more valuable to the government in the big relief prospect than as a soldier.

Case Sent to Provost Marshal.

Members of the Appeals Board, unable to agree on the case, spent some time arguing its merits. James A. Delehanty made a strong plea for Mr. Miller's exemption. Other members held that rules should be followed in each and every case; that others had been held who were engaged in important work of public and private character. Charles E. Hughes stated that as the draft law makes no provision for relief workers, but merely for those engaged in "industry and agriculture," he was unable to see how the District Board could grant an exemption. Mr. Hughes ruled that as the work in which Mr. Miller is engaged is of important character directly relating to the war, the case should be referred to the Provost Marshal General for decision, and that was done.

Arthur T. Colligan, who was passed by Local Board No. 116, appealed for exemption on the ground that he had joined the Aviation Corps of the army. It was shown that Colligan enlisted in the aviation service after having been called by the local Board, and although accepted by that corps his plea was denied.

Many Dependent Claims Rejected.

Several claims of men who said they had wives dependent were rejected. The appeal of Philip Kashi, who married on June 30 last, and who lives with his wife's parents, was denied. Edward Morgan, it was found, was married last May. His wife lives with her parents, who are prosperous, and his plea was rejected.

Hugh W. Johnson tried to get into the first officers' training camp and was rejected because physicians said he was not fit physically. Believing he would be unable to serve he was married last May. He was held as fit by his local board and claimed exemption because he believed he was justified in getting married after offering his services to the country and being rejected. Louis Marshall upheld the claim and it was granted.

Joseph A. Russell, who first stated he was ready and willing to serve, and later claimed exemption, was told he had changed his mind too late, and he was held for service. Thomas J. Gaylor, Sigmund D. Grossman, Robert S. St. Phenson, James Adam and Daniel J. Quinlan, who sought exemption for physical disability, were all told they were able to carry a rifle. Those who established in affidavits that they have children dependent solely upon their earnings were granted exemption.

Benjamin Gensch, a dentist, sought exemption because his teeth were bad. He had sought to enlist in the Dental Reserve Corps, but had been rejected because his teeth were bad. He was passed by the local Board, and his appeal denied. Benjamin Fuchs, a Public Service employee, was refused exemption.

Tried Starvation.

One of the most remarkable instances of a well organized attempt to evade the selective draft law was brough to light at Exemption Board No. 92, at No. 116 Henry street, when Jacob Shapiro, chairman, refused to exempt eighteen men who appeared in a starved and emaciated condition.

The majority of the men confessed they had been drinking as much as twenty-four cups of the strongest coffee they could procure in a day, besides chewing rank black tobacco, and eating no food. This brought on a condition that Dr. Charles Goldman and Dr. J. S. Tunick, examining physicians of the Board, described as cardiac.

The men, they said, were extremely emaciated and had a rapid, irregular pulse. As soon as the men learned their ruse had been disclosed they became disheartened.

One of the men got into an argument with his wife, who said she would rather see him die in the trenches than of starvation. As the men left the Board room the following remarks were overheard:

"Ach!" I have starved for nothing for a week." "A sight of coffee makes me sick." "Shilmaze! I am a hard-luck fellow."

Lee Kee Ready to Fight Kaiser.

"Sure, I'll fight the Kaiser," was the answer Lee Kee, a laundryman of Roosevelt, N.J., made yesterday when the exemption board chairman in the Fourth district of Middlesex county asked him if he wanted to serve in he National Army. Lee Kee was born in the United States of Chinese parentage. He was found physically fit.

TWO LONG YEARS HE SUFFERED

"Fruit-a-tives" Made Him Feel As If Walking On Air

OSHAWA, ONT., Nov. 28th, 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. One day I saw your sign which read "Fruit-a-tives make you feel like walking on air." This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends".

We Can Help You Stimulate Business

A little stimulation in Midsummer may put you back in the running again, and even yet, if you concentrate your efforts, use liberally the means that have made others prosper in your line of business you can succeed as they did.

Some Merchants Say:—

"As Soon as Business Picks Up I'll Advertise"

This is not consistent. The farmer does not wait until harvest time to sow his seed—and, remember this, that if you ever reach the point in business where you believe you can get along without advertising, somebody else will own your business. ¶ It isn't the age of a house that counts most. It's the efficient, up-to-date, daily publicity that brings its goods before the buyers that spells SUCCESS.

If it's ADVERTISING—let us talk it over with you. Our service is at your disposal at any time.

ANARCHY'S APOSTLES

TWO NOTED LEADERS ARE NOW IN PRISON.

Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman Seen to Thrive on Unpopularity With the Legal Powers—They Are Opposed to Organized Society and Fight Bitterly Against All Forms of Authority.

IT is no new experience for Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman to languish in jail, and apparently not particularly distasteful to them. What would be insupportable would be to be sent to jail privately, without any newspaper comment, without their friends being given a chance to hail them as martyrs. At present they are serving long terms for using their influence to defeat the operations of the selective draft law. It has been half jocularly suggested that it was rather a mistake to arrest them, since they thrive on imprisonment, and if left at large it would have been much easier for the New York police to round up the other pro-Germans, anarchists, and pacifists who are always to be found in their company. Deprived of their natural leaders, the others may continue to work underground, and thus be more difficult to capture.

Emma Goldman is a Russian Jewess and was born in 1869. At the age of 17 she was a full-fledged anarchist, and arrived in the United States ready to preach the doctrine she had learned from the Nihilists. For awhile she worked in factories; then she got married and was unhappy, but the natural ecstacy of her husband is taken for granted. She concluded that marriage is a failure as at present limited, and since then she has formed occasional unconventional alliances. In 1893 she incited a riot in New York, and as a result spent a year in jail. This did not cure her, for on her release she resumed her anarchist preachings, though with more cunning. At the time of the assassination of President McKinley she was again arrested on suspicion of having incited Czolgocz, who was a friend of hers, but was acquitted. Her life has been a strenuous one, and she is probably the most thoroughly detested woman in the United States. For a considerable time she found it expedient to pass as "Miss Smith" because of her difficulty in getting lodging.

Berkman is her favorite pupil. He attained nation-wide notoriety when he made an attempt to murder H. C. Frick, of Pittsburg. Early broodings over capitalism and the injustice of all existing forms of government are said to have driven him to the deed which earned for him a prison sentence of 22 years. He served only 14 years, Like Emma Goldman, imprisonment did not daunt his fiery spirit, and on his release he immediately took up his work where it had been broken off and began the publishing of a revolutionary labor paper. Miss Goldman, too, by the way, is a publisher. Since then Berkman has been several times under arrest, but has not been sentenced, though several of his dupes have served time because they endeavored to put his ideas into practice. He has been associated with the I. W. W., and indeed he and Miss Goldman have found the scheme of becoming patrons of new forms of violence, in causes which interest them only because of the opportunities for violence that they present, to be a better means of achieving notoriety than steadily preaching their old doctrine of anarchy.

The creed of Goldman and Berkman has been frequently declared in their writings. As to government, they believe that there ought to be no Government at all. They contend that it has only succeeded in protecting property and monopoly, and as they declare that all property ought to be in common, and nobody have any private rights to it, they insist that government is a huge failure, and the cause of many of the troubles of the world. They maintain that soldiers are merely professional man-killers, who are worse than ordinary murderers, since the murderer kills either for some advantage to himself or in a fit of anger. In the course of their speeches against the draft they said over and over again, "I believe that militarism will cease when the liberty-loving spirits of the world say to their masters: 'Go and do your own killing. We have sacrificed ourselves and our loved ones long enough fighting your battles. In return you have made parasites and criminals of us in time of peace and brutalized us in time of war. You have separated us from our brothers and have made the world a human slaughter-house. No, we will not do your killing or fight for the country you have stolen from us.'"

They believe in free speech, that is to say, that everyone shall have the right to say or print exactly what he thinks, without any restriction whatever. If any harm should result from this freedom, it will be counteracted by more free speech. All forms of religion they hold to be superstition, and all churches stumbling-blocks to human progress. They believe in free love, free motherhood. The most pernicious part of the doctrine is that they have a right to impose their beliefs upon people who dissent from them by means of bombs. No one can object to them holding any theories that they please upon any subject. They are regarded as menaces to human society because they advocate the use of murder and arson to establish a reign of anarchy.

It is estimated that over two hundred thousand pounds weight of paper are used in this country yearly for the manufacture of cigarettes.

Every now and then shoes should be given a sun-and-air bath. A good idea is to have two pairs and wear them on alternate days.

LABOR AND THE DUMA.

The Former Instigated the Russian Revolution.

To understand the seemingly puzzling events in the new Russia since the revolution last March, it is necessary to bear in mind one cardinal fact which was disclosed only recently. And this is that the Russian revolution was not the work of the Duma and the upper classes, but wholly of the labor masses.

This was not made clear by the Petrograd correspondents at the time of the upheaval. On the other hand they tried to convey the idea that the Duma was the ringleader of the revolt. This impression became so deeply rooted that the minds of the world were utterly confused by the developments of April and May.

Here are the revised facts about the revolt: Demonstrations occurred in Petrograd the first week in March. The government of Protopopoff, Minister of the Interior, provoked the masses to further excesses in order to spread unrest and create a basis for a separate peace. When the demonstrations first occurred the workers said: "This is not a Zabastovka, but a Protapovka," which meant: "This is not a strike, but a trap of Protopopoff." However, the continued provocations of the police drove more and more workers into the ranks of the strikers.

On March 10, when the strike assumed the proportions of a general movement, the leaders of the various secret Socialist and revolutionary organizations met in conference with several labor chiefs, to have control of the strike. A temporary Council of Labor Deputies, such as had directed the revolution of 1905, was formed. This council placed itself immediately in charge of the spreading revolutionary tide, of course, without knowing whither this tide would carry it. In 1905 the Council had been swept into jail and Siberia. The Council of 1917 was ready for the same fate.

While this was going on, the Duma was in session. Fiery speeches were being made. The Government was denounced from every quarter. But the Duma remained inactive. The Duma was rather sure that any attempt at revolution would be crushed by the police. As Paul Miliukoff said, when informed of the first revolutionary tribunal outbreaks: "The revolution will be crushed in a quarter of an hour." The Duma watched, with fear for Russia and the Allies in its heart, the expanding wave of rebellion.

The only revolutionary act of the Duma was its refusal to be dissolved after the Imperial decree calling for its dissolution was issued. When the revolution was at its height—a vast throng of rebel soldiers and workers marched to the Duma to find out where it stood. After that, the Duma formed on its own intiative a Committee of Safety. But all the time there was a labor council in charge of the revolution though the world was informed only of the Duma's committee.

The Duma and Council then conferred and decided upon a provisional government. The Council's stand was not to participate in any government till the Constituent Assembly met. Meanwhile, the Duma pulled all the time to "the right." The Council and the masses wanted the abolition of the monarchy, but the Duma decided to make Russia a constitutional monarchy. When Wilykoff announced to the waiting multitudes that Czar Nicholas would be deposed, there were cheers; but when he added that the Czarevitch would be retained and Grand Duke Michael made regent—there were cries: 'Again the Romanoffs. Down with the monarchy!"

The masses therefore, found themselves early dissatisfied with the Duma. Through their Council they urged the ending of the monarchy altogether, and. succeeded.—Isaac Don Levine, in the American Review of Reviews.

Their Dreams Came True.

Catherine Breshkovskaya tells the story of when, as a girl, she was going up to St. Petersburg with her mother and sister, "a handsome young prince, returning from his official duties in Siberia," entered their compartment. For hours, she says, he discussed with her the problems of the Russian people. "His words thrilled like fire. Our excited voices rose steadily higher, until my mother begged us to speak low." The handsome young Prince was Peter Kropotkin. The years have passed, and the cause to which the two ardent young politicians in that Russian railway carriage devoted their lives has been vindicated. Madame Breshkovskaya, honored and free in her own country, is leading, exhorting, advising the forces of the revolution which she helped so powerfully to make, and Prince Kropotkin, still in England, his refuge from the persecutions of autocracy, is forming a committee for the better instruction of the people of Great Britain concerning that practically unknown quantity which is new Russia. The Old World may well sit up, rub its eyes and stare, for dreams, in the Twentieth Century, have a way of coming true.

Men of Little Faith.

Since the battle is to the strong, there is good reason for Pierre Renaudel's recent rebuke to the faint-hearted. There are people in his own and other lands who are of too narrow a vision to see anything but the danger of a separate peace in the resurrection of a people. "O ye of little faith," he exclaims, "fearful and limp democrats who fear a separate peace for Russia, as if a people risen into freedom could abandon itself to dishonor and annihilation! Take confidence, and draw from events that lesson of fearlessness which you need!"

The yield of potatoes in Great Britain last year was estimated at 122 pounds per head of the population.

In these days of paper economy it is a good idea to let the children save the wrapping paper and make pads of it.

Suffered Nearly Half Of Her Life

Mrs. Simpson Tried to Find Relief For 25 Years—Now Feels Better Than in Years

I have spent about half my life in a useless search for something that would relieve me of a chronic stomach trouble, and here the other day I just found what I needed in this Tanlac," said Mrs. Abigail Simpson, of 71 Ritchie Street, Toronto, whose husband is an employee of the Canada Baking Co., the other day.

"I never had much appetite," she continued, "and just had to force myself to eat enough to keep going. Most everything disagreed with me, and I suffered so from nausea that I had to be careful about what I ate, often the least little thing would tear my stomach to pieces so I couldn't retain a thing, then I would be sick from nausea for a week at a time, would be as limp as a rag and often too weak and lifeless to do a thing. This has gone on for twenty-five or thirty years. My nerves were in such a wretched state that many a night I lay awake till four in the morning and would get up later feeling so heavy and stupid I could take no interest in anything. My liver was sluggish, my skin yellow, and I had a dull, mean headache most all the time. I was gradually wasting away and got down from a hundred and twenty-five to ninety-five pounds.

"In spite of all this I never gave up hope of getting well, and when I read of so many people praising Tanlac I sent for a bottle. I had hardly taken half of it before I saw it was straightening me up. I am feeling better since taking Tanlac than I had in years. Since finishing my second bottle I got so hungry sometimes that I am ashamed to eat enough to satisfy my appetite, my food tastes different and I relish everything I eat and never have nausea or any other trouble. My liver is active and that dull, sluggish feeling has passed away. I sleep now like a baby, and get up feeling fine and greatly refreshed. I am getting back strength and energy and am able now to do all my own housework without getting tired. I have not weighed yet so I can't say if I have gained anything or not, but from the way I feel I think I am picking up, and I am going to keep on with Tanlac as long as it does me as much good as it is doing me now. I have just written to my sister in the States, telling her about Tanlac, and advising her to take it.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

WILLIE'S MUSIC LESSONS ARE EDUCATIONAL.

Not Intended for "Showing-off" Purposes. Pianist are Not Made in a Year or Two.

Mothers sometimes think that the object of music study is to prepare Willie to play a piece when the family has company. According, he is taught for a year or more until he has a fair command of the rudiments, and can play an easy piece at sight. Then the study ceases. Now it is just as absurd to attempt to make a mathematician in the same time. Music is studied not for the purpose of showing off, but as a means of culture. It is a civilising influence, an art which stimulates the emotional side of the mind and maintains it in sane balance with the logical side. Playing in public is a secondary, though important, accomplishment. A boy spends six years in learning arithmetic. He needs fully as much time to become a competent pianist. He needs the full sweep of a lifetime to become a well developed musician.

The primary work should not be slurred over. A good teacher will not speed up a young pupil. On this point Margaret Wheeler Ross, writing in The Musician, says that the result of such ill-directed pedagogy is proved by the vast army of poorly equipped musicians everywhere to be found. The singer with the splendid physique and satisfactory voice is deficient in the first principles of sight reading, or interval formation. The temperament pianist may be lacking in a knowledge of key-relationship and chord construction. Further, the playing of music far in advance of one's technical development is most disastrous in its results. One is almost certain to become a bungling, stumbling performer, if this sort of thing is done, and the singer who essays to run ahead of himself will become stiff in the throat and hard in the jaw. Not to strive onward would be folly. But do it wisely under careful guidance and never hasten.

NEW WOODSTOCK FACTORY.

Woodstock, August 24.—A new cotton spinning concern is to be located here. To-day ground was broken for the building, to cost over $40,000, which will be occupied by the Woodstock Cotton Spinning Co., before the new year. The building will be adjoining the present textile factory, the same parties being interested in both factories. What is known as a picker house will also be erected. Over fifty hands, it is expected, will be employed at the start.

Friends add much to the happiness of life, but in the main we must depend upon ourselves.

A HEAVY PETERBORO' CASUALTY LIST

French Smash Foe Again And Repulse Violent Counter Attacks

General Petain Suddenly Shifts His Drive From the East to the West Bank of the Meuse, Capturing 1,132 Prisoners---Heavy German Attacks Fail to Make French Relinquish Any of Their Gains Little News From British Front To-day.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:—

PARIS, August 27.—German counter-attacks of the most violent nature failed early to-day to make the French relinquish any of the ground they gained in yesterday's new offensive around Verdun. The War Office reported to-day all such attacks around Beaumont had been broken up.

"We not only retained our gains but consolidated our positions," the statement added. On Sunday in a sudden shift of General Petain's drive from the east to the west bank of the Meuse, the French took 1,132 prisoners, the War Office asserted. "Elsewhere on the French front the Germans were busy." The official report to-day told of great enemy activity east of Noisy and west of Cerny. In the region of Monument and Hurtebise there were a series of attacks.

LONDON, August 27.—A successful raid east of Oostavern in which a few prisoners were taken, was all Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. He had no additional details from the Lens or St. Quentin sectors where fighting was reported in last night's official statement.

WASHINGTON, August 27.—Thousands of smoke producers to protect American troops, food and ammunition ships from submarines are being turned out to-day by Government contract in Delaware. On and after October 1 no ship of any description may sail from American ports unless equipped with them. On that date, too, all vessels must be painted by a system of camouflage worked out by a naval consulting board. Details of these systems are Government war secrets.

(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, August 27.—Japan is willing to grant the use of her shipyards for building bottoms to be used either in the Atlantic or Pacific trade. Viscount Ishii will offer these yards in conferring with American Government heads probably this week.

In return Japan will seek a relaxation of the steel embargo, but will not urge too strongly the case of the Osaka shipbuilders, who have been making fortunes from the war. This was the foremost development to-day in an international situation, where Japan, Russia and peace played the leading roles.

TOKIO, August 27.—Count Shigenobu Okuma, former Premier, was reported seriously ill by his physicians to-day.

Count Okuma after serving at the head of the Japanese Government for several years, retired from that post about a year ago when the Mikado and Cesaro decided to appoint Field Marshal Terauchi Premier. On his retirement the Mikado heaped honours on him and elevated him to the rank of Marquis.

Why You Should Support The Shoe Factory By-law.

One of the Best Factory Propositions Ever Submitted to the People—No Free Site But Only Fixed Exemption For a Period of Ten Years

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Kindly permit us to use your columns to make an explanation to the electors regarding the Shoe Factory By-law, which is to be voted upon on Thursday, the 6th day of September next.

This is one of the best factory propositions ever submitted to the City. Usually the City has given to a new factory a free site and an exemption from taxes. The Council and the people have endorsed this policy frequently.

In this case a free site is not asked for. The Ackerman Co. have some space in their present harness factory building in which the Shoe Factory will be started. It will be a new industry, and it will have to compete for business with old established concerns in other places. For this reason the company wishes to be able to calculate closely upon what its overhead expenses will be, and therefore asks that its assessment shall be fixed at the present amount for ten years. The City will not lose anything it now has. It will not give a site, and the company will continue to pay taxes on the full assessment of the lands and buildings it now owns.

The company agrees to employ at least thirty hands, but expects to employ double that number before long. When the number of employees is increased larger premises will probably be needed, and in that case the will be on the new buildings, for the company will still pay taxes on the sent factory. Unless this building is erected the City will not give the company anything, and if the new building is erected the only exemption will be on the new buildings, for the company will still pay taxes on the full assessment of the land, and even on the new building it will pay school taxes and patriotic and war rates. And for this small exemption, at most, the City will secure a new factory in a staple line that has every prospect of developing into a large industry.

At the present time there is no lack of employment. Even so that is no reason why we should not try to add to the number of our prosperous industries and continue to build up the City. But when the war is over, and we all fervently hope that will be soon, more employment will be needed, and the more industries we then have the better it will be.

Other places—any other place—would jump at the chance of securing the Shoe Factory on the terms of this By-law. We are quite certain the electors of Peterborough will support the By-law, but we wish to point out that they can only do that by voting for it on September 6th, and we hope that the electors will remember the date and take the little trouble needed to vote for the By-law, and thus assist to advance the interests of our City.

Yours truly,
JOS. J. DUFFUS, Mayor.
A. A. McINTYRE,
Chairman Manufacturers' Committee.

NO CESSATION IN THREE GREAT DRIVES BY ALLIES' TROOPS

Italians Have Inflicted 73,000 Casualties on the Enemy—French Win Again on Verdun Front and British Push Forward

MIXING THEIR BLOWS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Three great Allied drives assailed the Teutonic lines on three fronts to-day. The British and French troops resumed the offensive which they started last Monday. Italy continued her fierce drive uninterruptedly. In a week the Italians have taken approximately ninety square miles of Austrian territory, close to 25,000 prisoners, a vast store of guns, munitions and supplies, and inflicted stupendous casualties on the enemy—estimated in semi-official Rome advices at 73,000. The fighting to-day was on the comparatively open Bainsizza plateau. The rugged points of the mountains having been successfully passed Rome looked for even more rapid progress as the troops pressed on to Laibach.

Suddenly changing his point of attack from the left bank to the right of the Meuse General Petain was striking another blow at the German defenses out of Verdun. The initial shock carried the French fighters nearly a mile forward on a two-mile front.

On the British front Field Marshal Haig also mixed his blows. He drove successfully against German positions north of St. Quentin in a sector where there has been little fighting in two months. Powerfully fortified German positions of the "Hindenburg Line" were stormed and taken, and the British front advanced half a mile over a mile front.

No More Bacon Exports To Britain

Canadian packing houses have been notified by the British Food Controller that no more bacon or hogs will be bought by the British government for import. The order will have little effect on the country's trade, but it is a serious blow to the packing industry. Last year the William Davies Company alone shipped 97,791,000 pounds of bacon to England, and with other companies' exports the total was nearly 200,000,000 pounds—The Globe.

SIGNALLER VICTOR THORNDYKE.

The tragic news that Signaller Victor Thorndyke of the 33rd Battery has laid down his life in the recent fighting in France, will be received with deep regret by a large circle of friends. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thorndyke, 578 Stewart street, received an official message yesterday, stating that their son was killed in action on Aug. 15th. Signaller Thorndyke, who was only twenty years of age, enlisted here with the 33rd Battery and had been in France for over a year. He was widely known and most popular in Peterborough, where he had spent most of his life, and the bereaved relatives will have the sympathy of the community.

PTE. MAURICE TOBIN, a former member of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported wounded.

SIGNALLER C. SHARPE

Mrs. T. Sharpe, 456 Sherbrooke street has received official word from Ottawa that her son, Signaller Chas. Sharpe, Canadian Artillery was admitted to No. 18 Casualty Clearing Station on August 15th, suffering from gun-shot wounds in the left arm and left leg. Signaller Sharpe enlisted in Peterborough with the 33rd Battery and went overseas with that unit, afterwards being transferred to the 48th Battery. He had been in France for a long period.

PTE. G. A. McBRIDE.

Mr. S. A. McBride, 214 Dalhousie street has received a telegram from Ottawa, stating that his son, Pte. Gordon Alexander McBride has been admitted to No. 22 Casualty Clearing Station on August 16th, suffering from a bayonet wound in the foot. Pte. McBride who was a former member of the 57th Regiment enlisted in the 157th Battalion (Simcoe Foresters) and after going overseas with that unit was transferred to the 75th Battalion at the front.

SAPPER WM. HAMILTON.

Mrs. John W. Sanderson, Braidwood Avenue, has received official word from Ottawa that her brother, Sapper William John Hamilton, is officially reported admitted to the 3rd General Hospital, Letreport, on Aug. 16th, suffering from severe and multiple wounds. Sapper Hamilton enlisted here early in 1915, with the 39th Battalion, and had been on duty in France for almost eighteen months. His brother, Signaller Bert. Hamilton, 33rd Battery, has twice been wounded.

Pte. Morris Tobin Wounded.

Pte. Morris James Tobin, wounded at Lens on August 16 with gun-shot wound in right foot, has been admitted to No. 5 Field Hospital. His wife received a telegram to that effect this morning. Mrs. Tobin and family reside at 127 Smith street. His brother, Joseph, was killed in action last November. One other brother is in France, and still another is on duty in England, having been shell-shocked at the front.

SERGT. NORMAN SAXBY.

A wire from Ottawa this morning brought the news to Mr. Wm. Saxby, 352 Smith street that his son, Sergt. Norman Saxby, formerly of the 93rd Battalion has been wounded. The message stated that he had been admitted to No. 4 Field Ambulance on August 18th, suffering from a gun shot wound in the left leg. Sergt. Saxby enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion and went overseas with that unit, being transferred to the 21st Battalion in France. He won his Sergeant's stripes in the trenches. Sergt. Saxby's brother, Pte. Wm. Saxby of the 21st Battalion was wounded last year and has been invalided home, while another brother, Sergt. Ernest Saxby who went overseas with the C.M.R. is at present at home on furlough.

Italian Prisoners Are Increased To 23,000

General Cadorna's Men Advance Further on the Isonzo Front North of Gorizia—Many Guns Captured.

ENEMY DEMORALIZED

ROME, Aug. 26.—The Italians have made a further advance on the Isonzo front north of Gorizia, closely pursuing the Austrians, the War Office announces. Austrian counter-attacks on the Carso were repulsed. The number of prisoners has been increased to more than 23,000 in addition to which a great amount of booty has been captured. The statement follows:

"The battle is beginning to reveal itself in its vastness. The action north of Gorizia, from August 19 onward, may be epitomized as follows:

"The troops of the second army, after having thrown fourteen bridges across the Isonzo under the fire of the enemy, passed over the river on the night of August 18-19 and proceeded to attack the Bainsizza Plateau. Directing themselves decisively toward the Jelenik-Vrh front, they went around the three enemy defensive lines of Sommer, Kobelik and Madoui, which crossed them. Contemporaneously they attacked the same lines from the front, and broke through despite the enemy's most stubborn defense. The consequence, of this bold manoeuvre was the capture of Monte Santo.

"Our troops are now continuing their advance toward the eastern border of Bainsizza Plateu, hotly pursuing the enemy, who is making the most violent resistance with large parties of machine-gunners and with light artillery.

"On the Carso yesterday the battle came to a standstill temporarily. Our small advances rectified the captured positions, which were consolidated, and the enemy's attempted counter-attack failed under our fire.

"The prisoners thus far number 600 officers and 23,000 men. We have captured seventy-five guns, including two 305-millimetre; numerous mortars and many guns of medium calibre, a great number of horses, an airplane in perfect condition, many trench mortars and machine-guns, and all kinds of war material, including several motor tractors loaded with ammunition. The enormous difficulty of sending supplies to our troops across a zone in which there are no roads has been surmounted in part because of the large supply depots abandoned by the enemy during his retirement."

TAKE MONTE SANTO.

The text of the Saturday statement says:

"Since yesterday the Tricolor has been flying on the summit of Monte Santo. The gallant troops of the second army, having broken through the line of defense at several points, are closely pursuing the enemy, who is retiring and defending the difficult ground yard by yard.

"On the Carso the struggle is continuing around the positions captured by us, and which the enemy vainly is attempting to retake. In the incessant fighting Salerno, Catansaro and the Nurge Brigades have distinguished themselves for their boldness and stubbornness.

CAPT. BRADBURN HAS BEEN AWARDED THE MILITARY CROSS

Son of Mr. T. E. Bradburn, ex-M.P.P. Wins Decoration For Great Presence of Mind, Courage and Aggressiveness in An Emergency SET A FINE EXAMPLE.

The name of Capt. Frank Lindsay Bradburn is to be added to the already long list of Peterborough boys who have won decorations in the great war. Capt. Bradburn who is a son of Mr. T. E. Bradburn, ex-M.P.P., has been awarded the Military Cross, the official Gazette stating: "Capt. Frank Lindsay Bradburn, when the left flank was in the air, showed great presence of mind in meeting the emergency. His fine example of courage and aggressiveness inspired confidence and enabled them to successfully cover the withdrawal of other troops."

Capt. Bradburn, who is an old Peterborough hockey star, and a member of the famous Colts of years ago, enlisted early in the war in Edmonton. He was wounded last year.

HELP THE FARMERS.

Here's the chance to help the farmers save their grain crops.

There are many farmers who have, it is said, from thirty to fifty acres of grain cut and ready to be housed; and many of them within easy reach of the city, are sorely in need of help.

The weather is uncertain and the grain is better in the barn or stack; and to save the most of it it should be put under cover this week.

There are many business men, and men who came from the farm—many retired farmers—who could give a day or half day to some hard-pressed farmer near the city and help save a lot of good grain.

It is stated that there are many farmers near the city who are in the plight of being virtually cornered for lack of help.

When the harvest was a little distant there were ready promises of this kind of help; now is the time and the opportunity to fulfil these promises.

A few score men—business men or retired farmers—giving each a day or half day at once will be a mighty help. This week of all is the time it is most needed.

If any are willing and want to go to farms where their help is needed, they can soon find out where there is a place for them by applying to Mr. Gillespie or Mr. Wearing.

CONSCRIPTION.

Conscription is the law of the land. What is to be done with it? We are told every day that conscription is the great issue of the hour in Canada. Everybody who does not throw up his hat for conscription, and make everything subordinate to it, is a traitor, though without "making a song of it," he may rightly regard conscription as—as it is—the most momentous interest of the hour. Canada is in this war to the finish and has pledged its help to the last man and the last dollar. The Canadian soldiers at the front are fighting and dying gloriously in doing their share of Canada's duty to help win the war. They must have supplies; the vacancies in the ranks must be filled.

We failed to get a sufficient number of reserves by recruiting and, to the shame of Canada's manhood, we were forced to resort to force.

We have conscription now—it is the law; and it is the only means we have presented us for securing the soldiers that must be provided if Canada's strength on the battle line is to be maintained, and if Canada's glorious record is to continue.

If conscription is to be made of any use, to be made of the service, conditions indicate, its immediate application and enforcement are necessary. The longer its enforcement is delayed, the longer we shall fail to do our duty by the boys at the front, the less the national clan behind this duty.

If we have to depend upon conscription, and we have no other dependance now to meet the call from the trenches for help, its immediate employment is the immediate duty of the authorities. It takes a long time to get recruited men ready for the battle front. Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia, told the House that we have one hundred and twenty-two thousand Canadian recruits under training — 100,000 in England, and 22,000 in Canada. It requires a long time—from six months to a year—to get recruits through the necessary training, to the trenches.

If we put conscription at work at once, it will be perhaps a year before we are in a position to "meet the call from the trenches" that conscription was adopted to meet. If we delay application of conscription till after an election, there will be further and long delay; and an election may result in conscription being dropped altogether.

Yet the government does not contemplate enforcing conscription now,

We Should Prepare For Gaining Trade Advantages After The War

The project for a German export bank to assist in the restoration of trade relations with Central and South America, and to promote export trade generally, was launched at a big meeting of trade organizations and Latin-American export houses, at Hamburg recently, according to Copenhagen despatches. The bank will establish branches abroad, particularly at important centres of trade, Central America, West Indies, East Asia and Australasia. Where German bank representation is now inadequate the export bank will assist German import houses by granting a line of credit on acceptances. The necessity of combating American and Japanese efforts in South America and emancipating German firms completely from the dependence of British banks, which almost monopolize business in acceptances, is given as justification for starting the new bank.

The Imperial Department of Commercial Intelligence recently received copies of circulars which The Deutsche Propaganda-Gesellschaft of Buenos Aires are sending to Germans in the Argentine Republic, asking for information of a commercial nature regarding the various localities of the Republic, with a view to assisting the German merchant to take up afresh his career on the conclusion of peace. From these circulars it appears that a German-Argentine commercial directory, in German and Spanish, is to be published. It is to comprise an alphabetical collection of the names of all the German and Germanophil business houses and representatives of German firms in the Republic, together with lists or articles imported from Germany, and will be prefaced by information regarding Argentine industries, import and export trade, agriculture and cattle-raising, trade statistics, commercial laws and usages, etc., with especial reference to the various provinces and territories. The directory will probably contain 800 pages, and that 50,000 copies will be published. Each copy is to be signed and numbered.

These are indications of German preparations for post-bellum trade. Many signs there are also that German manufacturers and merchants will make a special bid for South American trade. That preparation should be made by Canadian manufacturers, bankers and the Canadian government to prepare for greater Canadian trade in South America, was the opinion expressed in an interview with The Monetary Times last month, by Mr. Edward C. Austin, who has resided in Colombia, Peru and other South American republics for the past ten years. "Canada," he said, "has one trade commissioner in South America, a territory 2,000,000 square miles larger than Anglo-Saxon America. This commissioner is at Buenos Aires, in the Argentine Republic. We should have one commission representing the northern republics of Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador; one representing the western territory, Peru, Bolivia and Chile; one representing the Argentine, Paraguay and Uruguay; and one representing Brazil. We already have a commissioner in the Argentine Republic; he could attend also to Paraguay and Uruguay. In Brazil it is absolutely necessary that the trade commissioner should speak Portuguese. Any extension in the Canadian commercial intelligence service in South America should be made immediately. A new Europe means a new Latin America. Now is the time to prepare to obtain our share of the business of these republics."

In answer to questions in the House of Commons it comes out that the machinery of enforcement is not ready and the government does not know how things in this regard stand.

If conscription is the "paramount issue," if its necessity is, as admitted, imperative, if that call is urgent in the interests of meeting the call for reinforcements, why does the government not regard conscription enforcement a duty as paramount as its necessity?

Instead the government is bending its energies and taking up precious time, in preparing for an election, something that can wait; and passing railway legislation to provide the sinews of war for an election.

The election can wait long enough to give effect to the paramount issue. Why not be consistent? Conscription proposed by Sir Robert Borden, was passed as a measure of urgency. It won't do any good lying dormant on the statute book.

We find the pyrotechnic press advocates of conscription, hailing it day by day as a paramount issue and disparaging the loyalty of those who do not join their clamour, yet there is no instance of one of them calling for the real essence of conscription, its application.

"Capt. Bunsby" spoke a great truth when he said, "the bearin' of the observation is in the application on it."

ACTING SENSIBLY.

We have reason to regard Parliament these days as coming close to Dickens' circumlocution office in "Little Dorrit"—a way of not doing things. After the bear-garden display of Friday night—the "duel" between Dr. Pugsley and Dr. Edwards—we are further impressed with the futility and inutility of Parliament. After talking for days, and members "slanging" one another at cost of thousands of dollars over the soldiers' vote bill, a contentious point, whose solution defied the skill of parliament in session, was settled in five minutes by personal conference.

Amendment and modification were agreed upon as the result of a conference between the Government and Opposition. This apparently could not be accomplished in Parliament, the stage where partisan politics, partisan spirit, hold the boards and give the motive of the play, or rather, farce. The Liberals insisted upon the removal of objectionable features of the bill which, if adopted, would give the government party undue advantage in polling votes, and tend to, or give opportunity to, the practice of corrupt methods or exercise of undue influence. The government opposition recognized the force of the Liberal contentions, but perhaps was not able to force their supporters whose partisanship would regard any concession as a back-down in public. But when both parties get together as Canadian gentlemen and patriots they could and did act as reasonable men. A good deal more of such sensible coming-together conferences of patriots in place of a continuous bear-garden performance of partisans would be good for public interests.

Partisanship in action and application the past three years, has been one of the great reasons why Canada has had to adopt conscription.

WHY DO WE DO IT?

The United States has taken action to forbid the export of sulphur even to Canada in order to conserve supply of an important ingredient in making munitions. That, by constituting a precedent, disposes of the plea that it would be unneighborly to the United States for Canada to forbid the export of certain food stuffs that are necessary to be retained in order to enable Canada to do her share in feeding our armies and those of our allies, and feed the people of the Mother Country.

We are urged in frantic periods and frenzied phrases to save food; the government that asks this fails to set the example. We are asked to save our money and buy war certificates to help finance the war, and we find the government that makes this call passing legislation that lavishes public money by the tens of millions upon big interests concerned in a railway that has this money thrown at it, for the Canadian Northern has not asked for this action on the part of the government.

Our food controller asks us to save food grains for export. He does not set the example. He has the power to save nearly a hundred million pounds of food grains now devoted to distilling spirits to make whisky. He still permits this waste, and mocks the people by forbidding the use of wheat, of which only one bushel in three thousand bushels of grain, enters into the making of whisky.

Mr. Hanna, government food controller, decrees meatless days to save bacon and beef for export to Britain and allied countries. Almost every day carloads of beef cattle, collected from the surrounding country, leave the Peterborough railway stations for Buffalo, something that is doubtless going on in like degree all over Canada—a few days ago 48 cars of beef cattle left Calgary for the United States. Is there any good business, not to speak of good sense or consistency, in permitting this export which in one day deprives Canada of more beef than meatless days would save in years?

If the United States cuts off our brimstone, we should withhold our beef—in order to help us meet the demand for saving food to permit us send it to the Mother Country, and our allies.

The free export of food we need defeats the n[illegible] end purpose and at the same time adds to the burdens of the constantly soaring high cost of living. Every pound of food sent out of the country; every pound locked up in cold storage by lessening available supply, in face of ordinary and extraordinary demands, raises prices.

If Col. Currie, M.P., were as zealously fighting the battles of the country in France, as he is fighting the battles of party in parliament, he would be better employed.

BORDEN TO LEAD.

A union government under the leadership of Sir Robert Borden, is a possibility that will absolutely defeat every effort at unity that has been made in this country.

What is the situation? Without consulting anyone on the other side he brought down the conscription measure. He placed it upon the statute books, but at the same time refused to accept full responsibility for it. Only since his political house commenced to crumble has he begun calling on everyone in the country! He has made his three-year war regime strictly partisan. No Liberal, no political "neutral" was ever called in. The patronage list flourished like the green bay tree, and the war administration has been conducted always with an eye on political favorites.

While the Advertiser believes that union government is desirable, and even now attainable as between the real leaders of the two great parties, it can never be regarded with complete faith so long as Sir Robert chooses to remain at the helm.—London Advertiser.

HOW HILL 70 WAS LOST IN 1914

It is just a little less than two years ago that Hill 70 suddenly jumped into the headlines of the press and the minds of the world. In September, 1915, in the great battle of Loos certain Scottish troops, acting on the left flank of the whole British army engaged, pressed forward through Loos and then, contrary to orders, dashed up Hill 70 and pushed down its eastern and southern slopes. At their feet lay Lens. German troops were already beginning to withdraw, the heavy guns were going, the fate of Lens seemed sealed. But there were no supports for the victors and none came in the dismal hours that followed, and in the end the troops which had actually broken the German lines were almost destroyed and the ground lost. The tragedy of Loos, like that of Neuve Chapelle, was the collapse of the British staff. The troops had made progress beyond anything the staff had prepared for and the staff found itself unable to keep pace with the soldier. It was the collapse of Loos that cost Sir John French his command in France, and it was not until this week that the British again mounted the western slopes and attained the crest. — New York "Tribune."

EMPIRE TOMMY AND HIS BATH

Quick and Really Effective Methods At The Front

(By F. W. Ward.)

Cleanliness, we are informed is next to Godliness. Be that as it may, there is no room for doubt that, when a man is enabled to have a wash at pretty regular intervals, he is far more likely to be able to throw off disease than if he were required to carry on with all the accumulations of his labours thick upon him.

And Empire Tommy is naturally a cleanly fellow. Give him a chance to wash and see how quickly he embraces it. No matter where he may be, he will try his very hardest to get some water at least, and to have a shave, and a bath. The latter is probably accomplished in instalments, but he gets over the whole of his body and limbs by degrees.

Away in the desert on either Egyptian front, bathing facilities have been naturally not too plentiful. But the regular baths at Fort Tewfik were always well patronized, and many an eager look was cast at the Freshwater Canal. The latter, however, is out of bounds for the white man, there is something in the water that does not agree with his system, and so he has to forego the luxury of a plunge. But the Suez Canal is different, and up and down its length there are many spots that have been set apart for bathing stations for the British troops. Jolly good they are, too; the only thing is that, when a boat passes, she takes all the water in her wake, and the bather, unless he is careful, is left high and dry. Naturally he becomes the subject of much merriment to those on board. But he is quite willing to chance this and to keep on smiling.

In France, the bathing facilities for the troops have been reduced to a fine art. I am not speaking of the shell craters, which, filled with water, make excellent bathing pools, or of the once flooded ground round the Anore, where it was at one time possible to get a really good swim in four feet of water. It is the baths put up for the troops, not so very far behind the lines, to which I refer more particularly. These are in many instances of the rough and ready variety, but they answer their purpose.

Officers as well as their men, are eager to get a bath whenever it is possible, even if they have to get everything for themselves. The officer who is worth his salt in this war does not wait until his servant does things for him. Whenever possible he takes things on himself, and perhaps in the matter of baths more than in anything else. A canvas bucket filled with water from a neighbouring pump, a towel, a piece of soap, and a sheet of corrugated iron stuck up against a wall or a tree in a quiet corner, and there you have the bathroom. Not as comfortable as it would be at home, but it serves. And that is the great thing, after all.

But Tommy has to be thought of, not singly, but in platoons and companies. That is why more elaborate baths, at least as regards accommodation, have to be considered and brought into being. Ten and fifteen miles back from the fine the case is a pretty easy one. There are barns that may be taken over by the military, special boilers for the provision of hot water can be erected, and clean clothes can be provided. The men are marched in from their different battalions, a change of underclothing handed to each man as he files into the yard, he is allowed ten minutes in the bath, and he goes away happy and feeling fresh and well. He may have only had it wash in a barrel, cut in halves, but that makes no difference. He feels "good."

It is when you get up nearer the line, well under shell fire, that you have to think out things for yourself when you get the job of putting up a bathing place. The materials are not always to be found, but there is invariably some way out. Let me give a couple of instances of what is being done up and down the British line in France to-day.

Once I met a Town Major who was in deep distress. He wanted to get some baths built for the men as they came back from the trenches, but he couldn't exactly see how it was to be done. He was a good chap, ready to take his tunic off himself if he could have helped by doing so, but he was at a dead end.

He had a barn, some empty wine barrels and a copper, one of those things you see in the scullieries of the older fashioned houses. He could get coal, and he could get water. So we put our heads together, and this is how the baths were built. First we found an interpreter, and he explained to the owner of the farm what we wished to do. There was no difficulty there; we only had to promise that we would not damage the place, and we were given a free hand.

We found some bricks, and we found some chalk and mud. That was for the mortar. So we built the copper in the regulation manner. Then we sawed all the barrels in halves, and found that forty men could be accommodated at one time, two men to a half barrel, so that one could give the other a hand in washing down his back and shoulders. A fatigue party to carry the water to the tubs was provided by the battalion using the baths, a timetable was drawn up, and there you are. There was one other thing, though, and that was, how to get rid of the water that had been used and thrown away. That's where the interpreter came in again, for the floor of the bathroom was lower than the field at the back, and the water could not be allowed to run into the farmer's yard.

So we obtained permission from the owner to take a pane of glass out of one of the windows. Then we went round to a Royal Engineer's dump and borrowed a "lift and force" pump and a couple of lengths of hose. Another party dug a deep pit in a corner of the field, the waste water was pumped into this pit after the men had finished, it soaked into the ground during the night, and all was well. Time of execution, two days and a half. Rough and ready, but effective.

In another case something different had to be done. The barn was there for the bathroom, but it wasn't a very big one. Packed with the half barrels, there was no more room for the heating arrangements. So we went across the road to where a ditch ran down the hill, and we put up a makeshift boiler there. For this we used twelve oil drums, each built into brickwork in the regulation manner, the water being carried, when hot, to the bathe in buckets. The latter were biscuit tines, with wire handles, by the way.

By the side of the boilers we built three filter "sumps", hole in the ground, filled with pieces of broken brick and slag. All the dirty water was thrown into the first of these sumps, and by the time it ran out of the third into the ditch it was practically clear. The soap and the dirt was retained by the filtering material, this could be treated with chloride of lime, or some other disinfectant, and thrown on the field close by. These instances could be prolonged, if necessary, but it is sufficient to say that they are only two of thousands to be found to-day "somewhere in France." Be it remembered that if you could always secure him a chance of getting a bath, which of course is not humanly possible, Tommy would have one every day. As it is the very best is done for him that can be done.

"A RICH MAN'S WAR."

About the most disgusting blather of anti-war agitation is the charge that this is "a rich man's war." It can only pass current among the ignorant, the shallow minded, or the fanatic. It isn't necessary to discuss its falacy, but the irony of it just now is bitter when we read that among the very first sacrifices of the war is the crippling, perhaps for life, of a young aviator, Davidson, son of one of the heads of the house of Morgan.

Young Davidson had everything in the world to live for, materially speaking—youth, wealth, social advantage, health, opportunity, education. He might easily have gone into a safe branch of public service if he felt impelled to make the gesture of patriotism. Instead he chose the most perilous and the most urgently necessary service aviation, and for months has been giving money and time to its development and to his own training. Now he has paid the price of as pure a patriotic impulse as any man feels. His sacrifice is a rebuke to the shirker in every walk of life and an inspiration to every one of his fellow Americans. At about the same time Aviator Fleishmann, another young man of wealth and position, was killed in the same training. Other such men have died in France in the same cause, and more will follow them. In Chicago the sons of "rich men" were among the first to come forward and are to be found in every branch of the service. Two of the sons of one of the leading bankers are in the perilous air service. The son of a member of one of the great mercantile houses is in that service. Throughout the country "richmen" and rich men's sons are giving with open hands of wealth, of service, of life itself. If this makes a 'rich man's war" then this is a rich man's war, but it is a poor man's war as well. — Chicago Tribune.

Baseball Has Slim Chance In England

(From the London Times, by a County Cricketer)

A number of spectators encroaching on the turf and marring the view and the pleasure of everybody behind them; a series of raucous shouts and cries; a great monotony of "pitching" without the player making a stroke at all; now and then a blind slog anywhere the striker knowing least of all where the ball was going--such was the scene at Lord's yesterday when several thousand people turned up to see a team representing the United States play another representing Canada, the "gate" money going to the fund in aid of Canadian Widows and Orphans. Looking at it from a cricket point of view, there is no question whatever that baseball is a very poor game indeed. Much has been written and said about the faultless catching and fielding, and throwing of the baseball players. Armed as each one is with a huge glove on the left hand, with a web between the thumb and first finger of the glove, it is a matter of great difficulty to drop a catch, or be guilty of misfielding. The throwing is certainly straight and hard, but in most cases there is only one direction in which to throw, and the fielder is usually facing, more or less, in that direction, so ought to be rarely guilty of throwing wide. The difficulties of the game have been greatly exaggerated, apart from the play of the striker, the rest of the game appearing very easy. Of the wonderful swerving inwards and outwards, and upwards and downwards at which we are told any average pitcher is a great adept there was practically none in evidence yesterday. To the uninitiated it is believed that when a side makes a number of runs the baseball has been good, but such is not the case. The fewer the runs the better the play---a fact which drew from the king, when he saw the game on its native soil, the very wise remark: 'It seems to me that the better the game the duller it is." That the game will never suit the British temperament is assured by reason of its sheer monotony, the fluky character of its hitting, and the mechanical aid which, in the shape of a glove, tends to negative the human factor, and in the case of every catch produces a decided feeling of disappointment in the spectator who is accustomed to cricket that it was the glove and not the man that did it. Apart from those things, the very uncomfortable looking uniform and the incessant baiting to which the players are subjected by the ignorant ed specators quite remove the game from the sphere of pleasurable recreation. Indeed, it has been said that but for allowing the onlookers absolute freedom in this way baseball would long have ceased to exis.

Amongst the 10,000 spectators were Princess Louise, Lord Campden, Lord Eldon, the Hon. Harry Stoner, Mrs. Waldorf Astor, Lord Howe and members of the American embassy.

Louie Schettler Of Old Ball Team Is Seriously Injured

Eleven members of the Dayton (Ohio) Central League baseball team were injured, two of them seriously, at Champaign, Ill., on Friday when a freight crashed into a passenger train at Mansfield. The team was en route from Peoria to Fort Wayne, Ind. The most seriously injured players are: Fred Derrick, first baseman, Coatopa, Ala., leg lacerated and back hurt; Ray Spencer, of Washington, Md., right fielder, ear torn off and back of head injured, serious; Lewis Schettler, of Youngstown, Ohio, head hurt, with one eye knocked out, serious; Pat Donohue, of Springfield, Ohio, catcher, two fingers cut off and back hurt; Charles Stewart, left fielder, cuts on ankle and hands; John Nee, manager, cuts on arm; Floyd Kroh, of New Orleans, pitcher, artery in arm severed and leg hurt, burned by steam, and H. Storch, centre fielder, of Akron, Ohio., hands cut and legs burned.

LEAGUE RECORD FOR "RUBE" PARNHAM

Pitches 24 Innings at Rochester and Wins Two for the Orioles.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Aug. 25.—"Rube" Parnham, with Baltimore, set a league record for the season today when he pitched 24 consecutive innings against the Hustlers, winning the first game, which went fifteen innings, 3 to 2, and the second game, which went nine innings, 3 to 2. George Smith worked the 15 innings against Parnham, the first game, and Causey worked the second game. The only other feature was Kelly's home run over the left field fence in the first game. Catcher Jimmy McAvoy of Baltimore, was exempted from the draft to-day because of a dependent mother. The scores:

First game.			R.	H.	E.
Baltimore	100100000000001	--3	8	1
Rochester	100000100000000	--2	6	2

TONE OF GERMAN PRESS CHANGING; DEMOCRACY GAINS

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Tempora mutantur! Three or four years ago it would have been almost unthinkable that a German newspaper should have published an article with the title "The Democratisation of Germany," an article, that is, in which the proposition was treated as one of near political possibility. Yet within the last few weeks this identical headline, writ large, has several times figured in leading journals.

Herr Michaelis' speech notwithstanding, democracy is on the march in Germany, its progress may be stayed, but it is very apparent that it cannot be brought to a standstill. In the journalistic world the most prominent and fearless champions of the democratic ides are Maximilian Harden, Theodore Wolff, Paul Michaelis and Eduard Bernstein. The veteran Herr Harden has been "called up" and his trenchant weekly, Die Zukunft (The Future), suspended for "the duration of the war," for which period his pen will be employed in army clerical work.

Herr Bernstein, who when on the staff of the Vorwaerts narrowly escaped penal servitude for his opinions, is too outspoken even for that doughty journal to employ. Besides these professional journalistists, the Parliamentarians Herr Scheidemann and Herr Wolfgang Heine, frequently contribute articles to the radical and socialist organs, while latterly there have been such celebrities as Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former Colonial Secretary, and Dr. Walther Rathenau, called the "Bismarck of Industry," entering the journalistic lists in the same cause. A movement upheld by men of this calibre is unlikely either to perish of atrophy or to be suppressed by force.

Herr Wolff's Warning.

In the course of an article in his Berliner Tageblatt Herr Wolff writes:

"If after these murderous years of war we are to attain peace at home and are to rehamilitate our policy abroad, then we must see to it that the German people shall no longer stand before the other culture nations of the world as a nation of bondsmen, denied all influence or independence; that the German government shall no longer be regarded as an uncontrolled force, planning and ordaining in secret.

"As yet this people, that has all too long been refused political independence and is too little trained in political systems scarcely envisages the object of its aspirations—only the desire for peace is clearly sensed. Its determination in defence, its power of resistance are undiminished; let there be no illusion abroad on this point. But all are oppressed with the feeling that not alone the organization of any particuler department — the food control or the coal supply—is at fault, but that it is the organisation of the State that has produced its present situation.

"Admitted that in the past the German people has grieveously neglected its political concerns, in non-political affairs it has shown keenest judgment, alert intelligence, mobile wisdom to debar such a people from all participation or responsibility in its own governing, to rule it bureaucratically from above, to condemn it to wait before the closed gate of the Ministerium upon the words of fate that shall be spoken by those appointed to rule it."

These words are written by the most influential pen in German journalism.

Dr. Hintze Sees Necessity.

More significant than the utterances of avowed radical and socialist writers is the conversion of the historian, Professor Otto Hintze, author of the somewhat sycophantic "History of the Hohenzollerns," a work in which the impregnability of that princely house to the assaults of democracy was especially emphasized. Until now Dr. Hintze had certainly never been suspected of liberal leanings. Writing in the Europaische Staatszund Wirthschaftszeitung, the Professor now says:

"Whether we hail it with joy or dismally reagrd it as a tragic necessity of the hour, we have to accept the fact that a decisive step toward the democratization of our constitutional and economic system has become inevitable. We are about to enter upon a new epoch in our history. We are forced thereunto not only by the needs of our own internal development, but also by the transfiguration of the States around us.

"Prussia, standing in the middle of the Empire, in the middle of Europe, aye, in the middle of the world, cannot alone resist the march of the times toward democratization. By so doing we should place ourselves in a position of dangerous isolation amid the peoples of the world. No longer can the old Bismarckian order of things be maintained unmodified. Radical reform is needed; is, indeed, already in progress—a reform not only of institutions, but of ideals."

Very ominous, too, is the evidence that the wave of unrest has reached the country population, slower as a rule than the urban to move, and, by reason of its more plenteous food position, less discontented.

At a meeting of the Main Committee of the German Peasant Union, held under the presidency of Herr Fetger, a prominent Reichstag deputy of the progressive party, an unmistakable note of warning was struck. A resolution was passed denouncing the existing electoral system, under which, even after the war, every effective influence of the people still will be precluded. Immediate reform is demanded. Delay will render it doubtful whether the will of the Crown will be able to prevail against the determined opposition which is to be expected after the war. "A Prussian government,' the resolution continues, "which at this last hour still hesitates, and courts this opposition rather than trust the broad classes of the people, does ill service not alone to the Fatherland, but to the monarchy."

Ne'er-Do-Wells Have Shown Themselves Among Bravest

ROCHESTER, Aug. 25.—Dr. Katherine B. Davis, of New York, formerly of Rochester, is strongly in favour of allowing youths in reformatories and prisons the chance to rehabilitate themselves by serving their country. There is in many quarters a strong feeling against the notion but like every other question there are two sides to this. An English writer in the London "Daily Mail" tells of the results of drafting the inmates of prisons in England.

At first, there was great objection to allowing them to fight, as it was urged that the soldiers of the new army would most strongly and quite reasonably object to having to consort with criminals. So apparently the idea was dropped, Says the writer:

"But a little while ago it was officially announced that over 7,000 out of 15,000 convicts and other minor misdemeanants had been permitted to volunteer for active service, and that the vast majority of them had made good. The authorities felt justified in enlisting mature convicts from experience with youths taken from reformatories and industrial schools, of whom some four thousand were first enrolled in the army and navy. A careful record of these so-called ne'er-do-wells presents both a dark and a bright side:

To take the darker side first: 530 were killed in action, 49 died of wounds, 13 died of sickness, and 1,530 were more or less seriously wounded. From this it will be seen that more than half of them gave their lives or suffered some grievous hurt in their country's cause.

Now to take the brighter side of the record. 20 were mentioned in despatches, 25 received the D. C. M., eight were given commissions, and three received the V.C.

Deducting from this list those who were injured or otherwise incapacitated, we find that between 2 and 3 per cent. of those lads achieved some high distinction—a truly marvelous result, unexcelled, if not unparalleled, by the record of any other regiment engaged in this war. . .

"Now let us set beside these facts and figures the current statistics which seem to prove that there has been a great increase in juvenile crime lately. Does it mean that there is a new spirit of lawlessness abroad which has so infected the younger generation that they have become more wicked than they used to be?

"I think not. I think that if we call this new spirit a spirit of adventure rather than a spirit of lawlessness we shall get nearer the truth. I think that it is more often this higher spirit, born of misguided courage and mistaken enterprise."

Sacred Heart Church Paid Tribute To Departing Curate

Congregation Made Presentation to Rev. J. V. McAuley Last Night —Substantial Gift Accompanied Fine Address—New Pastor at Ennismore.

At the close of vespers last night the congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart presented a farewell address and a well lined wallet to Rev. J. V. McAuley who, after seven years of faithful and fruitful service as curate, was recently appointed parish priest at Ennismore.

The address was read by Mr. Sylvester S. Shaughnessy, and Mr. Joseph Picard, Sr., made the presentation. The feeling of personal loss which the departure of Father McAuley has brought home to the individual members of the congregation was manifested in the exceptionally large attendance last night; it was admirably expressed in the appreciative and affectionate sentiments of the address, and reflected in many little evidences of emotion that overswept restraint. Seven years of happy associations are not lightly severed, particularly the paternal and pastoral ties that have united the priests and people of the Church of the Sacred Heart since its establishment.

The address presented to Rev. Father McAuley follows:

Peterborough, Ont., Aug., 1917.

To Rev. J. V. McAuley:

Dear Father,—It seems but a very short time since we, the members of the Sacred Heart Parish were assembled together to bid farewell to one, who had been our dear pastor since the institution of the parish, and who was rewarded and blessed in being elevated to the dignity of Bishop of our diocese. Now, we are gathered together once again on a similar mission, this time to say good-bye to our beloved curate who has been associated with us continuously since our church was first opened, and who now has been called to undertake the deserved responsibility of parish priest of Ennismore.

We can assure you, Father McAuley, that sad, indeed, was the news received during the past week of your intended departure from our midst. It would appear that we, sometimes, unconsciously allow a feeling of selfishness to seemingly dominate our thoughts and actions, and that we derive a certain amount of pleasure from the indulgence. We learned to love you; we had not pictured the occasion when you would be removed from us; we felt almost secure that we should always be honoured in receiving first hand the soothing rays of comfort, born of your genial disposition and happy manner. However, merit has its reward. "Man proposes and God disposes," and when we shall have stopped to give the matter serious consideration, we shall be able to understand that it is the will of Him who is the steering guide of all things.

Nearly seven years ago you came to us—your first charge—and, by your fidelity and priestly qualities have proven yourself capable in the eyes of your superiors. As for us you have endeared yourself deeply by our mutual cordial relations, your sterling worth, your inestimable attributes, your intense zeal and solicitous regard for us, in matters pertaining to our spiritual as well as our temporal welfare.

In bidding your adieu, we would ask you to accept this purse, as a slight token of our esteem. We wish you God-speed, and we pray that your labours and associations, in your new field of greater opportunity, may be as successful and pleasant as they have been during your sojourn as curate of the Sacred Heart parish.

In replying, Father McAuley said that mere words failed to convey his feelings of appreciation of the splendid remembrance, particularly of the sentiments so beautifully expressed in the address. His work in the parish had been its own reward. Both the pastors under whom he had served had been extremely kind, and he had in effect experienced the duty and responsibility of a parish priest. He thanked the people for all the happiness they brought him, and assured them that while the old associations had been parted by his new charge, their mutual friendships remained and would endure. Father McAuley reminded the congregation to pray for him that he might be successful in his pastorate at Ennismore.

Rev. Father O'Brien spoke briefly, referring as he had previously done, to the priestly qualities Father McAuley had exemplified and expressing the assurance that his success would be maintained and augmented in his position of greater responsibility.

SHOULD KNOW WHAT WE ARE BUYING.

There does not seem to be much open opposition to the Government taking over the Canadian Northern Railway, but there is apparent a very strong desire to know just what the Government is getting and how much it is going to pay for what it gets. The C.N.R. has a good many subsidiary companies, and it is certain that some of these are included in the purchase, but no one seems to know how many of them. For instance the Model City, near Montreal, is a very valuable asset, and the tunnel connecting it with Montreal cost many millions, but when Sir Thomas White was asked if this property was included in the [illegible] purchase he frankly admitted that he did not know. So far as the C.N.R. is concerned these subsidiary companies seem to be the most valuable assets, and it surely ought to be known very definitely just what the Canadian people are securing when they take over the C.N.R. And there seems to be a not wholly ungrounded fear that unless great care is exercised the Government will be apt to pay pretty dearly for its bargain. This will be all the more likely if there is any doubt or dispute as to the properties really involved in the transaction. Canada ought to know exactly what she is buying.—Christian Guardian.

GOES TO PRISON TO SHIELD WIFE; FREED BY KING

LONDON. — Announcement that King George has granted pardon to Lieut. Cecil Aylmer Cameron recalls a story of chivalry that can hardly be matched in modern life, and it brings recognition for distinguished patriotic service.

Cameron served a prison term of three years for a crime of which he was innocent, having disdained to clear himself when he might have done so by impugning the character of his guilty wife. His sentence stripped him of his miltary rank, and caused his dismissal from the army.

He accepted the disgrace sturdily and finished his term rather than pay the price which would avert the complete ruin of his career.

Volunteers in Army.

The war began soon after the expiration of his term. He had come of a soldier family, his father having won the Victoria cross for gallantry in the great Indian mutiny, and his grandfather having been wounded at Waterloo.

The young man's military friends had never believed him guilty, and when he tendered his services as a volunteer Lord Kitchener appointed him to a staff position in which his acquaintance with continental languages could be utilized. He acquitted himself so well in the western war zone that the French government rewarded him with medals for valorous service.

The British pardon clears his name of taint and restores all the honours which were lost with his conviction. Before his trial he was with the Royal Field artillery. His services for the last three years has been with the Royal engineers.

"STOLEN PEARL NECKLACE."

The crime of which he was convicted was committed in 1911, when he joined his wife in a suit to recover $32,500 from an insurance company for the value of a pearl necklace of which Mrs. Cameron declared she had been robbed. It appeared at the trial that she did not possess the necklace at the time of the alleged robbery, and that she had instigated Cameron to join in the suit by lying to him, as she had done to others.

He refused to become a witness in his own behalf lest he might betray that he had been a victim of her deception. The court records thus show a clear case of fraud against both husband and wife, and the penalty was imprisonment for three years for each of them.

Mrs. Cameron contracted a disease that threatened her life and she was released from prison in about four months. While believing herself to be dying, she made a written confession which exonerated Cameron and acknowledged herself as the sole culprit.

TOLD NOT TO CONFESS.

In the confession she said she had wished to make a similar statement at the beginning of her prison term, but her counsel had advised her against it on the ground that a petition was already in circulation for Cameron's reprieve, and Cameron was as strongly against involving her in his behalf as he had been at the trial.

Her impending death, as she supposed, led her to override his objections when she became free, and the confession she then wrote was made part of one of the most remarkable petitions ever addressed to the British throne.

There were 4,000 signers, led by Cameron of Lochiel, head of the clan; five dukes, including the Duke of Norfolk; Lord Lansdowne and five other marquises; Lord Roberts, Lord Grey, Lord Cromer, and Lord Salborne; 126 army generals, nine judges, two archbishops, seventeen bishops, thirty-six artillery colonels, and a long list of men eminent in the professions.

CONFESSION OF WIFE

"I can only grasp it to-day, one of the rare occasions when so far I have been free of pain," Mrs. Cameron wrote in her supposed deathbed confession which was addressed to the secretary of state for Scotland, "and try to write out in full and as best I can the confession of my guilt; for by my silence my poor, noble young husband has been unjustly convicted, although absolutely and entirely innocent of the cruel charge brought against him.

"On being sent to prison I wanted to make the statement I am now doing, but on being allowed to see my counsel I was told a strong petition was being sent in, which was certain to prove my husband's complete innocence, and my husband did not wish me to confess any guilt, but for his sake to await the result of this petition—only another of his many acts of devotion.

"DEMENTED WITH GRIEF"

"A few weeks after hearing the awful news of its failure I was demented with grief. On sending for my husband's counsel to find out why it had been refused he could not explain, but added to that cruel news by informing me first of all that had my husband defended himself his innocence would have been proved, but at my expense, and this he refused to do at any price: second, that the loss of his commission in the army had been kept from me at his special request—only further proof of his wonderful love and devotion.

"All this I heard on being moved in here in a dying condition, and the agony of mind was twenty times harder to bear than the physical suffering.

"I can never adequately express what intensified torture of mind I went through for my dear noble young husband, who was left to suffer alone for what he never could have dreamed of, as he is and has always been the soul of honour.

"Telling Simple Truth."

"Do believe O, do believe he is suffering so cruelly now for being extraordinarily noble and true to the poor sinful woman he married, and at this very late hour believe me at last to be telling you the simple truth, no matter at what cost to myself and my pride. My husband's love for me is such that I believe he will forgive the folly and sin I have been so guilty of, and for which, God knows, I have suffered enough.

"I am sure I am not much longer for this world, and to die alone and unforgiven is surely too great a punishment, even for such a sinner as myself. Have pity and believe me when I tell you I have never hated myself more, deceiving a husband such as mine, one in a thousand, who absolutely trusted me; I fully realise it is despicable and wicked.

"Wicked as it was, the passion to be thought the possessor of those pearls grew and grew till I really had no other thought. I had to keep up my story by telling one untruth after another. Toward the end my hand was forced because of the awful fear I should lose my husband's love and I risked everything.

"I have done my best to write out this confession, trusting that God will forgive me. Have pity and try to forgive the awful misery and disgrace I have brought upon my husband and the sinful confinement he is at this moment bearing so bravely, and which again he has to thank me for. I hope this confession will indeed prove the absolute innocence of my husband and show how wicked and sinful I have been."

AN ABNORMAL PERSON.

Accompanying the confession was a medical certificate declaring Mrs. Cameron an exceedingly abnormal person. It was forwarded to the Scottish secretary, McKinnon Wood, along with the petition, in June, 1914, when Cameron's term was about finished. That official had declined to advise the king to act on the original petition mentioned above, and he took the same course with reference to the combined petition and confession.

Lord Middleton and Lord Denbigh then declared they would bring the case before the House of Lords and Sir Herbert Raphael engaged to bring it before the House of Commons in the discussion of the Scottish vote. These intentions lapsed with the expiration of Cameron's prison-term and his reinstatement in the army by Lord Kitchener.

U-Boat Sunk By Standard Oil Tanker Navajo

AN ATLANTIC PORT.—The details of an all day fight between the Standard Oil steamship Navajo and a U-boat, in which a British hydroseroplane played a part in the battle, were told by the officers and crew of the tanker.

The Navajo was bound from New York for France with a cargo of oil when, on July 4, at eight o'clock in the morning, Clarence Sisson, the wireless operator, received an S. O. S. call from a vessel attacked by a U-boat. Half an hour later the Navajo sighted a sailing vessel in a sinking condition. She had been attacked by a submarine.

Presently the submarine also came into view, and the Navajo turned and zigzagged away as fast as steam would take her. The submarine, however, seemed to be no less speedy, and was keeping equal pace with the flying tanker when, out of the clouds, like sunshine during a storm, a hydroseroplane appeared.

Edward Schafer, third officer of the Navajo, who told the story, said that the seroplane encircled around until almost directly over the submarine, when a bomb was dropped, exploding apparenly within a very short distance of the U-boat. The latter took no further chances but submerged her entire length of 400 feet sinking out of sight in an incredibly short time.

U-Boat Was Waiting.

"Just about the same time a mist, which grew denser every moment, began to settle over the water," said the officer "and we soon lost the hydroaeroplane from sight, too. At half-past three o'clock in the afternoon the fog began to raise. The hydro-aeroplane had flown away, but what should we behold, squatting like a toad in the water not more than three miles away, but the submarine.

'She saw us the same time that we saw her, and we both began firing about the same instant. The U-boat had the advantage of bigger guns. Hers were two six-inch weapons, while we carried only a four-inch stern gun.

"But our efforts to get away were more successful this time than earlier in the day. We were putting a wider and wired gap between us every minute. The submarine kept pumping shells at us until she had fired thirty of them, two of them reaching us and shattering the stern plates of our vessel.

"We fired only twenty shots and most of them fell near the submarine, but it was reserved for the twentieth one—at a distance of 6,500 yards — to land squarely where it did the work. We could see it strike beneath the periscope. It demolished part of the conning tower, and what happened to them was terrifying, although it relieved our minds a good deal. The submarine seemed to stand up on end and then plunge perpendicularly. There can be no question as to its fate and that of all those aboard her.

Says She Was Destroyed.

"Ten minutes after the submarine was disposed of a British destroyer came along in response to the wireless calls, which Sisson had been sending out during the battle. The spot where the submarine had sunk was covered with oil. The officers of the war ship said the indications were conclusive that the U-boat was destroyed."

So badly damaged had the Navajo been by the shells that seventy-five plates had to be riveted on to repair the gap.

After delivering her cargo the Navajo, bound for New York in ballast, caught fire, on August 1 by the explosion of one of her fuel pipes and was abandoned when Captain McDougal saw no possibility of getting the fire under control.

Millers Not Taking Orders For More Than 30 Days In Advance

An order issued by the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa recently requires that samples of all shipments of Rangoon beans brought into Canada shall be sent to Ottawa for the purpose of analysis as to the quantity of prussic acid contained therein. All shipments are to be allowed in that do not contain twenty parts of prussic acid to 100,000 parts. There has been a lot of speculation as to what the significance of the recent order was, but the Department asserts that up to August 9 no shipment had been rejected.

Sugar was again in an advancing market, although easier conditions were manifested in the primary market for raw sugar during the week. Now that preserving time is on the demand for sugar has been heavy. Advances have been recorded in macaroni, canned meats, mustard, cigars, canned lobsters. There was a general higher tendency in provisions of all kinds. Meats advanced from 1-2c to 2c per pound in certain cases. Eggs were higher and butter was also in firm market. There is a strong situation on rices owing to higher prices in the Southern markets for new crop and on Eastern rices because of a further advance in freight rates.

Ontario flour was lower in price, due to the arrival of new crop wheat. An embargo has been placed on the shipment of flour from Canada into the United States and applies to flour milled from old-crop grain. There is an uncertainty in the minds of millers over the prospect for the immediate future as to what the Food Controller is likely to do. They are in consequence not booking orders ahead for a period longer than thirty days. Business in grocery lines showed considerable improvement during the week.—Canadian Grocer.

Summary of New York States' Food Bill In Legislature

ALBANY, Friday.—There will be State commission of three members, receiving no salary but with a million dollars for conducting the work of the commission.

The men tentatively selected for appointment are George W. Perkins, Whitman H. Jordan, of the State Agricultural Station of Geneva, and William H. Miner, a wealthy "gentleman farmer" of New York city and Chazy, Clinton county.

Powers of Commission:—It may seize surplus foodstuffs in cold storage warehouses or elsewhere if the supplies are "hoarded" to raise prices.

It may authorize cities to buy and sell food in times of emergency.

It may drive out of business any one who continues to board food after due warning.

If conditions become serious no one may deal in necessities, foods, feeds, fuel.

It may regulate the menus in hotels.

It shall ascertain how much money—if any—should be spent in providing terminal markets in cities of the State, but can authorize no expenditures; that is a legislative function.

The Food Act shall be in effect during the war with Germany.

War Will End In Air, Say Officers

End Certain When America Sends 50,000 Aeroplanes to Europe, Their Belief.

An Atlantic Port.—That the war will be finished in the air is the general belief among British army officers, according to Captain Thomas Mills, an Australian, and Captain Richard A. S. Coke, of New York, both in the British Infantry and returning to their respective homes. They arrived here to-day aboard an American steamship from England.

"When America sends 50,000 aeroplanes to Europe," said Captain Mills, "the war will be over in a very short time. Of course, men are needed, too; but the main thing is aeroplanes. Nothing can resist them once they get started in sufficient strength to overwhelm he Kaiser's air fleet.

Both captains were severely wounded and have been invalided home. Both, however, expect to return to the battle front as soon as they have recovered their health and strength. Captain Coke was an actor and resided for years in New York. He expects to be in condition to rejoin his regiment in France in two months. Captain Mills' home is in North Queensland, Australia.

Asked to tell something about his experience at the front Captain Coke said:

"While, as an officer, I am not at liberty to speak on the subject, I will, in a general way, say that General Sharman made only one mistake in his characterization of war—he didn't put it forcibly enough. Mud, filth and cruelty seemed to me to be the predominant features of it. America can end it, if she will keep on sending men—a million of them; and, above all else, a fleet of 50,000 aeroplanes. Drum that into the people here. The air is the arena in which the final blows of this war will be inflicted."

Captain Coke went to France early in 1916 and was wounded several months afterward in a battle on the Somme. He was in a hospital nearly a year. He brings along the British Military Cross, bestowed for distinguished bravery.

ITALIAN PRISONERS ARE INCREASED TO 23,000

"The aerial activity was very lively yesterday. Our Caproni machines, after having several times bombed the Chiapovano Valley crowded with enemy troops, flew low and engaged the infantry. Of the 233 airplanes which took part in the battle only one did not return.

"WE ARE DOING NICELY"

The battle between the Italians and the Austrians still rages, with the Austrians stubbornly retreating at many points, including the lower Carso. Numerous messages from the front received by Ministers indicate that the Italians are making swift strides toward victory. When asked to-day for an expression of his opinion of the results thus far achieved in the battle, Lieutenant-General Count Cadorna, Commander-in-chief of the Italian forces, smilingly replied:

"We are doing nicely, thank you."

The official communication on the result of the battle shows that the demoralization of the Austrian troops is in part due to the extraordinary aerial and artillery work of the Italians, which has destroyed not only the lines of communication, but has resulted in the burning of all the main food supply stations of the Austrians, who for the past week have been starving at many points between Tolmino and the sea. This also accounts for the unusual number of prisoners and wounded.

The total losses of the Austrians from all causes are reckoned at nearly 100,000, the most important of which, is the Carso region have not yet been officially announced. It is said that among the losses of the Austrians are many men of the famous Twelfth Division, popularly known as the "Iron Division."

Monte Santo, the side of which has been scarred by many struggles in the past two years, and which is known in both armies as the spot where many men have become heroes, was taken by the Second Army Corps under Gen Capello, who crossed the Isonzo at Anhovo and swerved around the base of Monte Santo, thereby cutting the Austrian line of retreat and completely isolating the mountain, which for so long had been a thorn in the side of the Italians.

At Udine, Salvatore Barzilai, civil Governor of the Austrian territory occupied by the Italian army, when informed of the complete victory of the Italians, exclaimed: "At last our soldiers have achieved this magnificent thing they have freed our soil from the ancient enemy."

The final success of the Italians in winning their greatest battle in the war is thrilling the country as never before. Both the army and the civilians now see the result of two years' suffering and economic hardship. The victory came unexpectedly, notwithstanding the encouraging bulletins of the last fortnight. It is Gen. Cadorna's rule never to announce an event until certain that his troops are able to hold new positions.

AUSTRIAN COLLAPSE NEAR

Washington, Aug. 26.—(Special)—A despatch from Berne says that entire Austrian units, on the border of madness, have broken and fled under the Italian bombardment.

Increasingly large numbers of Austrian troops are being sent to the rear because these troops have been made practically insane under the intense and incessant gun-fire.

The Austrian War Office, it is said, has feverishly rushed reinforcements to the Italian front. These reinforcements are passing through Vienna, but it was not known whether they have been withdrawn from the Galician or the Roumanian front.

A despatch from Rome says that Germany and Austria will be obliged to withdraw troops from the Russian and the Roumanian front to arrest the progress of the Anglo-French and Italian armies in their respective drives. The despatch tells how naval guns placed at the mouth of the Isonzo River swept the Austrian positions with a terrific fire. Shells passed through and even beyond Mirimar, which is less than two miles from Triest. The correspondent says that Italian batteries advanced in the open, unprotected and wholly without cover.

According to Austrian admissions, the Italians have attained their greatest success in he Anhove sector. It is admitted that Austria has lost Selo, and that the Italian roops have advanced beyond hat place for a mile and a half.

Munition Workers Are Urged To Save

Production of War Material Necessarily of Temporary Duration

MR. IRISH'S STATEMENT

Mark H. Irish, director, Department of Labour, Imperial Munitions Board, has sent the following letter to the press:

"Will you permit me through your publication to remind the men and women still engaged in making munitions in Canada, that of necessity, and we may be grateful that this is so, the production of war material must be of temporary duration. Let me emphasize therefore, that prudence and common sense demand that the earnings derived from the labour in which munitions workers are now engaged should be not only for personal reasons, but for national reasons, conserved to the utmost extent. To squander wages at any time is imprudent, but to squander wages derived from passing employment at this time is to be untrue to the best interests of the country.

"I am led to make this public statement owing to some incidents that have come to my attention during the last fortnight. If these incidents are numerous, even in a modified form, the result must be deplorable, and while my faith in the Canadian people is such that I cannot believe the improvidence is widespread, I nevertheless, feel it my duty to make the above statement.

Let me illustrate. A woman who had been released from a munitions factory, owing to the termination of the factory's order came to my office in a frenzied state of mind proclaiming that she had to have further employment. Upon investigation this is what I found. She was the wife of a soldier at the front. He had left her in one room furnished in the scantiest way. She had only one child. The separation allowance from the Government amounted to $20.00 per month. Her husband had assigned $20.00 a month of his pay. She was also in receipt of $13.00 monthly from the Patriotic Fund. The woman had earned on an average $22.00 per week since October, 1916, in a munitions plant. With this revenue I was surprised that she should say that she was faced with immediate distress. Then I learned that she had rented a flat, furnished it, and had spent the furniture, [illegible] was a player-[illegible] valued at $300. Those who had sold these articles to her insisted that she meet the obligations she had entered into and hence her financial [illegible].

This case is not the only one before me, but is an extreme instance of "[illegible] expenditure. . . . If I had entertained the slightest idea, however, that such use was being made of the large earnings from munitions I would have sounded a warning note then; but it seems that until the curtailment of orders and the consequent release of the employes induced [illegible] to bring such conditions to the surface."

MYSTERY DEEPENS IN HAMILTON CASE

Body of Doctor Exhumed For Purpose of Examining the Skull

HAMILTON, Aug. 25.—A report current yesterday that the body of Dr. Douglas G. MacRobbie had been exhumed for the purpose of clearing up some of the facts brought out at the inquest which had been overlooked at the post-mortem, was confirmed by Dr. McNichol coroner to-day. The coroner also stated that the medical evidence would be highly sensational. Dr. McNichol further said the re-examination would probably be confined to the skull of the dead man.

The police are apparently still much at sea. No motive for a crime if there was one, can be found. Careful enquiry shows that MacRobbie and the three men, Smith McAuliffe, and Scott, held as material witnesses, and who were in the room when MacRobbie was found dying, were all on the friendliest terms possible. If MacRobbie died a natural death the police cannot understand why someone on the premises did not volunteer a prompt and satisfactory explanation of what happened and the delay in summoning police and the doctors. The most significant point of the whole case so far is the evidence of a neighbor's woman, who insists that she heard cries for help on the night in question.

That there might be developments along an entirely new line was the hint dropped by Inspector James Sturdy yesterday. He declared that he was working on the question of how the liquor got to the Crescent Oil Company and the source. Despite the difficulty of tracing the liquor, the license inspector held out hopes that the men who took the bottles to the oil company, which were later found, might be apprehended.

Every additional detail learned appears only to deepen the mystery. William Hynes, who along with Edward Dornan met Asselstine outside of the building late Sunday evening, and was thus responsible for the watchman going upstairs, is reported as saying that Asselstine could not have gone up to the stock-room until fifteen minutes after 12 o'clock. This bears out the statement made by C. V. Scott, tinsmith, that he worked with Asselstine, over an automobile until midnight. Asselstine, on the other hand, said on Monday that he found the body at 10.30 o'clock and at the inquest swore that it was just 11.30 when he made the gruesome discovery.

MORE THAN 2,500 "CHIP IN" FOR GRIFFITH FUND

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—More than 2,500 envelopes, containing money it was announced recently, were collected at White Sox park during the game between the Chicago and Philadelphia Americans as contributions to the Clark Griffith fund for baseball equipment for the American troops in France.

The amount of money in the envelopes is not yet known, but it is said the contributions ranged all the way from 25 cents to $5. Every cent collected is to be expended for baseball, bats, masks and gloves for Pershing's [illegible].

Local Tribunals For Military Act

One Board For Every 7,500 of Population is Estimate of Government

WORK WELL ADVANCED

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—It is expected that the Governor-General will give his assent on Tuesday to the Military Service Act. It has been alleged that there has been unnecessary delay in bringing the measure into effect, but the officers of the Justice Department have been steadily at work for weeks making the necessary preparations for putting the measure into operation. Under section 6 the Minister of Justice is required to establish local tribunals at such places as he deems necessary. It is estimated that a local board could not within the time which may reasonably be allowed it, deal with more applications for exemption than would be anticipated to come from 500 men of the class first called out. Allowing one board for each 500 unmarried men between the ages of 20 and 30 it is estimated that there would be a board for every 7,500 of the population, or about 1,000 boards all over the country. The work of selecting the places at which these numerous boards are to be established is difficult and necessarily requires a considerable time. With the aid of a census branch, the officers of the Justice Department have this work sufficiently advanced to allow the Minister of Justice to issue his proclamation establishing the tribunals almost immediately after the act receives the royal assent.

Proceedings beyond the tribunals is, under the Act, to be provided for by regulations of the Governor-in-Council. This too, is well under way. The draft regulations and forms are ready for the printer. They will then require further revision and consideration, as well as some additions.

To assist the Minister a council, known as the Military Service Council is to be appointed to advise and assist in the administration and enforcement of the Act. This council will consist of five members. Among those mentioned for the council are O. M. Biggar, Edmonton; J. H. Moss, Toronto; Col. Hector Forrest, Col. H. A. C. Machin, Kenora, and the Deputy Minister of Justice.

Rev. Robt. Gay's Services Have Been Appreciated

The Rev. Robert Gay of the Parish of St. Monica, Toronto, who has been in charge of St. John's during the months of July and August, concluded his ministrations at the Litany service last night. Mr. Gay's services have been at the disposal of St. John's parishioners at any time, and they realize the great kindness and courtesy which he has shown during the past two months.

Mr. Gay has delivered a series of sermons on the subject of "Life after death" at the evening services, which had been carefully prepared, and proved instructive as well as interesting.

Mr. Gay also addressed words of kindly appreciation of the services of the choir, at the conclusion of last night's service, which were suitably acknowledged by Mr. R. J. Devey, organist and choirmaster.

LIEUT. DOW ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—A verdict of misadventure was returned by the jury investigating the death of Lieut. Allan Dow, of Ottawa, who was attached to the Flying Corps. Lieut. Dow's machine figured in a collision at Dartford, when a thousand feet up. He fell into the Thames and was drowned.

12,500 HARVEST HANDS HANDLED AT WINNIPEG

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—Up to midnight last night 12,537 harvest labourers had been handled by the railways to points west, of whom 6,286 were from points east; 2,991 were shipped from Winnipeg alone. There are 2,800 more labourers en route from the East.

CONSCRIPTION WILL BECOME LAW TO-MORROW

Government Appoints Advisory Council to Assist in Enforcing Act

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 27.—Mr. Justice Duff, acting an administrator in the absence in Toronto of the Governor-General, will give Royal assent to the Military Service "Conscription" Bill in the Senate to-morrow. The Government has appointed a council, headed by Deputy Minister of Justice Newcomb to act in an advisory capacity in the enforcement of the act. One thousand tribunals have yet to be established in the various parts of Canada before the first class under the Act are called out by proclamation.

Big "Ex." Is Open To-day

Governor-General Pressed the Button This Afternoon

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Perfect weather marked the opening by the Governor-General here to-day of the Canadian National Exhibition for 1917, and there was a decided impetus toward the expected one million attendance.

The Duke of Devonshire referred in eloquent language to the part Canada was playing in the war and congratulated the Exhibition officials on the splendid exposition. The welcoming address of the Exhibition directors congratulates His Excellency on the fervent patriotism of the House of Devonshire and its democratic tendencies. The Governor-General is accompanied only by two aides. There are no ladies in the party.

Disastrous Forest Fires Often From Trifling Causes

A man dropped a lighted match on the shore of Kalamalka Lake, British Columbia, on July 8th last. Within an hour a hot fire was racing through the underbrush. For three weeks after that there raged a series of forest fires, defying the organized efforts of hundreds of men.

wer ringed about with flames while

At one time twenty-six fire fighters were ringed about with flames while their relatives, shut off from them and helpless to aid, waited news in terrorized suspense. Only after severe suffering from exhaustion, thirst and hunger did the band of workers force their way through to safety.

That experience is a big price to pay for one person's foolish act in handling matches in a forest. The court fined the careless man $50, but that does not help the province to bear the enormous loss.

One lighted match dropped on one inch of inflammable ground expanded into fifteen miles of ruin.

In the Spruce Valley fire of British Columbia of the same month, eleven men lost their lives, most of them tortured to death as they struggled over the mountain tops. The fuse to that disaster was supplied by a small piece of lighted tobacco carelessly thrown on the grassy floor of a tent.

Ninety out of a hundred tragic holocausts could be avoided if every Canadian camper and lumberman kept vigilant watch on his own pair of hands, and every settler kept a tight rein on his clearing fires. It does not cost five cents or five minutes to put out a camp fire or a cigarette or a match, but it costs the people of Canada four or five million dollars a year to partially overtake the timber damage caused by runaway flames.

United States Is Spending $24,000,000 A Day On The War

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 26.—Coincident with the announcement today that an allied purchasing Board had been formed to handle all buying by the British, French and Russian governments, it became known that American's expenditures in the war had mounted to more than $24,000,000 every twenty-four hours.

The figures, which staggered the leaders in Congress, were contained in to-day's Treasury statement. Two-thirds of the great sum is represented by advances to the Allies. The United States has been spending daily during August for its own needs an average of $8,000,000. The Allies have been receiving an average daily allowance of $16,875,000, including cash already paid and the new Russian credit of $100,000,000, which will be paid soon. The total daily expenditure during August thus reaches $24,468,532.

Orders Received at New Glasgow to Discontinue Making Shrapnel.

HALIFAX, Aug. 27. — A despatch from New Glasgow states that orders have been received from Ottawa by the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. directing them to discontinue making shrapnel forgings. The last shift worked last night and the turning out of rough shells, for the present, at any rate, is a thing of the past. The munitions work at New Glasgow had been gradually decreasing for some time. The steel works and the eastern car plant are still offering steady employment to employes thrown out of work by the shutting down of the presses through the high wages paid for that special work will not rule. There is a general shortage of labour and it is believed that the men out of work can obtain employment elsewhere.

ITALIAN PRISONERS ARE INCREASED TO 23,000

"The aerial activity was very lively yesterday. Our Caproni machines, after having several times bombed the Chiapovano Valley crowded with enemy troops, flew low and engaged the infantry. Of the 235 airplanes which took part in the battle only one did not return.

"WE ARE DOING NICELY"

The battle between the Italians and the Austrians still rages, with the Austrians stubbornly retreating at many points, including the lower Carso. Numerous messages from the front received by Ministers indicate that the Italians are making swift strides toward victory. When asked to-day for an expression of his opinion of the results thus far achieved in the battle, Lieutenant-General Count Cadorna, Commander-in-chief of the Italian forces, smilingly replied:

"We are doing nicely, thank you."

The official communication on the result of the battle shows that the demoralization of the Austrian troops is in part due to the extraordinary aerial and artillery work of the Italians, which has destroyed not only the lines of communication, but has resulted in the burning of all the main food supply stations of the Austrians, who for the past week have been starving at many points between Tolmino and the sea. This also accounts for the unusual number of prisoners and wounded.

The total losses of the Austrians from all causes are reckoned at nearly 100,000, the most important of which, is the Carso region have not yet been officially announced. It is said that among the losses of the Austrians are many men of the famous Twelfth Division, popularly known as the "Iron Division."

Monte Santo, the side of which has been scarred by many struggles in the past two years, and which is known in both armies as the spot where many men have become heroes, was taken by the Second Army Corps under Gen. Capello, who crossed the Isonzo at Anhovo and swerved around the base of Monte Santo, thereby cutting the Austrian line of retreat and completely isolating the mountain, which for so long had been a thorn in the side of the Italians.

At Udine, Salvatore Barzilai, civil Governor of the Austrian territory occupied by the Italian army, when informed of the complete victory of the Italians, exclaimed: "At last our soldiers have achieved this magnificent thing they have freed our soil from the ancient enemy."

The final success of the Italians in winning their greatest battle in the war is thrilling the country as never before. Both the army and the civilians now see the result of two years' suffering and economic hardship. The victory came unexpectedly, notwithstanding the encouraging bulletins of the last fortnight. It is Gen. Cadorna's rule never to announce an event until certain that his troops are able to hold new positions.

AUSTRIAN COLLAPSE NEAR

Washington, Aug. 26.—(Special)—A despatch from Berne says that entire Austrian units, on the border of madness, have broken and fled under the Italian bombardment.

Increasingly large numbers of Austrian troops are being sent to the rear because these troops have been made practically insane under the intense and incessant gun-fire.

The Austrian War Office, it is said, has feverishly rushed reinforcements to the Italian front. These reinforcements are passing through Vienna, but it was not known whether they have been withdrawn from the Galician or the Roumanian front.

A despatch from Rome says that Germany and Austria will be obliged to withdraw troops from the Russian and the Roumanian front to arrest the progress of the Anglo-French and Italian armies in their respective drives. The despatch tells how naval guns placed at the mouth of the Isonzo River swept the Austrian positions with a terrific fire. Shells passed through and even beyond Miramar, which is less than two miles from Triest. The correspondent says that Italian batteries advanced in the open, unprotected and wholly without cover.

According to Austrian admissions, the Italians have attained their greatest success in the Anhove sector. It is admitted that Austria has lost Selo, and that the Italian troops have advanced beyond that place for a mile and a half.

Munition Workers Are Urged To Save

Production of War Material Necessarily of Temporary Duration

MR. IRISH'S STATEMENT

Mark H. Irish, director, Department of Labour, Imperial Munitions Board, has sent the following letter to the press:

"Will you permit me through your publication to remind the men and women still engaged in making munitions in Canada, that of necessity, and we may be grateful that this is so, the production of war material must be of temporary duration. Let me emphasize therefore, that prudence and common sense demand that the earnings derived from the labour in which munitions workers are now engaged should be not only for personal reasons, but for national reasons, conserved to the utmost extent. To squander wages at any time is imprudent, but to squander wages derived from passing employment at this time is to be untrue to the best interests of the country.

"I am led to make this public statement owing to some incidents that have come to my attention during the last fortnight. If these incidents are numerous, even in a modified form, the result must be deplorable, and while my faith in the Canadian people is such that I cannot believe the improvidence is widespread, I nevertheless, feel it my duty to make the above statement.

Let me illustrate. A woman who had been released from a munitions factory, owing to the termination of the factory's order came to my office in a frenzied state of mind proclaiming that she had to have further employment. Upon investigation this is what I found. She was the wife of a soldier at the front. He had left her in one room furnished in the scantiest way. She had only one child. The separation allowance from the Government amounted to $20.00 per month. Her husband had assigned $20.00 a month of his pay. She was also in receipt of $13.00 monthly from the Patriotic Fund. The woman had earned on an average $22.00 per week since October ,1916, in a munitions plant. With this revenue I was surprised that she should say that she was faced with immediate distress. Then I learned that she had rented a flat, furnished it, and this among the furniture, if furniture it can be called, was a player-piano valued at $600. Those who had sold these articles to her insisted that she meet the obligations she had entered into and hence her financial need.

This case is not the only one before me, nor is it an extreme instance of profligate expenditure.

If I had entertained the slightest idea, heretofore, that such use was being made of the large earnings from munitions I would have sounded a warning ere this, but it seems that only the curtailment of orders and the consequent release of the employes involved was to bring such conditions to the surface."

MYSTERY DEEPENS IN HAMILTON CASE

Body of Docter Exhumed For Purpose of Examining the Skull

HAMILTON, Aug. 26.—A report current yesterday that the body of Dr. Douglas G. MacRobbie had been exhumed for the purpose of clearing up some of the facts brought out at the inquest which had been overlooked at the post-mrotem, was confirmed by Dr. McNicol coroner to-day The coroner also stated that the medical evidence would be highly sensational. Dr. McNichol further said the re-examination would probably be confined to the skull of the dead man.

The police are apparently still much at sea. No motive for a crime if there was one, can be found. Careful enquiry shows that MacRobbie and the three men, Smith McAuliffe, and Scott, held as material witnesses, and who were in the room when MacRobbie was found dying, were all on the friendliest terms possible. If MacRobbie died a natural death the police cannot understand why someone on the premises did not volunteer a prompt and satisfactory explanation of what happened and the delay in summoning police and the doctors. The most significant point of the whole case so far is the evidence of a neighboring woman, who insists that she heard cries for help on the night in question.

That there might be developments along an entirely new line was the hint dropped by Inspector James Sturdy yesterday. He declared that he was working on the question of how the liquor got to the Crescent Oil Company and the source. Despite the difficulty of tracing the liquor, the license inspector held out hopes that the men who took the bottles to the oil company, which were later found, might be apprehended.

Every additional detail learned appears only to deepen the mystery. William Hynes, who along with Edward Dornan met Asselstine outside of the building late Sunday evening, and was thus responsible for the watchman going upstairs, is reported as saying that Asselstine could not have gone up to the stock-room until fifteen minutes after 12 o'clock. This bears out the statement made by C. V. Scott, tinsmith, that he worked with Asselstine, over an automobile until midnight. Asselstine, on the other hand, said on Monday that he found the body at 10.30 o'clock and at the inquest swore that it was just 11.30 when he made the gruesome discovery.

Washington, Aug. 26.—(Special)—A despatch from Berne says that entire Austrian units, on the border of madness, have broken and fled under the Italian bombardment.

Increasingly large numbers of Austrian troops are being sent to the rear because these troops have been made practically insane under the intense and incessant gun-fire.

The Austrian War Office, it is said, has feverishly rushed reinforcements to the Italian front. These reinforcements are passing through Vienna, but it was not known whether they have been withdrawn from the Galician or the Roumanian front.

A despatch from Rome says that Germany and Austria will be obliged to withdraw troops from the Russian and the Roumanian front to arrest the progress of the Anglo-French and Italian armies in their respective drives .The despatch tells how naval guns placed at the mouth of the Isonzo River swept the Austrian positions with a terrific fire. Shells passed through and even beyond Mirimar, which is less than two miles from Triest. The correspondent says that Italian batteries advanced in the open, unprotected and wholly without cover.

According to Austrian admissions, the Italians have attained their greatest success in he Anhove secter. It is admitted that Austria has lost Selo, and that the Italian roops have advanced beyond hat place for a mile and a half.

Munition Workers Are Urged To Save

Production of War Material Necessarily of Temporary Duration

MR. IRISH'S STATEMENT

Mark H. Irish, director, Department of Labour, Imperial Munitions Board, has sent the following letter to the press:

"Will you permit me through your publication to remind the men and women still engaged in making munitions in Canada, that of necessity, and we may be grateful that this is so, the production of war material must be of temporary duration. Let me emphasize therefore, that prudence and common sense demand that the earnings derived from the labour in which munitions workers are now engaged should be not only for personal reasons, but for national reasons, conserved to the utmost extent. To squander wages at any time is imprudent, but to squander wages derived from passing employment at this time is to be untrue to the best interests of the country.

"I am led to make this public statement owing to some incidents that have come to my attention during the last fortnight. If these incidents are numerous, even in a modified form, the result must be deplorable, and while my faith in the Canadian people is such that I cannot believe the improvidence is widespread, I nevertheless, feel it my duty to make the above statement.

Let me illustrate. A woman who had been released from a munitions factory, owing to the termination of the factory's order came to my office in a frenzied state of mind proclaiming that she had to have further employment. Upon investigation this is what I found. She was the wife of a soldier at the front. He had left her in one room furnished in the scantiest way. She had only one child. The separation allowance from the Government amounted to $20.00 per month. Her husband had assigned $20.00 a month of his pay. She was also in receipt of $13.00 monthly from the Patriotic Fund. The woman had earned on an average $22.00 per week since October ,1916, in a munitions plant. With this revenue I was surprised that she should say that she was faced with immediate distress. Then I learned that she had rented a flat, furnished it, and this among the furniture, if furniture it can be called, was a player-piano valued at $500. Those who had sold these articles to her insisted that she meet the obligations she had entered into and hence her financial need.

This case is not the only one before me, nor is it an extreme instance of profligate expenditure.

If I had entertained the slightest idea, heretofore, that such use was being made of the large earnings from munitions I would have sounded a warning ere this, but it seems that only the curtailment of orders and the consequent release of the employes involved was to bring such conditions to the surface."

MYSTERY DEEPENS IN HAMILTON CASE

Body of Doctor Exhumed For Purpose of Examining the Skull

HAMILTON, Aug. 26.—A report current yesterday that the body of Dr. Douglas G. MacRobbie had been exhumed for the purpose of clearing up some of the facts brought out at the inquest which had been overlooked at the post-mrotem, was confirmed by Dr. McNicol coroner to-day The coroner also stated that the medical evidence would be highly sensational. Dr. McNichol further said the re-examination would probably be confined to the skull of the dead man.

The police are apparently still much at sea. No motive for a crime if there was one, can be found. Careful enquiry shows that MacRobbie and the three men, Smith McAuliffe, and Scott, held as material witnesses, and who were in the room when MacRobbie was found dying, were all on the friendliest terms possible. If MacRobbie died a natural death the police cannot understand why someone on the premises did not volunteer a prompt and satisfactory explanation of what happened and the delay in summoning police and the doctors. The most significant point of the whole case so far is the evidence of a neighboring woman, who insists that she heard cries for help on the night in question.

That there might be developments along an entirely new line was the hint dropped by Inspector James Sturdy yesterday. He declared that he was working on the question of how the liquor got to the Crescent Oil Company and the source. Despite the difficulty of tracing the liquor, the license inspector held out hopes that the men who took the bottles to the oil company, which were later found, might be apprehended.

Every additional detail learned appears only to deepen the mystery. William Hynes, who along with Edward Dornan met Asselstine outside of the building late Sunday evening, and was thus responsible for the watchman going upstairs, is reported as saying that Asselstine could not have gone up to the stock-room until fifteen minutes after 12 o'clock. This bears out the statement made by C. V. Scott, tinsmith, that he worked with Asselstine, over an automobile until midnight. Asselstine, on the other hand, said on Monday that he found the body at 10.30 o'clock and at the inquest swore that it was just 11.30 when he made the gruesome discovery.

MORE THAN 2,000 "CHIP IN" FOR GRIFFITH FUND

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—More than 2,000 envelopes, containing money it was announced recently, were collected at White Sox park during the game between the Chicago and Philadelphia Americans as contributions to the Clark Griffith fund for baseball equipment for the American troops in France.

The amount of money in the envelopes is not yet known, but it is said the contributions ranged all the way from 25 cents to $5. Every cent collected is to be expended for baseball [illegible] and gloves for Pershing's [illegible].

Local Tribunals For Military Act

One Board For Every 7,500 of Population is Estimate of Government

WORK WELL ADVANCED

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—It is expected that the Governor-General will give his assent on Tuesday to the Military Service Act. It has been alleged that there has been unnecessary delay in bringing the measure into effect, but the officers of the Justice Department have been steadily at work for weeks making the necessary preparations for putting the measure into operation. Under section 6 the Minister of Justice is required to establish local tribunals at such places as he deems necessary. It is estimated that a local board could not within the time which may reasonably be allowed it, deal with more applications for exemption than would be anticipated to come from 500 men of the class first called out. Allowing one board for each 500 unmarried men between the ages of 20 and 30 it is estimated that there would be a board for every 7,500 of the population, or about 1,000 boards all over the country. The work of selecting the places at which these numerous boards are to be established is difficult and necessarily requires a considerable time. With the aid of a census branch, the officers of the Justice Department have this work sufficiently advanced to allow the Minister of Justice to issue his proclamation establishing the tribunals almost immediately after the act receives the royal asent.

Proceedings beyond the tribunals is, under the Act, to be provided for by regulations of the Governor-in-Council. This too, is well under way. The draft regulations and forms are ready for the printer. They will then require further revision and consideration, as well as some additions.

To assist the Minister a council, known as the Military Service Council is to be appointed to advise and assist in the administration and enforcement of the Act. This council will consist of five members. Among those mentioned for the council are O. M. Biggar, Edmonton; J. H. Moss, Toronto; Col. Hector Forrest, Col. H. A. C. Machin, Kenora, and the Deputy Minister of Justice.

Rev. Robt. Gay's Services Have Been Appreciated

The Rev. Robert Gay of the Parish of St. Monica, Toronto, who has been in charge of St. John's during the months of July and August, concluded his ministrations at the Litany service last night. Mr. Gay's services have been at the disposal of St. John's parishioners at any time, and they realize the great kindness and courtesy which he has shown during the past two months.

Mr. Gay has delivered a series of sermons on the subject of "Life after death" at the evening services, which had been carefully prepared, and proved instructive as well as interesting.

Mr. Gay also addressed words of kindly appreciation of the services of the choir, at the conclusion of last night's service, which were suitably acknowledged by Mr. R. J. Devey, organist and choirmaster.

LIEUT. DOW ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—A verdict of misadventure was returned by the jury investigating the death of Lieut. Allan Dow, of Ottawa, who was attached to the Flying Corps. Lieut. Dow's machine figured in a collision at Dartford, when a thousand feet up. He fell into the Thames and was drowned.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—Up to midnight last night 12,500 harvest labourers had been handled by the railways to points west, of whom 6,000 were from points east; 2,501 were shipped from Winnipeg alone. There are 2,000 more labourers en route from the East.

CONSCRIPTION WILL BECOME LAW TO-MORROW

Government Appoints Advisory Council to Assist in Enforcing Act

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 27.—Mr. Justice Duff, acting an administrator in the absence in Toronto of the Governor-General, will give Royal assent to the Military Service "Conscription" Bill in the Senate to-morrow. The Government has appointed a council, headed by Deputy Minister of Justice Newcomb to act in an advisory capacity in the enforcement of the act. One thousand tribunals have yet to be established in the various parts of Canada before the first class under the Act are called out by proclamation.

Big "Ex." Is Open To-day

Governor-General Pressed the Button This Afternoon

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Perfect weather marked the opening by the Governor-General here to-day of the Canadian National Exhibition for 1917, and there was a decided impetus toward the expected one million attendance.

The Duke of Devonshire referred in eloquent language to the part Canada was playing in the war and congratulated the Exhibition officials on the splendid exposition. The welcoming address of the Exhibition directors congratulates His Excellency on the fervent patriotism of the House of Devonshire and its democratic tendencies. The Governor-General is accompanied only by two aides. There are no ladies in the party.

Disastrous Forest Fires Often From Trifling Causes

A man dropped a lighted match on the shore of Kalamalka Lake, British Columbia, on July 8th last. Within an hour a hot fire was racing through the underbrush. For three weeks after that there raged a series of forest fires, defying the organized efforts of hundreds of men.

were ringed about with flames while

At one time twenty-six fire fighters were ringed about with flames while their relatives, shut off from them and helpless to aid, waited news in terrorized suspense. Only after severe suffering from exhaustion, thirst and hunger did the band of workers force their way through to safety.

That experience is a big price to pay for one person's foolish act in handling matches in a forest. The court fined the careless man $50, but that does not help the province to bear the enormous loss.

One lighted match dropped on one inch of inflammable ground expanded into fifteen miles of ruin.

In the Spruce Valley fire of British Columbia of the same month, eleven men lost their lives, most of them tortured to death as they struggled over the mountain tops. The fuse to that disaster was supplied by a small piece of lighted tobacco carelessly thrown on the grassy floor of a tent.

Ninety out of a hundred tragic holocausts could be avoided if every Canadian camper and fisherman kept vigilant watch on his own pair of hands, and every settler kept a tight rein on his clearing fires. It does not cost five cents or five minutes to put out a camp fire or a cigarette or a match, but it costs the people of Canada four or five million dollars a year to partially overtake the timber damage caused by runaway flames.

United States Is Spending $24,000,000 A Day On The War

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug 26. — Coincident with the announcement today that an allied purchasing Board had been formed to handle all buying by the British, French and Russian governments, it became known that American's expenditures in the war had mounted to more than $24,000,000 every twenty-four hours.

The figures, which staggered the leaders in Congress, were contained in to-day's Treasury statement. Two-thirds of the great sum is represented by advances to the Allies. The United States has been spending daily during August for its own needs an average of $8,000,000. The Allies have been receiving an average daily allowance of $16,278,000, including cash already paid and the new Russian credit of $150,000,000, which will be paid soon. The total daily expenditure during August thus reaches $24,428,000.

Munition Plants Stop Work in N.S.

Orders Received at New Glasgow to Discontinue Making Shrapnel.

HALIFAX, Aug. 27. — A despatch from New Glasgow states that orders have been received from Ottawa by the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. directing them to discontinue making shrapnel forgings. The last shift worked last night and the turning out of rough shells, for the present, at any rate, is a thing of the past. The munitions work at New Glasgow had been gradually decreasing for some time. The steel works and the eastern car plant are still offering steady employment to employes thrown out of work by the shutting down of the presses through the high wages paid for that special work will not rule. There is a general shortage of labour and it is believed that the men out of work can obtain employment elsewhere.

ITALIAN PRISONERS ARE INCREASED TO 23,000

"The aerial activity was very lively yesterday. Our Caproni machines, after having several times bombed the Chiapovano Valley crowded with enemy troops, flew low and engaged the infantry. Of the 233 airplanes which took part in the battle only one did not return.

"WE ARE DOING NICELY"

The battle between the Italians and the Austrians still rages, with the Austrians stubbornly retreating at many points, including the lower Carso. Numerous messages from the front received by Ministers indicate that the Italians are making swift strides toward victory. When asked to-day for an expression of his opinion of the results thus far achieved in the battle, Lieutenant-General Count Cadorna, Commander-in-chief of the Italian forces, smilingly replied:

"We are doing nicely, thank you."

The official communication on the result of the battle shows that the demoralization of the Austrian troops is in part due to the extraordinary aerial and artillery work of the Italians, which has destroyed not only the lines of communication, but has resulted in the burning of all the main food supply stations of the Austrians, who for the past week have been starving at many points between Tolmino and the sea. This also accounts for the unusual number of prisoners and wounded.

The total losses of the Austrians from all causes are reckoned at nearly 100,000, the most important of which, is the Carso region have not yet been officially announced. It is said that among the losses of the Austrians are many men of the famous Twelfth Division, popularly known as the "Iron Division."

Monte Santo, the side of which has been scarred by many struggles in the past two years, and which is known in both armies as the spot where many men have become heroes, was taken by the Second Army Corps under Gen. Capello, who crossed the Isonzo at Anhovo and swerved around the base of Monte Santo, thereby cutting the Austrian line of retreat and completely isolating the mountain, which for so long had been a thorn in the side of the Italians.

At Udine, Salvatore Barzilai, civil Governor of the Austrian territory occupied by the Italian army, when informed of the complete victory of the Italians, exclaimed: "At last our soldiers have achieved this magnificent thing they have freed our soil from the ancient enemy."

The final success of the Italians in winning their greatest battle in the war is thrilling the country as never before. Both the army and the civilians now see the result of two years' suffering and economic hardship. The victory came unexpectedly, notwithstanding the encouraging bulletins of the last fortnight. It is Gen. Cadorna's rule never to announce an event until certain that his troops are able to hold new positions.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—Up to midnight last night 12,587 harvest labourers had been handled by the railways to points west, of whom 6,256 were from points east; 2,991 were shipped from Winnipeg alone. There are 2,880 more labourers en route from the East.

Disastrous Forest Fires Often From Trifling Causes

A man dropped a lighted match on the shore of Kalamalka Lake, British Columbia, on July 9th last. Within an hour a hot fire was racing through the underbrush. For three weeks after that there raged a series of forest fires, defying the organized efforts of hundreds of men.

wer ringed about with flames while

At one time twenty-six fire fighters were ringed about with flames while their relatives, shut off from them and helpless to aid, waited news in terrorized suspense. Only after severe suffering from exhaustion, thirst and hunger did the band of workers force their way through to safety.

That experience is a big price to pay for one person's foolish act in handling matches in a forest. The court fined the careless man $50, but that does not help the province to bear the enormous loss.

One lighted match dropped on one inch of inflammable ground expanded into fifteen miles of ruin.

In the Spruce Valley fire of British Columbia of the same month, eleven men lost their lives, most of them tortured to death as they struggled over the mountain tops. The fuse to that disaster was supplied by a small piece of lighted tobacco carelessly thrown on the grassy floor of a tent.

Ninety out of a hundred tragic holocausts could be avoided if every Canadian camper and fisherman kept vigilant watch on his own pair of hands, and every settler kept a tight rein on his clearing fires. It does not cost five cents or five minutes to put out a camp fire or a cigarette or a match, but it costs the people of Canada four or five million dollars a year to partially overtake the timber damage caused by runaway flames.

United States Is Spending $24,000,000 A Day On The War

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 26.—Coincident with the announcement today that an allied purchasing Board had been formed to handle all buying by the British, French and Russian governments, it became known that American's expenditures in the war had mounted to more than $24,000,000 every twenty-four hours.

The figures, which staggered the leaders in Congress, were contained in to-day's Treasury statement. Two-thirds of the great sum is represented by advances to the Allies. The United States has been spending daily during August for its own needs an average of $8,088,882. The Allies have been receiving an average daily allowance of $16,373,000, including cash already paid and the new Russian credit of $100,000,000, which will be paid soon. The total daily expenditure during August thus reaches $24,462,882.

Orders Received at New Glasgow to Discontinue Making Shrapnel.

HALIFAX, Aug. 27. — A despatch from New Glasgow states that orders have been received from Ottawa by the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. directing them to discontinue making shrapnel forgings. The last shift worked last night and the turning out of rough shells, for the present, at any rate, is a thing of the past. The munitions work at New Glasgow had been gradually decreasing for some time. The steel works and the eastern car plant are still offering steady employment to employes thrown out of work by the shutting down of the presses through the high wages paid for that special work will not rule. There is a general shortage of labour and it is believed that the men out of work can obtain employment elsewhere.

ITALIAN PRISONERS ARE INCREASED TO 23,000

"The aerial activity was very lively yesterday. Our Caproni machines, after having several times bombed the Chiapovano Valley crowded with enemy troops, flew low and engaged the infantry. Of the 233 airplanes which took part in the battle only one did not return.

"WE ARE DOING NICELY"

The battle between the Italians and the Austrians still rages, with the Austrians subbornly retreating at many points, including the lower Carso. Numerous messages from the front received by Ministers indicate that the Italians are making swift strides toward victory. When asked to-day for an expression of his opinion of the results thus far achieved in the battle, Lieutenant-General Count Cadorna, Commander-in-chief of the Italian forces, smilingly replied:

"We are doing nicely, thank you."

The official communication on the result of the battle shows that the demoralization of the Austrian troops is in part due to the extraordinary aerial and artillery work of the Italians, which has destroyed not only the lines of communication, but has resulted in the burning of all the main food supply stations of the Austrians, who for the past week have been starving at many points between Tolmino and the sea. This also accounts for the unusual number of prisoners and wounded.

The total losses of the Austrians from all causes are reckoned at nearly 100,000, the most important of which, is the Carso region have not yet been officially announced. It is said that among the losses of the Austrians are many men of the famous Twelfth Division, popularly known as the "Iron Division."

Monte Santo, the side of which has been scarred by many struggles in the past two years, and which is known in both armies as the spot where many men have become heroes, was taken by the Second Army Corps under Gen. Capello, who crossed the Isonzo at Anhovo and swerved around the base of Monte Santo, thereby cutting the Austrian line of retreat and completely isolating the mountain, which for so long had been a thorn in the side of the Italians.

At Udine, Salvatore Barzilai, civil Governor of the Austrian territory occupied by the Italian army, when informed of the complete victory of the Italians, exclaimed: "At last our soldiers have achieved this magnificent thing they have freed our soil from the ancient enemy."

The final success of the Italians in winning their greatest battle in the war is thrilling the country as never before. Both the army and the civilians now see the results of two years' suffering and economic hardship. The victory came unexpectedly, notwithstanding the encouraging bulletins of the last fortnight. It is Gen. Cadorna's rule never to announce an event until certain that his troops are able to hold new positions.

AUSTRIAN COLLAPSE NEAR

(Washington, Aug. 26.—(Special)—A despatch from Berne says that entire Austrian units, on the border of madness, have broken and fled under the Italian bombardment.

Increasingly large numbers of Austrian troops are being sent to the rear because these troops have been made practically insane under the intense and incessant gun-fire.

The Austrian War Office, it is said, has feverishly rushed reinforcements to the Italian front. These reinforcements are passing through Vienna, but it was not known whether they have been withdrawn from the Galician or the Roumanian front.

A despatch from Rome says that Germany and Austria will be obliged to withdraw troops from the Russian and the Roumanian front to arrest the progress of the Anglo-French and Italian armies in their respective drives .The despatch tells how naval guns placed at the mouth of the Isonzo River swept the Austrian positions with a terrific fire. Shells passed through and even beyond Miramar, which is less than two miles from Triest. The correspondent says that Italian batteries advanced in the open, unprotected and wholly without cover.

According to Austrian admissions, the Italians have attained their greatest success in he Anhove sector. It is admitted that Austria has lost Selo, and that the Italian troops have advanced beyond hat place for a mile and a half.

Munition Workers Are Urged To Save

Production of War Material Necessarily of Temporary Duration

MR. IRISH'S STATEMENT

Mark H. Irish, director, Department of Labour, Imperial Munitions Board, has sent the following letter to the press:

"Will you permit me through your publication to remind the men and women still engaged in making munitions in Canada, that of necessity, and we may be grateful that this is so, the production of war material must be of temporary duration. Let me emphasize therefore, that prudence and common sense demand that the earnings derived from the labour in which munitions workers are now engaged should be not only for personal reasons, but for national reasons, conserved to the utmost extent. To squander wages at any time is imprudent, but to squander wages derived from passing employment at this time is to be untrue to the best interests of the country.

"I am led to make this public statement owing to some incidents that have come to my attention during the last fortnight. If these incidents are numerous, even in a modified form, the result must be deplorable, and while my faith in the Canadian people is such that I cannot believe the improvidence is widespread, I nevertheless, feel it my duty to make the above statement.

Let me illustrate. A woman who had been released from a munitions factory, owing to the termination of the factory's order came to my office in a frenzied state of mind proclaiming that she had to have further employment. Upon investigation this is what I found. She was the wife of a soldier at the front. He had left her in one room furnished in the scantiest way. She had only one child. The separation allowance from the Government amounted to $20.00 per month. Her husband had assigned $20.00 a month of his pay. She was also in receipt of $13.00 monthly from the Patriotic Fund. The woman had earned on an average $22.00 per week since October ,1916, in a munitions plant. With this revenue I was surprised that she should say that she was faced with immediate distress. Then I learned that she had rented a flat, furnished it, and this among the furniture, if furniture it can be called, was a player-piano valued at $600. Those who had sold these articles to her insisted that she meet the obligations she had entered into and hence her financial need.

This case is not the only one before me, nor is it an extreme instance of profligate expenditure.

If I had entertained the slightest idea, heretofore, that such use was being made of the large earnings from munitions I would have sounded a warning ere this; but it seems that only the curtailment of orders and the consequent release of the employes involved was to bring such conditions to the surface."

MYSTERY DEEPENS IN HAMILTON CASE

Body of Doctor Exhumed For Purpose of Examining the Skull

HAMILTON, Aug. 26.—A report current yesterday that the body of Dr. Douglas G. MacRobbie had been exhumed for the purpose of elearing up some of the facts brought out at the inquest which had been overlooked at the post-mrotem, was confirmed by Dr. McNicol coroner to-day The coroner also stated that the medical evidence would be highly sensational. Dr. McNichol further said the re-examination would probably be confined to the skull of the dead man.

The police are apparently still much at sea. No motive for a crime if there was one, can be found. Careful enquiry shows that MacRobbie and the three men, Smith McAuliffe, and Scott, held as material witnesses, and who were in the room when MacRobbie was found dying, were all on the friendliest terms possible. If MacRobbie died a natural death the police cannot understand why someone on the premises did not volunteer a prompt and satisfactory explanation of what happened and the delay in summoning police and the doctors. The most significant point of the whole case so far is the evidence of a neighboring woman, who insists that she heard cries for help on the night in question.

That there might be developments along an entirely new line was the hint dropped by Inspector James Sturdy yesterday. He declared that he was working on the question of how the liquor got to the Crescent Oil Company and the source. Despite the difficulty of tracing the liquor, the license inspector held out hopes that the men who took the bottles to the oil company, which were later found, might be apprehended.

Every additional detail learned appears only to deepen the mystery. William Hynes, who along with Edward Dornan met Asselstine outside of the building late Sunday evening, and was thus responsible for the watchman going upstairs, is reported as saying that Asselstine could not have gone up to the stock-room until fifteen minutes after 12 o'clock. This bears out the statement made by C. V. Scott, tinsmith, that he worked with Asselstine, over an automobile until midnight. Asselstine, on the other hand, said on Monday that he found the body at 10.30 o'clock and at the inquest swore that it was just 11.30 when he made the gruesome discovery.

Local Tribunals For Military Act

One Board For Every 7,500 of Population is Estimate of Government

WORK WELL ADVANCED

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—It is expected that the Governor-General will give his assent on Tuesday to the Military Service Act. It has been alleged that there has been unnecessary delay in bringing the measure into effect, but the officers of the Justice Department have been steadily at work for weeks making the necessary preparations for putting the measure into operation. Under section 6 the Minister of Justice is required to establish local tribunals at such places as he deems necessary. It is estimated that a local board could not within the time which may reasonably be allowed it, deal with more applications for exemption than would be anticipated to come from 500 men of the class first called out. Allowing one board for each 500 unmarried men between the ages of 20 and 30 it is estimated that there would be a board for every 7,500 of the population, or about 1,000 boards all over the country. The work of selecting the places at which these numerous boards are to be established is difficult and necessarily requires a considerable time. With the aid of a census branch, the officers of the Justice Department have this work sufficiently advanced to allow the Minister of Justice to issue his proclamation establishing the tribunals almost immediately after the act receives the royal assent.

Proceedings beyond the tribunals is, under the Act, to be provided for by regulations of the Governor-in-Council. This too, is well under way. The draft regulations and forms are ready for the printer. They will then require further revision and consideration, as well as some additions.

To assist the Minister a council, known as the Military Service Council is to be appointed to advise and assist in the administration and enforcement of the Act. This council will consist of five members. Among those mentioned for the council are O. M. Biggar, Edmonton; J. H. Moss, Toronto; Col. Hector Prevost, Col. H. A. C. Machin, Kenora, and the Deputy Minister of Justice.

Rev. Robt. Gay's Services Have Been Appreciated

The Rev. Robert Gay of the Parish of St. Monica, Toronto, who has been in charge of St. John's during the months of July and August, concluded his ministrations at the Litany service last night. Mr. Gay's services have been at the disposal of St. John's parishioners at any time, and they realize the great kindness and courtesy which he has shown during the past two months.

Mr. Gay has delivered a series of sermons on the subject of "Life after death" at the evening services, which had been carefully prepared, and proved instructive as well as interesting.

Mr. Gay also addressed words of kindly appreciation of the services of the choir, at the conclusion of last night's service, which were suitably acknowledged by Mr. R. J. Devey, organist and choirmaster.

LIEUT. DOW ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—A verdict of misadventure was returned by the jury investigating the death of Lieut. Allan Dow, of Ottawa, who was attached to the Flying Corps. Lieut. Dow's machine figured in a collision at Dartford, when a thousand feet up. He fell into the Thames and was drowned.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—Up to midnight last night 12,507 harvest labourers had been handled by the railways to points west, of whom 6,206 were from points east; 2,991 were shipped from Winnipeg alone. There are 2,000 more labourers en route from the East.

CONSCRIPTION WILL BECOME LAW TO-MORROW

Government Appoints Advisory Council to Assist in Enforcing Act

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 27.—Mr. Justice Duff, acting an administrator in the absence in Toronto of the Governor-General, will give Royal assent to the Military Service "Conscription" Bill in the Senate to-morrow. The Government has appointed a council, headed by Deputy Minister of Justice Newcomb to act in an advisory capacity in the enforcement of the act. One thousand tribunals have yet to be established in the various parts of Canada before the first class under the Act are called out by proclamation.

Big "Ex." Is Open To-day

Governor-General Pressed the Button This Afternoon

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Perfect weather marked the opening by the Governor-General here to-day of the Canadian National Exhibition for 1917, and there was a decided impetus toward the expected one million attendance.

The Duke of Devonshire referred in eloquent language to the part Canada was playing in the war and congratulated the Exhibition officials on the splendid exposition. The welcoming address of the Exhibition directors congratulates His Excellency on the fervent patriotism of the House of Devonshire and its democratic tendencies. The Governor-General is accompanied only by two aides. There are no ladies in the party.

INCREASE FOR SOLDIERS

Pay of the Imperial Fighting Men Is Soon to Be Raised.

The London Daily News' lobby correspondent states: The War Cabinet have now before them a scheme for the increase of the pay of the infantry in the army. It has been recognized for some time past that the pay of the rank and file of the infantry ought to be increased, and substantially in the case of men who have been in active service for two years. It is understood that the Cabinet is determined on an increase.

It has already been stated in Parliament that an increase in the pay of the lower deck in the navy is being carefully considered.

WEDDING BELLS

EDGAR—DUGAN.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's church, Saturday afternoon, Aug. 25, by the Rev. Robt. Gay, when Miss Margaret Francis Dugan was united in marriage to Mr. John Edgar of Peterborough. The bride, who was unattended, looked charming in a travelling suit of silk poplin and hat to match. The happy couple left on the 4 o'clock C.P.R. train for Toronto, Niagara, Buffalo and western points and on their return will reside in Peterborough.

OBITUARY

LEO KENNALEY

Leo Kennaley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Kennaley, 466 Patterson St., died yesterday at noon at St. Joseph's Hospital after undergoing a serious operation on Friday.

Deceased was born in Campbellford. Always a bright and diligent scholar he had been, although but 19 years of age, made his mark at St. Michael's College, Toronto, of which he was a student and where he was a general favourite.

There are left of the immediate family to mourn his death, besides his parents, three brothers, Thomas, Charles, and Orril and three sisters, Winnifred, Lorette and Mary, all residing at home.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9.30 to St. Peter's cemetery. The service at the church will be held at 9 o'clock.

SAMUEL CLEGG.

Mr. Samuel Clegg, who has been in failing health since last January, took seriously worse Tuesday afternoon and gradually sank until he passed very peacefully away Saturday evening at 8.40 o'clock.

The late Mr. Clegg was a life-long resident of Peterborough. He was born fifty-seven years ago, his parents being Edward and Anne Clegg. He grew up in this city, attended its schools and became an active, worthy and useful citizen. He was a Past Grand of the I.O.O.F. No. 111, and a member of the Hall Trust for many years.

Mr. Clegg was a faithful, trusted and valued member of the Trent Valley Canal staff for over twenty years, and during the past three years he conducted a furniture business on George street. In politics he was a staunch Liberal and in religion a Methodist having been identified with Charlotte street Methodist church for many years.

He was a good citizen, a kind and generous friend, a companion as well as a loving father to his children, and a devoted husband. He leaves behind him very many friends, who will miss him, his sisters and brothers, Charles, Abram and Col. E. B. Clegg—the late Richard Clegg, formerly of Wingham, was also a brother—and a broken-hearted family, consisting of his devoted wife and two children, Ruby at home and Lieut. Bruce Clegg, R.N.V.R., who is on leave of absence from England.

It is hoped that Col. E. B. Clegg, who has been overseas for over three years, and who is now somewhere between Halifax and this city, will arrive in time for the funeral, which takes place to-morrow afternoon at 3.00 o'clock from Mr. Clegg's late residence, 295 Stewart street. The funeral will be under the auspices of the I.O.O.F.

POSITIONS CONSOLIDATED

Special to The Examiner:

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 27.— During the past few days the Canadians in front of Lens have had a period comparative quiet and have been able to consolidate positions recently captured with little retaliation from the enemy and with surprisingly little loss. Posts have been pushed out at favourable points and where trenches could be connected up to shorten the front this has been done. The general result is that our men hold a compact line which on that part of the front west of Lens is about six hundred yards from the burned out area in the city. During the clearing up operations our men have destroyed three more machine guns and captured five making a total of machine guns taken since August 15 forty-three. Twenty-one trench mortars also are among the spoils of war.

Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. King, organist of Trinity Methodist church have returned to town after a two weeks' visit to Goderich. Mr. and Mrs. King are now prepared to receive pupils in piano, organ and singing. For terms, etc., apply 364 Simcoe street.

Miss Georgie O'Brien, of Saskatoon, has left for home, after spending three months in the city. Miss Etta Hill has accompanied her as far as Toronto and will spend two weeks in that city.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams, of Winnipeg, was in the city over Sunday on his way from Stoney Lake, where he was spending a few days with his father, Mr. J. B. McWilliams.

Miss Lenore Lyle is visiting Miss Nina Gibbs, Hamilton.

Mr. Henry Walker has returned after spending a week in Montreal and Toronto.

The engagement is announced of Elizabeth Kennedy, youngest daughter of the late George K. and Mrs. Sackville of Bewdley, Ontario, to Mr. Roy Park Thompson of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Monitor, Alberta, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson, Thedford, Ontario, the marriage to take place in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett and daughter, Hazel, of Midland, Mrs. Dicks and daughter, Mabel of Cornwall, Ont., motored from Midland to Peterborough, and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Quinlan, 718 Water street.

Mrs. W. C. Moore and Miss Clare Moore returned to Toronto this morning after spending the past week with Mrs. T. W. Meredith.

Miss Audrey Meredith left for Toronto this morning to visit her cousin, Clare Moore on Carlow Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McWilliams and little daughter, May, left on Saturday afternoon for a two weeks' motor trip to Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford and Rochester.

Mr. Sherlock Thompson of Toronto is registered at the Empress and is on his way to assist with farming operations in Otonabee.

Mrs. Douglas Clarkson, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Crane, Weller street, left to-day for her home in Winnipeg.

Miss Agnes Johnson of Gananoque was the guest of Mrs. John Crane, over the week-end.

Cadet Kenneth Crane, R.F.C., Camp Hoare, was home over Sunday.

Mr. Ross, Collector of Customs, Picton is in the city to-day.

Mrs. (Rev.) C. E. Cragg and Miss Mabel Clarry, of Millbrook left this morning for the West. Mrs. Cragg has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Might, George street, for the past six weeks, and has gone to her new home in Lethbridge, Alta., where Mr. Cragg is pastor of the first Methodist Church.

Major Cameron spent the week-end at Stoney Lake with Mr. and Mrs. Killaley.

The Misses Hall, Charlotte street, have opened their cottage at Buckhorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Millar, Brock street, returned home to-day from a two weeks' visit with Mrs. Stainger, Stoney Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix Brownscombe have closed their summer home at Stoney Lake and returned this morning to the city.

Mrs. Richard Clegg, Wingham, is in the city, called here by the death of Mr. Samuel Clegg.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Morris motored to Orillia on Saturday, where they spent the week-end.

Messrs. Alan Stevenson, Doc. Young and Bob Hayes left on Saturday for a paddling trip to Mississauga Creek.

After an absence of thirty-five years Mr. Dave Fitzgerald, an old Peterborough boy, has returned to the city to renew old acquaintances, and is the guest of his brother, Mr. James Fitzgerald, 206 Smith street. Since leaving Peterborough Mr. Fitzgerald has travelled for a prominent smelting and refining company in New York, where his field of activities has laid between London and American cities. Latterly, however, he has resided in Butte, Montana. Mr. Fitzgerald is much impressed by the strides his little home town has made since he left for the States.

Mr. Short Conway is spending his vacation at Bay of Quinte.

Mr. and Mrs. John Comstock have returned from a week's vacation at Buckhorn.

Miss Lillian Parsons of Toronto is the guest of her cousin, Miss Pearl Rehill, for a few days.

Noon Raid On House Said To Be Disorderly

During the noon hour to-day Detective Newhall and P. C. Dainnard raided the rooms over the grocery store at 359 George street and took into custody Mrs. M. Brough, who is held on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, and also two young men who appear as frequenters. A young girl of 16 years completed the quartette, but Chief Thompson stated this afternoon that she would probably be liberated. The place has been under the eye of the police for some time, and when they entered the rooms to-day they found the principals with a supply of Wilson's invalid stout on the table.

GERMANY'S BEST SINGERS EXEMPTED FROM WAR DUTIES

Government considers People Need Relaxation Afforded by Music. American Pianist Tells of Better Concerts.

Edwin Hughes, the American pianist who lived in Germany for two years following the outbreak of war discussing the course that musical affairs took, given an interesting view of the attitude of the German Government in its recognition of the people's need for music.

"Then the mailed glove was thrown down at the beginning of August, 1914," said Mr. Hughes, "all Germany had been looking forward to what was to be the most active musical season in the history of the country."

Apparently the musicians in Germany were little prepared for the storm which was to break. With the sudden call to arms, musical activities came to an abrupt halt and many musical undertakings were nipped in the bud.

Lull in Musical Events After the First Shock.

"After the tense excitement of the first weeks came the reaction," Mr. Hughes continued, "and then followed the period of serious consideration among the members of the musical fraternity as to what the future might hold in store for those of their number who were not called into active service."

Mr. Hughes then went on to tell of the results of the first shock which were manifested in the musical profession by a brief lull in concerts, a reduction in admission rates, etc. Gradually, however, prices were raised to normal again, and as the war wore on, and became more or less of an everyday affair, the attendance at concerts and theatres increased to that of normal times. Mr. Hughes makes the statement that during the season of 1915-1916, the Munich theatres were better attended than during any season for many years past.

Early Months Filled With Charity Concerts.

"During the first two months of the musical season of 1914-1915 the platform of the concert halls were given up entirely to benefit concerts for the Red Cross or other charitable purposes connected with the conduct of the war, and it can truly be said that no one class or profession in civil life gave more cheerfully and more generously than did the musicians who played and sang at these charity concerts."

Government Co-operation to Maintain High Musical Standards.

Mr. Hughes' accounts of government co-operation in the maintenance of music during war times indicate an appreciation of its importance. The German government has been very lenient in exempting professional musicians from war service. Realizing that an opera house robbed of its best tenors, baritones and basses would simply have to shut its doors, the most needed male singers were granted exemption from conscription. The government has extended this system to orchestras and even to privately owned theatres, knowing that to take away all the young men from the musical and theatrical profession would be to make music and playgiving impossible.

What the German government considers of most importance in this connection is that the elimination of music would take from the people at large one of their most needed forms of amusement and relaxation at a time when nerves are spanned to the utmost, and when relaxation and a chance to forget, for an evening at least some of the horrors of the times are urgent necessities.

Mr. Hughes' observations have led him to make the statement that there were fewer but better concerts recently than before the war broke out.

Concert Field Vastly Improved

"The half-baked aspirants for podium honours," he went on to say, "over anxious to offer their unripe wares to a patient public (the genius thrives abroad just as it does in New York) were automatically eliminated. Only artists of standing who were pretty sure of a paying audience could afford the economic risk of concert giving, with the result that the general quality improved, and, on account of this fact and of the lower number of concerts, audiences were larger than in pre-war times."

Berlin Admits A Number Of Defeats

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via London, August 27.—"Local advantages were gained by British troops around Kalakoff and Cologne Farms, and French assaults forced retirements around Beaumont, Verdun sector, to-day's official statement admitted. "Northwest of Lens violent enemy attacks broke down," the War Office asserted. "On the eastern bank of the Meuse there was desperate fighting in which we were pressed out of Beaumont, Fosses and the Chaume works. The French recaptured the village and the woods."

HAVRE, August 27.—The Belgian Government has addressed a long and earnest protest to Allied and neutral governments against German violations of international and moral law in the redistricting of Belgium so that it will have two governments and two capitals instead of one, and in deporting or arresting of Belgian official who resigned their positions rather than continue in office under the new regime.

WASHINGTON, August 27.—Evidence which made American Government officials believe Germany had planned to war on the United States after defeating France and England, is in the hands of the Administration, the State Department announced to-day.

PETROGRAD, August 27.—On the Black Sea front to-day's official War Office statement said, troops co-operating with the Russian fleet raided Ordu blowing up eleven motor boats and seven feluccas.

VERDUN A FIELD OF WASTED STEEL

The enormous quantity of ammunition which has been used by both sides at Verdun has strewn the field with steel and lead to such an extent some statisticians are figuring on the value of the land as a result. Thousands of shells and bullets of all kinds are imbedded in the earth, and a correspondens of the Swedish periodical Industritidnin Norden who went over the ground contributes an interesting article on the subject. While no exact figures are available as to the number of shells and bullets actually fired in this great battle, this correspondent figures the amount of steel around Verdun is enormous and will be a fruitful sources of industry after the war.

It is estimated that a million shells a week have been fired by both sides since the beginning of the German offensive at Verdun. The correspondent of the Industritidnin Norden, therefore, figures 1,850,000 tons of steel is lying at Verdun. To transport this immense quantity of steel 185,000 freight cars would be required.

He says the entire field is like one great coating of metal. Recently several engineers made an inspection of the ground and they were amazed at the wealth of steel which is lying there and imbedded in the earth. The land has become so valuable as a result that offers have already been made for its purchase, but thus far none of the offers has been accepted.

HEROIC MOTHER IS TOLD OF HER SON'S DEATH

New York, August. 25.

In a delayed message, Mrs. Sarah Burke, of No. 1,366 St. John's place, Brooklyn, has received word of the death of her son, Gunner William Sylvang Burke, who went to the front in France with one of the artillery outfits of the Canadian expeditionary force. He was wounded in action July 27, and a message telling of his injury reached here August 1. The day before the message arrived at its destination he died.

Gunner Burke was one of the first to enlist, entering the service in 1914. He was thirty-five years old and was born at Amherst, Nova Scotia.

A brother, Thomas Burke, has enlisted with the Canadian Mounted Rifles, and is training at Hamilton, Ontario. In a letter to his mother he wrote:—

"I am more glad than ever now that I enlisted. Just as soon as I heard of Will's death I thought I could hardly wait to get to France."

A cousin of the two men, Arthur Burke, has also died in action.

"I have given my son and I am not sorry," said Mrs. Burke, "but it is very hard. Since he went from us to France one of his sisters has died. Thomas, though, is ready to take his place. If it becomes necessary I will give one more of my boys to take Thomas' place."

FUNERAL TO-MORROW MORNING.

The funeral of the late Leo. Kennaley will take place on Tuesday, (to-morrow) morning at 9 o'clock, leaving the family residence at 466 Patterson street and proceeding to St. Peter's Cathedral, where requiem mass will be celebrated. Interment at St. Peter's cemetery.

BRITISH FORCES GAIN NEAR LANGEMARCK

CLOSURE APPLIED IN HOUSE

ALLIES WINNING WEST AND SOUTH, UNITY OF ACTION NOW ATTAINED BY CO-ORDINATION ON ALL FRONTS

French Victory Over Prussians North of Verdun Has Greatest Moral Effect, While Advances of British in Flanders and of Canadians in Lens Are of Strategic Value, and Progress of Italians Alarms Vienna.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—To rightly appreciate the present situation in the war for civilization military men here consider the entire co-ordinated action of the Allies as a whole. They say that one should not envisage the great conflict as a series of little wars conducted in different parts of the world, with different objects on the part of the combatants and perhaps with the possibility of separate results. The titanic struggle must be looked at as a whole. All its parts are co-related though fought out on different fields.

Such is the view of General Frederick B. Maurice, Director of the British War Intelligence Office. Such unity of action has been attained now. For instance, the battles in Flanders, at Lens, north of Verdun, on the Carso and in Roumania all have a distinct relation to each other. On all these fronts the Central Powers have met defeats during the week, the most important from a strategic point of view being those north and south of Lille in the west, while unquestionably the French victories at Verdun will have the greatest moral effect on the Prussian armies and the continuation of the Italian drive toward Trieste is most menacing for the Austrians.

Verdun Typical of Victory.

First of these comes Verdun because the French victory there for the second time within a month emphasizes the weakness of the Prussians. Verdun was the prize for which the Crown Prince sacrificed half a million men. His Imperial father was so certain of capturing the place that he had issued an order to the artillery to be very careful and spare the principal square of the city because it was there he wished to review his victorious troops.

Within four hours the French had regained ground that it took the Prussians months to conquer. On a front of fifteen miles from Avocourt to Bezonvaux they advanced with ease for more than a mile, part of the famous Hill 304 and the Mort Homme passing definitely into their hands, together with the Bois de Corbeaux and the Bois de Comieres. Next day they went forward again half a mile further down the Meuse Valley, capturing Regneville on the west bank and Samogneux on the east. Yesterday they took the rest of Hill 304 and the Mort Homme. To-day they reach half a mile north of Hill 304. They are close to Bethincourt and their line crosses the Meuse just south of the Forges Brook.

Working Into Lens.

The capture of Lens, while it will have a certain moral effect owing to the tenacity with which the Prussians have held it and the length of time they have been there is more important strategically not only as the great coal centre of France, but the point from which radiate several trunk line railways that have been of great service to the Prussians in supplying their front. This task is left to the Canadians, who are fighting in the city from street to street. Every house is a fortress, all the cellars are connected and tunnels radiating in all directions permit quick concentration of troops, so that the final subjucation of the Prussians there may take several more days, but the end is none the less certain.

In the Ypres sector the British advance was purely of strategic value as being part of the great flanking operations north of Lille, corresponding to the progress at Lens on the south. Here the fighting is more open than at any time in two years. The British with their artillery and tanks have levelled to the dust all the elaborate trench system on the plan of Flanders between the French frontier and the Dixmude-Thorout railway, and the Prussians are fighting in shell holes. Farm houses have been turned into formidable concrete forts and many of them have been extended underground.

Success in the Carso.

Despatches from Rome published here this afternoon state that the Italian flag has been flying since yesterday from the summit of Monte Santo. This completes the conquest of the range north of Gorizia begun by the capture of Mount Kuk on May 17. Further north the Italians are well across the Isonzo almost as far as the Idria River and have occupied Vrh, east of Canale, between Mount Kuk and Auzza, and the village of Selo on the Carso front. Their advance in the south-east is said to have spread panic among the Austrians who are reported to be preparing to evacuate Trieste. This, however, is rather premature. More imoprtant than the territory gained this week are the 20,000 Austrian soldiers and sixty guns captured by General Cadorna.

Ther seems to be undue nervousness in some quarters over the Russian retirement in the north from Tukkum to Schlok, on the River Aa, only twenty-three miles from Riga. Petrograd is evidently fearful that Riga may be captured and a drive made toward the capital itself. But Petrograd is 320 miles from Riga and it would be no easy task to move an army that distance, even if unopposed. The well informed correspondent of the Daily News in Petrograd discussing the objects of the Prussian offensive on the Riga front to-day says "so far there are no signs that even the smallest of these objects will be attained."

On the other end of the long Russian line, in Moldavia, there has been a considerable stiffening of the allied forces. The Russians have successfully repulsed all attacks, and the Roumanians, fighting for what is left of their country, have displayed so much valour as to draw a congratulatory telegram from King George. They are fighting in the west around Ocna, trying to prevent the Austro-Prussians from reaching the railroad that runs along the Sereth Valley and thus far they have succeeded.

BOTTOM FELL OUT OF THE HOG MARKET

Packers Now Quote $17 Per Cwt. But the Drovers Won't Sell

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Union Stock Yards—Receipts Monday, 235 cars, with 4,841 cattle, 356 calves, 1,587 hogs, and 1,525 sheep.

East Buffalo, Aug. 27.—Cattle—receipts, 5,700; good steady, common low. Prime steers, $13.50 to $14; shipping steers, $12.50 to $13.25; butchers, $9 to $11.50; yearlings, $9.25 to $13.50; heifers, $7 to $10.50; cows, $5 to $9.60; bulls, $6 to $9.25; stockers and feeders, $5 to 8; fresh cows and springers, strong, $60 to $130.

Veals—receipts, 1,500; weak, $7 to $16.25, few, $16.50.

Hogs—receipts, 1,400; strong. Heavy, $17.75 to $17.85; mixed $17.50 to $17.80; yorkers, $17.25 to $17.65; light yorkers, $16 to $16.50; pigs, $15.50 to $16; roughs, $16.40 to $16.60; stags, $13 to $14.

Sheep and lambs—receipts, 2,400; active and steady; lambs, $10 to $16; few $16.25; others unchanged.

A distinct feature in to-day's market was the drop in the price of hogs to $17. Last Tuesday's quotation was $19.25 to $19.50 fed and watered. A secondary feature was the refusal of drovers to do business at the $17 figure, although similar drops in hog prices took place on the Chicago, Buffalo and Montreal markets last week. During the first few hours of trading to-day no sales had been reported, owners holding out for higher bids.

There was a very heavy run of all stocks this morning, receipts being almost a record for the warm weather season. Contrary to the usual condition a rather good supply of choice cattle experienced somewhat of a weak demand in the forepart of the day. In fact, buyers on all sides seemed more apathetic than usual and as a result prices were hardly firm, although good.

Sheep and lambs held steady between $14.75 and $15.25, the supply being up to a good average for a Monday, with prices firm to strong.

Choice calves were extremely rare with the demand strong. Likewise all small meats which experienced sharp demands.

Butchers, abundantly available, were without demand.

Stockers brought a top price of $8.50 and feeders $8.85 according to J. B. Shields, who sold ten loads at this figure at the beginning of the market.

MANITOBA WHEAT EASIER

There were three notable variations in cash quotations in to-day's market. Manitoba wheat, No. 3, is quoted at $2.32 1-2, as against $2.35 1-2 on Saturday, and No. 4, $2.24 as against $2.32 1-2 on Saturday. These are the most extreme softening of prices seen in some time, and serve as a stiff reaction against Saturday's attempt at recovery, following a previous slight drop.

Manitoba oats, No. 2 in store, Fort William, is quoted at 63 5-8c, 1 5-8c doubt, to the scarcity of oats at the bay ports.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.40; No. 2 northern, $2.40; nominal, store; No. 3, $2.32 1-2c, Fort William; No 4, $2.24, nominal.

Many Rumours In Regard To Cabinet

No British Columbia Members Will Be Included, a Winnipeg Report States—Complete Shake-up in the Borden Cabinet This Week.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 27.—Western Liberal leaders who have been in conference here for several days have gone to their homes farther west, and Sir R. L. Borden on Monday will be in possession of the results of their deliberations.

It was an earnest discussion that was held here, and those who were invited to be present, outside of the ones who had been at Ottawa, gave valuable assistance. Conditions on which Westerners will enter a National Government and those Easterners who were approved as colleagues were agreed to unanimously and a wire sent to the Premier at Ottawa carried the results of the deliberations.

Carvell is to be included, but not Powell or anyone from British Columbia. Conscription will not be enforced immediately if the Western men join the Cabinet, but will be tried out before many weeks go by. Premier Norris was not at any of the sessions, but he was closely in touch with the deliberations from day to day. Hon. A. B. Hudson was also a close attendant.

Will Be Announced Shortly.

That the reconstruction of the Cabinet along National Government lines may be announced at Ottawa this week was intimated by Premier Sifton of Alberta, who left for his home at noon Sunday.

"You may expect a complete shake-up in the Borden Cabinet some time this week," Premier Sifton declared. He would not further discuss the situation.

Hon. J. A. Calder, asked point-blank if he still believed Laurier could be leader of Western Liberals, flatly refused to answer.

"There is nothing to say about Sir Wilfrid," he said.

Other members of the party acted similarly.

Mr. Hudson to-day declared there would be no statement forthcoming from the Westerners. It will come first from Ottawa.

While the conference went on members were flooded daily with telegrams from prominent men in all parts of Canada some offering encouragement, others suggestions, while a number tried to break up the discussion in the interests of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but these latter had little effect as the deliberations progressed.

What it Stood For.

One of the Norris Cabinet(not the Premier) who was not at any of conferences, said: "The conferences just ended in Winnipeg were not so much for the purpose of coming more closely in touch with Western people, but were held here for the reason that Ottawa at this moment is a veritable hot-bed of intrigue, with elements of extreme partyism which make calm deliberation on part of earnest men almost out of the question. Pulling and hauling and twisting is all but intolerable."

"Are not Western politicians also partisan?" he was asked.

"Yes, and no. In normal times our men would go along old Grit and Tory lines, but I am well convinced, in fact, positive that men like Hudson, Calder, Crerar, Wood, and others have reached that point where they are ready to join hands with any body of Conservatives or Independents willing to place all the cards on the table and come out for thorough organization of Canada for the great purpose of winning the war."

Hon. Robert Rogers arrived in Winnipeg last night. Speculation is rife at the reason for his trip home. His friends declare that owing to pressure of Cabinet business he has been "away a long time" and consequently wishes to attend to private business matters here. "He is taking first opportunity of doing this," they say.

Another rumour has it that the former Minister contemplates taking over the leadership of the Independent party in Western Canada.

It is said that certain officials connected with the independent movement have been in touch with Rogers and have informed him that anyone with straight "National Government" and "Conscription" policy, will receive a large measure of support in the prospective general election. Colour is lent to this report by the stress which Rogers laid upon the necessity for a vigorous conscription policy, in the letter of resignation to Premier Borden.

On Wednesday the Liberal and Conservative committees will hold a joint meeting in South Winnipeg to discuss candidate timber. What influence Hon. Robert Rogers will have on the deliberations is a live topic. Every Conservative on the committee is a close friend of Rogers, many being "beholden" to him.

In Selkirk seat the joint Conservative and Liberal committee will meet this week in Stonewall to select a candidate and it is believed A. J. Lobb, member for Rockwood, who stood out against the Laurier resolution at the Liberal convention, will be the choice. Prominent Conservatives in the riding are at the back of Lobb. A. J. Adamson, of Winnipeg, was nominated several months ago by the Liberals at the convention. His future action is uncertain.

Owing to ill-health Col. G. H. Bradbury, M.P. for Selkirk, has intimated his intention of retiring from politics.

This week joint party gatherings to talk over union candidates will be held at Manitou, Souris, Brandon, Hamiota, and Dauphin. At the latter point Robert Cruise, Liberal M.P., will be the choice.

PRICE OF HOGS DROP.

Decline of From $2 to $2.50 on Montreal Market To-day.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 27.— The announcement from the British Food Controller to the effect that Canadian packers would not receive any more orders from the British Government for bacon and hogs caused a sharp break in prices of hogs on the Montreal market to-day, and decline of from $2 to $2.50 per cwt. was the result, causing heavy losses to drovers who had shipped in hogs, for which they had paid much higher prices.

Prices for select hogs reached a new hig record last Friday at $19 to $19.50 cwt. off cars Montreal, but to-day best prices were $17 to $17.50.

HAVE NO OFFICIAL WORD.

Ottawa Has Not Heard of Report That Britain Will Not Import Hog Products.

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—No official notification has been received by the Department of Trade and Commerce of the reported decision of the Imperial authorities to prohibit the import into Great Britain of Canadian bacon and hog products. The department would offer no opinion this morning as to whether such action might or might not be taken. Just where Great Britain would look for its supply if the Canadian trade is cut off is not clear. Certain it is, however, that the effect of such an importation prohibition would be to very naturally decrease the price of these commodities to the Canadian consumers. It is estimated that there is in cold storage at present sufficient hog products to supply Canada for a year.

The report however, would seem to be in entire contradiction to the policy of Food Controller Hanna, who has counselled baconless days in order to conserve the supply for the allies.

Sir Joseph Flavelle, head of the Davies Company, is not in Ottawa to-day, and his whereabouts is not known.

ASK BORDEN TO GET OUT?

Said to be One of the Terms of Western Liberals.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 27.—The report that the western Liberals who have been conferring on union Government will return to Ottawa to finish their consultations is bringing forth various comments. One well-posted Liberal said smilingly: "It is the irony of fate. Sir Robert summoned the westerners to Ottawa to ask them to come in. Now they are coming back to ask him to get out."

All reports from the west go to show that while the sentiment in favour of unionism and conscription is growing there is no abatement of the antagonism to Sir Clifford Sifton and Sir Robert Borden. Of course the suspicion always remains that Calder and Co. are killing time to head off an alien enemy franchise act.

One westerner just in from the prairies says: "If they want to get union Government through they'd better keep the westerners away from Ottawa. This is the last place to get it through."

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

There was a sort of snarl outside, and confused and broken sentences reached them: "That's him!" "That's the chap with Heaton's men. I knew some of them had run in here!" "Damned lucky for the skunks that Malone's away!" Then the voices became more threatening.

"Open the door!" commanded some one. "Open the door or we'll smash it—and you, too!"

"I'll open no door when I'm asked to do it in that fashion!" retorted Ralph, wrathfully. He had Southern blood himself and could not stand being ordered about.

"Steady!" warned Jack with his hand on his arm. Ralph shook him off, and cried:

"I am Deputy Sheriff, and I represent the Law—If you fellows will talk sense instead of threatening me, I'll open the door and have it out with you. But——" Radnor caught hold of him again and made him listen to him almost by physical force. His was in all ways the stronger will and personality and he forced it on his friend, until Ralph most unwillingly stood silent.

"You idiot!" said Jack, in a low tone but with deep and fervent emphasis. "Don't you see you are going about the whole thing wrong end first? We're in no position to dictate terms. Use your head, Ralph, if you can get the blood out of it long enough. Violence is just what we don't want—anything but that, because if it comes to that we have not a dog's chance. Do you really suppose you and I with a gun apiece can uphold the Majesty of the Law against a gang of highwayers and cut-throaters? Will you keep your fool mouth shut for a minute while we decide what to do?"

"Do what you damn please," said Denby, a little suddenly, but more sensibly.

"Better decide quick!" came the harsh voice at the door. "Do we break down the door or not We'll burn you out, you rats, if you were not in Bill's shack!"

Jack turned quickly to Martin Hale.

"Have you any influence with these men?" he demanded, in a sharp undertone.

"Only in one way, said Hale, speaking slowly. He seemed to be nerving himself for something. Suddenly he squared his splendid shoulders. "We'll try it, anyhow," he said firmly. "I guess it's coming to me!"

He raised his powerful voice, and called:

"Malone's not here, boys, but I am—Hale!"

"Hale!" There was a chorus of excited astonishment. Through it ran a rising surge of resentment that culminated in the fierce and accusing query:

"What are you doing with one of Heaton's men, Mart Hale?"

"If I open the door and tell you," said Martin, "will you agree not to start anything till we have thrashed the whole thing out?"

"Good for you!" muttered Jack.

"If you're with the Deputy Sheriff we won't agree to anything!" shouted one of the men outside.

"Come on, boys—down with her!"

There was a rush for the door, but before they could reach it, both Jack and Martin had sprung to the big bars, lifted them and swung the door wide open. It was a desperate chance but the only one.

"Now speak to them, quick!" commanded Jack.

The men, astonished by the unexpected opening of the door paused for just an instant. It was enough. Hale stopped and frowning facing them, with his hands up. There was a puzzled silence, and Martin spoke quietly, while Jack and Denby stood tense and waiting close at hand—the former with old Mason's revolver firmly clutched in his coat pocket.

"You see that I'm not armed," said Hale. "I want to talk to you a moment."

"Boys," said Hale, "I'm one of you, and you can trust me. I'll never land one of you in trouble, and you know it. But, boys I'm through. I want to quit the game and I'm putting it up to you straight. Ain't I got the right to?"

No one spoke, though so far they listened to him without breaking in. After a wistful look over the sullen faces Hale squared his shoulders sharply, and said, in a voice that rang:

"I gave the hold-up away, boys!"

Above the roar of fury from the mob came Polly's shrill cry of "Martin—oh, Martin! They'll kill you!"

The shuddering notes of her voice seemed to put new strength and authority into the man. He raised one powerful arm and stilled the tumult as all real force, either spiritual or physical, can always still disturbance.

"Listen to me," he ordered sharply. "I've been one of you, stuck by you, and you'd kill me like a 'possum, because I dared——"

The growling wave of anger rose more menacingly than before, but before it could break into its form of violence, Jack Radnor had taken a hand. He held the revolver in his hand and composedly though casually moved it on a slow and cursory orbit covering intermittently every point in the crowd the while he talked.

"Maybe you think," he said in his clean cut, well bred accents that commanded at least attention, "that Hale was only trying to do you a dirty trick when he tipped Heaton off to that blackguardly business down the track to-night.—Hold on there! I'm running this show till I get through talking, and I don't like being interrupted."

Acting on a sudden impulse he deliberately flung up his revolver, and shot at a swaying branch disclosed by the wavering light from behind him. A delicate flutter of leaves descended. He singled out a spot on the trunk a bit farther down, and hit that. A man moved uncomfortably in the crowd and the seemingly leisurely and preoccupied revolver covered him instantly. A hat began to duck stealthily and suddenly flew into the air. It was a risky game, but it appealed to the rough viewpoint of the men. Somebody laughed. "All right, mister" he called, "I reckon we'll listen!"

Jack, however, still held the gun, as he went on speaking as though there had been no interruption.

"As a matter of fact, you confounded idiots," he said, "Hale did you the whitest turn any man ever did a set of ruffians. He was one of you, and he did his damnedest to keep you from queering yourselves into penitentiary. I'm not preaching. I am talking horse sense at the end of a gun—which is the only way any chap has a chance to talk sense in this part of the world as far as I can see!——"

"What was that?" muttered Ralph quickly in his ear. Horses, unquestionably were coming nearer. A hope sprang contagiously from breast to breast among the three young men in the shack, but Radnor raised his voice to cover the approaching sounds.

"Hale is the last man on earth to turn State's evidence—if that means getting any of his pals into trouble. He—listen to me, you chicken-heads, don't keep turning around like that! Haven't you lived in the hills long enough to get used to bats and hoot-owls? He——"

But the play was over. A crash in the under brush started every man's hand toward his hip, but the subsequent click made them each pause half way. Sheriff Heaton's husky drawl, sharpened by urgency, cut the air definitely.

"Hands up, everybody! If that's Martin Hale standing at Malone's door, he's under arrest!"

CHAPTER XIV.
ENID'S PATIENT.

....Doing ill.
Expect some ill be done thee!....
....In the toils
O' the net, where swords spring forth, will he be fast—
Minded to kill his neighbors — the arch-knave!
....A dying man,
Your foe, that pays the price of deeds he did.
—Robt. Browning.

Left alone in the Toll-gate House, Enid confronted her charge with mingled feelings. The little wizened man—Malone, by name, though she did not know it—was not an attractive specimen of humanity at his best. Wounded and with his ugly features pinched and haggard, he was a still less agreeable vision. Enid was decidedly repelled by him; moreover, she was not used to sick nursing and her ministering instincts were as yet somewhat embryotic. Add to her disconcerted attitude of mind the reaction of mood after her dangerous play with Martin and you may guess something of the chaotic condition of her sensations as she looked at the wounded man left in her care. She was very far from heartless, however, and really did her best after a certain instinctive fastidious shrinking to do what she could for the patient. Under her light hands, busied in smoothing the cushion under his head and easing the position of his injured arm he opened his eyes.

"Are you feeling better?" asked Enid kindly.

The lamplight on her fair hair gave her, for the moment, a sort of nimbus, and the man blinked at her in a puzzled way.

She brought a cup of spirits and water mixed by Radnor for emergencies and put it to his lips.

"Who the devil are you?" demanded the sick man, staring at her.

"Your nurse," returned Enid thinking that she might as well waive full explanations as long as possible. At any rate she did not know much about the true inwardness of the situation.

Jack had been in anything but an illuminating mood.

"Nurse!" repeated the man. which of us is dopey?"

Enid wanted to laugh and yet she realized that the situation could not be accepted as a laughing matter. In the first place the man might die on her hands. As she looked at him he moaned harshly.

"You're in pain," said Enid pityingly. "Let me help you to lie more comfortably."

Radnor and Hale had cut his sleeve away and the shirt coat was rumpled up underneath him in a way which must have aggravated his suffering. She bent to arrange it more easily and started as though transfixed. For from the sagging pocket at the side of the coat, which had been cut off, slipped suddenly a small shining thing—a thing which Enid recognized, unless indeed as she had half believed more than once that night she were really at home in bed dreaming the whole business. She did not betray her astonishment but bent in an unconcerned way and picked up the glittering little object. It was just what she had imagined—the quaint little emerald pin she had given Alice Baker the Christmas before. How on earth had it gotten into the pockets of this horrid little man of the hills. Alice Baker was, so Enid told herself, many miles from Tarm Sulphur Springs. What was her brooch doing here? And yet there was no doubt about it. The setting made the matter certain, for it was unusual and unmistakable.

HARVESTERS! LOOK!

36,000 farm labourers are wanted in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Albera, for the harvesting of the crop.

The Canadian Northern Railway will operate the first excursion trains for the West, leaving Toronto Union Depot at 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. August 21st, and 10 p.m. August 30th, and running through solid to Winnipeg.

The equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars, lunch counter cars, and, in addition, the railway will continue their last year's innovation of keeping a special car for the accommodation of single women and families, and of cupants will be separated from the other passengers.

The territory served by the Canadian Northern Lines offers the widest choice of employment with high wages, but regardless of where you may locate, remember we give the best service to Winnipeg, where you will re-purchase to final destination, no matter on what Line it may be.

MAKING FILET LACE

FILET EMBROIDERY.—To hold the filet net taut as it can be darned with the design use a metallic frame made with a wire of quarter inch diameter, so that it will be strong enough when you stretch the net. You cover the frame with some thin ribbon, first covering it with soft cotton wool if you think it necessary. This guniture must be strongly fastened, especially at the corners. It is indispensable that the frame be firm when you fix the net, and you sew the end of the ribbon together so it will not twist on the frame.

If the size of the net has the size of the inside frame you fix it with stitches on the ribbon of the frame (see No. 1). If the size is smaller you border the net with a ribbon or cloth so that the square of net will keep its shape.

Needles. Special needles are required for this work—long and blunt, known as "filet embroidery needles" inside, in numbers 1 to 6.

Darning Stitch. This stitch is the most used because it is simple. The stitch for covering a net ground is done over a prescribed number of squares, across which the thread is carried backward and forward until they are filled in (see Fig. 2). This is the stitch generally used when a pattern consisting of counted stitches, such as a cross stitch one, is to be reproduced on a net ground.

It is especially useful in the case of large pieces such as curtains and bed covers, as it "throws up" the pattern and is quickly done.

It may happen that you will have to change the direction of the darning stitch (see Fig. 3).

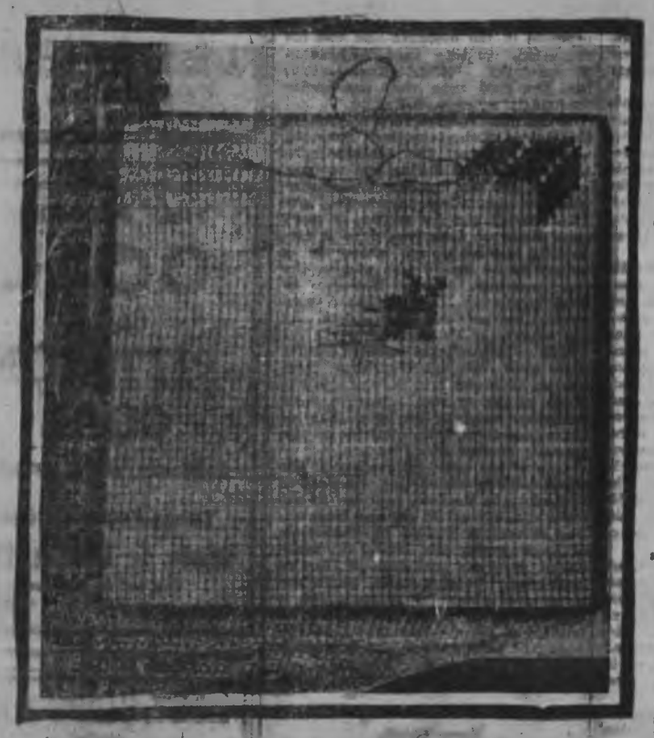

Figure 1 shows the iron frame, with the filet mesh attached to it, as explained in the directions. The design started on this net is one that will be given in a future lesson.

How to Knit Sweaters for Soldiers and Seamen

A woman's part in the war seems to be to knit instead of to mobilize, scores of the inexperienced have asked for accurate and explicit directions for making the garments most in demand by soldiers and seamen. They request more detailed information than can be obtained ordinarily except by making a personal trip to the knitting centres.

In order to present this information the writer went to two leading headquarters in New York and asked for directions for purchasing the material and making the sleeveless sweater, which is a favorite with the women who are eager to do their bit with the knitting needle, and is an important part of the fighting man's kit.

Although the two lists of directions for knitting the sleeveless sweater are almost identical, the Red Cross provides leaflets and materials to persons desiring to knit garments for the soldiers, while the Comforts Committee of the Navy League of the United States, whose headquarters also are in New York, furnishes similar sets of directions for the navy.

Both Lists Approved.

Both lists have been sanctioned by Washington. The United States Navy approves the directions provided at the Navy League headquarters, and the United States Army approves the directions to be found at the Red Cross headquarters.

Women novices at knitting have been grateful to the men for their preference, because the sleeveless garment is much easier to make than the other kind.

Soldiers Favor Mufflers.

Seamen can keep their clothing in a kit on board their ship, while soldiers are forced to carry their entire outfit. The extra weight of a long sleeved woollen garment and also its bulk would make a decided difference in the soldier's outfit. And when soldiers require something for warmth at the throat they prefer winding a knitted muffler around their neck and crossing it over the chest or back, so that it provides practically the same covering as a sleeveless jacket, with the additional neck protection.

There is as great a difference in knitting as there is in feminine temperaments. Some women knit closely and the garments they turn out are therefore smaller than those made by the women who knit loosely. It is entirely a matter of how one holds the needles and yarn. The stitches are identical. The loose knitter will make a much larger garment than the tight knitter. As soon as one finds a natural knitting pace it is better to begin to regulate it at once. One can hold the wool a little looser if she is inclined to knit tightly, and hold it tighter if she is a loose knitter.

A Novice's Experience.

That is especially important in finishing off a garment. For example, one woman who had never knitted before made one of the sleeveless jackets according to official directions, and when she had bound off the last row and had sewed the strip together it was large enough in the neck to leave a sort of frilled effect. Another made hers so tight at the ends that when the sweater was sewed together it was too small to go over a man's shoulders.

These are little things to avoid in the beginning, and are soon learned. But they make the work of several days or weeks either a success or failure, and mean that one will be encouraged to start another garment or feel like never attempting knitting again.

With little practice one will be able to knit without looking at the work in hand, except occasionally. Plain knitting can be accomplished with speed and does not require close attention. The purling and binding off, as well as casting on stitches, are a little more difficult, especialy for the beginner.

Neck Should Be Loose.

The neck should be made loose enough to slip easily over the head. It is not intended to fit close. Ordinarily it is worn over the sailor collar. The garment should come over the hips, where it will be held firmly by the ribbed band made by knitting plain and purling a strip four inches deep at each end of the straight strip.

When the knitting is finished the garment will be straight. It still will have to be sewed along the sides, leaving an opening at each end for the arm hole. The directions given here provide for a long shoulder.

The directions are for knitting a sweater for a man of average size. As not all the men in either the navy or the army are average, however, some extra sized are needed. To make a larger garment one would cast on from eighty-six to ninety stitches in the beginning instead of eighty. And one would knit plain for twenty-five or twenty-six inches or even more. It also would be necessary to make the sweater a trifle longer than the directions call for, as a large man would take it up in the length. The neck and sleeve measurements need be changed very little. The other one would have to regulate according to your own ideas of the size.

Here Are Official Directions for Knitting a Sweater

The official directions for knitting a sleeveless jacket as given by both the Red Cross Society and the Comforts Committee of the Navy League are as follows:—

Cast on 80 stitches.
Knit two, purl two stitches for four inches.
Knit plain until sweater measures 23 inches (including ribbing).
The plain knitting should measure about 20 inches across.
Knit 28 stitches, bind off 24 stitches for neck.
Knot 28 stitches.
Knit seven ribs on each shoulder, cast on 24 stitches.
Knit plain for 19 inches.
Purl two, knit two stitches for four inches.
Sew up sides, leaving nine inches for armholes.
Put a round of single crochet stitches on neck and sleeve openings.

The provision for the neck and armholes is not found on all the official directions, but is an excellent one, especially for the beginner, as it will help to tighten and keep firm the full edges if the garment happens to be losely knitted.

ECONOMICAL RECIPES.

"MY duty to fight in the kitchen I realized as an important one and by giving the matter a little thought I have learned many points in regard to economizing," writes a reader. "I am sending you one on how I made twelve lamb chops supply a family of six for three meals.

"First, instead of having the butcher trim the chops, I trimmed them myself. For dinner Sunday I had the nicely trimmed chops. I boiled the trimmings and from part of the liquor obtained I made the soup for Monday's dinner. With the rough pieces and the remaining liquor a delicious baked pie was made for Tuesday's dinner."

Mrs. H. T. C.

NUT LOAF.

Boil one-half cup rice (brown preferred), drain and dry it. Mix with an equal quantity of bread crumbs. Add level teaspoon salt and one-half salt spoon black pepper. Stir in one cup chopped nuts—pecans or peanuts. Add one tablespoon chopped parsley and one egg. Mix thoroughly and pack in bread pan to mould it. Turn it from pan into baking pan and bake slowly three-quarters hour. Serve with cream sauce or purée of peas.

H. M. COMSTOCK.

LIVER PUDDING.

Grind one pound liver and one-half pound fresh fat pork in the meat chopper very fine. Any kind of liver will do. Soak a slice of bread about one inch thick in milk until soft. Mix well with the liver and pork, pepper and salt to taste, put it in a pudding dish and bake in the oven forty minutes or until it is done. It is served cold with salad or sandwiches. Mrs. F. GUSTAFSON.

STEWED STEAK.

The most economical and nutritious way of serving beef in a family.

Take one pound of steak and remove the fat; cut the lean into five or six pieces.

Cut one large onion and [illegible] rots and a piece of turnip into small pieces and place them in cold water.

Put one ounce of butter, lard or dripping into a frying pan, fry the steak quickly until browned on both sides, then remove.

Put in the frying pan the trimmings from the vegetables, one ounce of flour, and fry brown, then add one-half pint of stock or water and stir till it boils.

Replace the meat and season to taste, and then place all in a stewpan, cover closely and cook gently for two hours.

The vegetables to be boiled till tender in salted water with the fat of the meat, and some celery may be added.

When ready, pour out on a deep meat dish and garnish with parsley or cooked beet root.

With Irish potatoes boiled with their jackets on, which is the best way to cook potatoes, as you then get the full flavor of the potato, you have a dish which is appetizing, nourishing and satisfying. The cost should not exceed 50 cents and there will be enough for three or four persons.

If the family is large, double the quantities given above and you will have enough for eight or ten, according to their ages. Mrs. A. LAWRIE.

BREAD CAKE.

Two cups bread sponge, two cups brown sugar, one-half cup butter, one-half cup lard, one cup of raisins chopped, two eggs, one teaspoon baking soda dissolved in little warm water, one teaspoon cinnamon, half teaspoon allspice, half teaspoon nutmeg, a little salt, enough flour to make batter like other cake. Place in one large or two small pans and let raise one hour. Bake in moderate oven till it loosens from side of pan. C. G. R.

CREAMED SMOKED BEEF.

Break into small pieces one-half box of smoked beef. Scald and drain. Fry one-half onion cut fine in one tablespoon of chicken fat or any other fat of not too strong a flavor. Chicken fat is best. Then add one heaping tablespoon of flour and cook a minute. Stir in one pint and a half of milk and cook until flour is done and all is thick enough. Mix one egg yolk with one tablespoon of cream or top of bottle. Add beef and egg and stir and cook a few minutes, but do not boil. This should be seasoned to taste with salt and paprika or white pepper. Serve with toast and boiled potatoes. Left over fish may be used the same way.

T. E. PHILLIPS.

PORK CHOPS, POTATOES AND ONIONS IN ONE PAN.

If you do not possess a deep frying pan get one; it will pay you to do so, if only just to cook this dish.

Before beginning to fry the chops, peel and cut the potatoes in one-half inch slices. (You may have them thicker if you so desire.) After cooking this dish the first time you can then tell how thick you want to cut the potatoes. For each chop you are cooking allow one large onion. Remove the outside skin from the onion and cut in slices. Now you will fry the chops. Have the deep pan very hot, with one tablespoonful of drippings or fat. Do not put more chops in the pan than the pan will hold without crowding. The success in cooking this dish depends on the way you fry these chops. They should be quickly fried a very deep brown. Have a hot plate ready to put the extra chops on after they are fried. You must see that the chops stick just a little to the pan while they are frying; it is this fact that makes the gravy a fine brown and gives the meat and potatoes a delicate flavor. After the chops are fried as directed you will then put the potatoes on top of the chops and the onions on top of the potatoes and a half teaspoon of salt and pepper to taste. You will make sure that there is salt enough by tasteing the gravy before the entire contents of the pan is served. If you serve it without sufficient salt you will spoil the dish. Next you will add a cup of water and cover the contents of the pan with a deep pudding dish and let it boil slowly for an hour. You will watch the cooking and see to it that the water has evaporated and the meat cooks a very little while without any water in the pan. Be sure that it does not burn. This helps to make the delicious gravy. Then add more water enough to make a nice and sufficient gravy and bring the chops to the top, letting the potatoes and onions down into the gravy and cook until the potatoes are tender. You will find that the potatoes and onions are a nice brown and the chops are flavored with the onions and the meat cooked tender as spring chicken.

Learn to Cultivate Your Own Personality.

TOO many women make the fatal mistake in their efforts to please of trying to copy the special charms of women whom they consider charming. This is especially true of young girls. It is a wrong attitude to take for two reasons. It suppresses individuality, that quality in you that should be cultivated to the full, and it often brings into your manner the false note of insincerity.

Be yourself

Don't Envy Others' Charms.

The fact that you admire intensely the special charms of another woman is not the slightest excuse for your trying to copy them, but every reason for your trying to bring into play individual charms of your own, some of which you may not even know you possess because you may have been too diffident, too self-depreciating or indolent to cultivate your individuality.

Charms are distinctly a matter of personality.

Hospitality, kindness, effective repose, tact, &c.—all these are charms that may be acquired if we do not happen to possess them.

But the special charms of personality, they belong each to the special personality that has engendered them.

Naturally serene and quiet of disposition, for some reason you envy Miss K.'s vivacity. She has a spirited little way of tossing her head; she uses lots of pretty little gestures; her remarks have an entrancing habit of ending in question marks. You try to do as she does.

But you don't quite succeed, do you?

These graces that you admire so in Miss K would not be charming in her at all if it were not that they are perfectly spontaneous to her. They are expressions of her personality, which is so diametrically opposed to your own. You try to adopt them and you either make yourself ridiculous or, if not that, at least detract from your own charm, which is quite as deplorable.

Use your good common sense. Admire these charms in Miss K., but regard them as something absolutely her own. Don't embitter yourself with envy. Cultivate with more care than ever the graces that spring naturally from your own, serene, quiet self. There will be many people who will find them far more attractive than the charms you so covet that are Miss K.'s.

The world needs her charms and it needs yours. You will only hurt these real merits of yours by trying to graft in among them charms foreign to your personality that simply cannot thrive because the special temperament needed to make them thrive is not yours. Under the grafted graces that bloom so unsatisfactorily, the graces natural to your temperament will fade.

Most of us are not awake to the possibilities of charm that lie in ourselves. Self-depreciation is a general failing. We do not often try to know ourselves. We are too busy watching other people.

It is well to admire other people's charms, but never to a degree that impairs our confidence in ourselves.

To each and every one of us was given as a birthright a personality different from any other. Life demands of us in return for the marvellous gift the development of it. If we do not develop it, but drape it in the shroud of self-effacement and depreciation, or hide its true light in the false gleam of borrowed light, what else are we doing but robbing the world of what is its due from us?

Be Yourself.

Be yourself in all your ways, and some day you will laugh at the days when you tried to copy Miss K.'s vivacity, Mrs. M.'s laugh, your neighbor's ways of walking, your cousin's langour, &c.

Envy has a way of growing weaker the oftener it is eliminated.

Study yourself and develop your own personality.

OSTRICH TRIMMING.

Paris is holding her own in fashions this year. It is as though obstacles and difficulties but spur her to greater achievement.

Now there is a big fad for ostrich. While ostrich has always been in demand more or less, sometimes for a fan, a boa or trimming for a hat, there has never been a time within years when the feathery product of the ostrich is seen upon hat, shoulder cape and bag, all at the same time.

A Lamp Cover Novelty.

In the picture herewith an electric lamp cover of gold colored silk is covered with a square of gold net, embroidered with padded fruit and flowers and edged with a ball fringe. A cushion cover, without the cushion inside, is draped to the lamp base to display it prettily, and is of brocke velvet, with a velvet puff and a border of civet cat fur.

Of two small cushions, the larger, of light blue silk, is quilted and caught with tiny light blue buttons; the smaller is of black and white domino checked silk, with an applique of padded grapes and leaves like those on the lamp shade.

FABRIC GLOVES.

Fabric gloves have gained a great vogue since the beginning of the European war. One sees women wearing them for all but evening occasions.

Some of the fabric weaves are so fine and so cleverly made that one cannot tell them from suede at a short distance, and they are shaped to the hand with a care that was never before bestowed on this kind of glove. Gray is most effective, as are also some shades of suede and tan.

BELGIAN FARMERS SETTLE IN OREGON

One Thousand Colonists Will Till 18,000 Acres in the Northwest.

Involving 18,000 acres of land, the second of a series of colonization projects for the benefit of Belgian refugees in Holland has been consummated in Yamhill county, Oregon, says the Portland Telegram.

The first project was one involving 502 acres of apple orchard land near Dufur, Ore., on which 250 Belgian families will settle in November.

The second deal has been arranged, and while the purchase price was not announced, it is understood that approximately $2,000 is involved.

The land lies in the old Indian reservation near Grandronde and is adaptable to diversified farming, dairying and stock raising. The work of developing the project will soon begin under the supervision of D. W. Ross, former State engineer of Idaho. When the tracts are divided a system by which the purchasers will have thirty-eight years in which to pay for the property will be put into use. There will be a community centre, including a church, general store, similar buildings. There will be four and 100 acre projects.

THE IRISH AND THE HUNS.

(London Referee.)

—In the trenches one evening a battalion of the Leinster Regiment held a "kailee" (ceilidh), or Irish sing-song at which was a spirited rendering of the humorous ballad, "Bryan O'Lynn," sung to an infectiously rollicking tune. The opening verse runs:

"Bryan O'Lynn had no breeches to wear,
So he bought a sheep-skin to make him a pair,
With the woolly side out, and the skinny side in,
Faix, 'tis pleasant and cool says Bryan O'Lynn."

The swing of the tune took the fancy of the Germans in the their trenches, less than fifty yards away. With a "rumpty-tum-tumty-tum-tumty-tum-tum," they loudly hummed their air at the end of each verse, until the Leinsters, singing at the top of their voices, gave the words a topical application:

"With woolly side out, and the skinny side in,
"Sure, we'll wallop the Gerrys, says Bryan O'Lynn."

Hearty bursts of laughter and cheers arose from both trenches at the conclusion of the song.

We Can Help You Stimulate Business

A little stimulation in Midsummer may put you back in the running again, and even yet, if you concentrate your efforts, use liberally the means that have made others prosper in your line of business you can succeed as they did.

Some Merchants Say:—

"As Soon as Business Picks Up I'll Advertise"

This is not consistent. The farmer does not wait until harvest time to sow his seed—and, remember this, that if you ever reach the point in business where you believe you can get along without advertising, somebody else will own your business. ¶ It isn't the age of a house that counts most. It's the efficient, up-to-date, daily publicity that brings its goods before the buyers that spells SUCCESS.

If it's ADVERTISING—let us talk it over with you. Our service is at your disposal at any time.

Custody of Hun Colonies.

Suggestions that the United States should govern various disputed lands as the trustee for civilization are being advanced by European publicists with increasing frequency. The destinies of Palestine, Syria, and even the Suez Canal have been thus arranged by enthusiasts. Josiah Wedgwood, who was on the staff of General Smuts in East Africa last year, proposes in an article in the Nation to give the United States the largest order yet framed.

All German African colonies, Mr. Wedgwood says, should be pooled with the Congo Free State and the Portuguese colonies by the payment of 100,000,000 pounds sterling to Belgium, and 20,000,000 pounds to Portugal. This territory, of 4,700,000 square miles, should be administered by an American commission similar to the Philippine commission, but nominated by the guaranteeing powers, with "equal opportunities for all whites, free trade, and a progressive non-exploiting land policy up to the best modern American pattern as exhibited in the Philippines."

They Broke the China.

Surely the irony of circumstance could not have been carried further than at a luncheon recently given to Sir Edward Carson by the British Empire Producers' Organization. Let the title be noted. Lord Beresford was one of the guests, and, in the midst of a speech full of characteristic energy and plain speaking, his eye suddenly caught the inscription on one of the plates, off which he had been lunching. As this inscription took definite shape, he was horrified to find that it read, "Factory, Werlen, Germany." "Here's a pretty state of affairs," he cried. "We have actually been dining off German plates!" A moment's terrible silence was followed, almost immediately, by the sound of breaking crockery all over the room. There is surely a humor in the situation which makes it worth while, from almost any point of view.

Roumanian Courtesy.

The Roumanians are among the handsomest races in Europe, but that, says a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, is only a part of their fascination. Some enthusiast has said that the ladies of Bukarest "combine the beauty of the Hungarian, the grace of the Austrian, and the wit and style of the Parisian." But still we have not all the truth. It is the distinction and kindliness of the manners of Bukarest which mark it out among the cities of the world. No one ever found there anything but courtesy. Many have pronounced the people the politest on earth, and the politeness is not a matter of civility or readiness to oblige, but a high-bred distinction of manner.

The cinchona-tree, from which quinine is obtained, grows at an elevation of seven thousand to ten thousand feet in the Andes.

Strange Prophecy 300 Years Old

PART of an extraordinary Latin prophecy made by Brother Johannes in the year 1600 is quoted in a recent issue of The Figaro. In deciphering the allegory, it must be remembered that France is represented by a Cock;

England by a Leopard;
Russia by a White Eagle;
Germany by a Black Eagle; and Austria by the "other Eagle;"

while the Lamb stands for Justice, Mercy, and Truth.

"Towards the year 2000 the Antichrist will manifest himself. His army will surpass in numbers all that can be imagined.

"There will be Christians among his legions, and there will be Mohametans and savage soldiers among the defenders of the Lamb.

"For the first time the Lamb will be all red. There will not be a single spot in the Christian world that will not be red, and red will be the Heavens, the Earth, the Waters, and even the Air, for blood will flow in the domains of the four elements at once.

"The Black Eagle will throw himself on the Cock, who will lose many feathers, but will strike back heroically with his spurs. He soon would be crushed were it not for the help of the Leopard and his claws.

"The Black Eagle will come from the country of Luther, will surprise the Cock from another side, and will invade the country of the Cock up to the middle of it.

"The White Eagle, coming from the North, will surprise the Black Eagle and the 'other Eagle,' and will invade the country of the Antichrist from one end to another.

"The Black Eagle will see himself forced to liberate the Cock in order to fight the White Eagle, and the Cock will pursue the Black Eagle into the country of the Antichrist to help the White Eagle.

"The battles fought up to then will be as nothing compared to those which will take place in the country of Luther, for the seven Angels will together pour in the fire of their censers on the impious Earth, which signifies that the Lamb will order the extermination of the race of Antichrist.

"When the Beast sees that he is lost, he will become furious, and for many months the beak of the White Eagle, the claws of the Leopard, and the spurs of the Cock will furiously strike at him.

"They will cross rivers over the bodies of the slain, and these, in places, will change the course of the waters. They will bury only the men of noble families, the leading commandants, and the princes, because to the carnage made by the armies will be joined the wholesale death of those who will die of hunger or the pest.

"The Antichrist will ask many times for peace, but the seven Angels who walk in front of the three animals defending the Lamb have declared that victory will only be granted on the condition that the Antichrist be crushed like straw on the barn floor.

"The executors of the justice of the Lamb cannot stop fighting as long as the Antichrist possesses soldiers to fight against them.

"That which makes the decrees of the Lamb so implacable is that the Antichrist has pretended to be a follower of Christ, and to act in His Name and if he does not perish the fruit of the Redeemer would be lost, and the doors of Hades would prevail against the Saviour.

"The fight which will take place where the Antichrist forges his arms will not be in any way a human fight.

[This may have reference to Essen, where the Krupp works are, and many authorities believe that the decisive battle may take place in Westphalia.]

"The three animals defending the Lamb will exterminate the last army of the Antichrist, but they will be forced to erect on the battlefield a pyre as large as a city, for the bodies of the dead will change the aspect of the countryside, as there will be mounds of the slain.

"The Antichrist will lose his crown, and will die in solitude and madness. His empire will be divided into twenty-two States, but none of them will any longer possess fortresses, armies, or vessels.

[Curiously enough, this number coincides with the number of German States.]

"The White Eagle, by the order of St. Michael, will drive the Crescent from Europe, and will install himself at Constantinople. Then will begin an era of peace and prosperity for the earth, and there will be no more wars, each nation being governed according to its desires, and living according to the rules of justice.

"There will no longer be Lutherans or Schismatics. The Lamb will reign, and the supreme happiness of humanity will begin. Happy will be those who, escaping the perils of that period, will be able to enjoy the fruit of the reign of the Spirit and of the purging of Humanity, which can only come after the defeat of the Antichrist."

[The above narrative was originally quoted from the Figaro in the London Evening Standard.]

Food Laws Unheeded.

Londoners were amused at the unusual sight of a cormorant feeding below Chelsea Bridge, the other day. Interest in the bird was heightened by the scandalous way in which he was totally disregarding the food regulations. Speechless he doubtless would have been if faced with the fashionable question, 'Comment vous Devonportez-vous?"

Dahlia roots may seem to be dry and dead, but when they are put into the ground they will grow.

ENGLISH WAR TOYS.

War Has Caused Revival of This Industry.

Mr. Ripley Wilson, an American observer in London, has been looking into the toy business of England, as this business has been affected by the war. He says that one "notable feature" is the number of persons who have taken to making toys in a small way—in their own homes, probably, and with one or two helpers. When they have hit it right, their business has grown. Mr. Wilson gives the following instance:

The visits of the German zeppelins, which brought anti-aircraft guns into prominence, were almost immediately followed by a toy model of the gun, with its protecting shield and fittings complete. The man who developed the toy started in a small shop, but has gradually increased his sales until he now employs fifty or sixty assistants.

All sorts of war toys are naturally in great demand. War talk is what the children hear in their homes, and war toys are what they understand and appreciate. Toy soldiers have long been a stock article, this being one method by which the masculine spirit is nourished and perpetuated; but now there are recreation huts for the soldiers, and little armored motor cars, and "tanks," and aeroplanes, and ambulances, and wooden forts, and even the big guns brought down to the nursery dimensions. The list reads almost like one of the daily bulletins from the front which the war offices send out for the use of the morning papers.

Mr. Wilson says that rocking-horses are not so common as formerly, wood being pretty scarce, but that the odds and ends of wood are much used for smaller wooden toys. Mechanical toys made of metal have almost disappeared, the few still to be found having been brought over from France.

It is stated that in all England only one firm is making mechanical toys now, and those are of a very simple nature; for the toy-maker who wishes to obtain quantities of iron or tin can do so only with the consent of the Ministry of Munitions, and such permission is not easy to obtain.

Dolls are being made in goodly quantities and varieties, and will continue to be made as long as girls are girls, and toy sets of china are popular. But the greatest growth has been in the line of what Mr. Wilson calls "soft toys," such as Teddy bears and woolly dogs, which before the war were procured in large quantities from Germany. In regard to this line Mr. Wilson says:

It has been an imitative work up to the present time; but perhaps such is necessary when an industry first starts, with the independent and creative thought to follow a thorough knowledge of the various methods of manufacture. The Japanese were quick to start manufacturing soft toys, and many Japanese products found their way into this market until the import restrictions went into effect.

Mr. Wilson reports that the toy imports into the United Kingdom in 1913 amounted to $7,069,000, and in 1916 in $2,597,000; and that the exports of British-made toys in 1913 amounted to $4,313,000, and in 1916 to $3,338,000. Thus the toy trade of $11,382,000 in 1913 was reduced to $5,935,000 last year. There is, however, another difference. In 1913 the balance of trade against Great Britain in the toy line was $2,756,000, while the balance in her favor in 1916 was $741,000.

Hot Time in Thebes.

Politics, political rows, political scandal and corruption evidently are as old as the ages, to judge from the experience of Thebes, ancient capital of Egypt, where old Amenhotep IV. of the eighteenth dynasty, got elected for one term and had a regular time; this according to Mrs. Grant Williams, Egyptologist.

When Amenhotep won the election, as the story runs, he got up on his hind feet and told the good Thebans that it was all wrong; nothing was just right in Thebes.

"He even grew dissatisfied with his own name and changed it to Ikhnaton," said Mrs. Williams. "Then he told the people that he had an option on a nice townsite downstream at a place on the Nile known to moderns as Tell el Amarna."

"And of course he moved the capital down there and left the old Egyptian stock company with a franchise for selling water from goatskins high and dry?" Mrs. Williams was asked.

"He did that very thing," she admitted. "Not only that. He told them their religion was all wrong and that the disc of the sun was the thing they should worship. He only served one term," Mrs. Williams added thoughtfully, "and after retiring him to private life the Thebans picked up their bag and baggage and marched back to where they belonged screaming wishfully."

GREAT RUSSIAN LAKE.

Lake Ladoga, Reservoir For Neva, Largest Lake in Europe.

Lake Ladoga is the great reservoir for Petrograd's River Neva. If the Caspian Sea be rated as a sea instead of a lake, Ladoga takes premier place among the lakes of Europe. With its area of 7,000 square miles it very nearly approaches in size our own Lake Ontario, which has a water surface slightly exceeding 7,200 square miles.

Ladoga has recently appeared in the public prints owing to the revolutionary activities of the munition workers at Schlusselburg, a fortified town situated at the point where the waters of the lake find their outlet to the Gulf of Finland through the River Neva. By the water route it is a distance of forty miles from the western extremity of Lake Ladoga to Petrograd, but in an airline it is only 21 miles.

This great sheet of water is fed by more than seventy rivers and streams, the most important of which are the Syas, Svir, and Volkhov, all of which are connected with the Neva at Schlusselburg by canals. The canals have been dug in order to relieve shipping of the perils of the lake, which are numerous—frequent gales, numerous reefs and rocks and dense fogs.

The most important of these canals, connecting the Volkhov and the Neva, was dug nearly 200 years ago along the southern shore of the lake. In 1861-86 the old waterway was supplemented by a new canal running parallel to it. By means of these two canals Petrograd is connected with the ancient city of Novgorod (not to be confused with the fair city of Nizhni-Novgorod), the seat of government of the Volkhov republic in the eleventh and twelfth centuries. In this city originated the proverb: 'If the prince is bad, into the mud with him,' the advice frequently being acted upon.

What little commerce is carried on the waters of the lake itself from the northern shores to Schlusselburg must be handled during the summer months, for ice blocks transportation for about 180 days out of the 365. While the ice seldom is more than three or four feet deep it frequently is piled up off shore to a height of 60 to 80 feet and in the early summer, when it begins to float down the Neva, it has a very perceptible refrigerating effect on the climate of Petrograd.

The chief products handled by the little lake steamers are hay, iron, timber, firewood, kaolin, and granite. Much of the marble, granite, and sandstone used in the buildings of Petrograd come from quarries on the sparsely settled north shores.

One of the most interesting of the small islands which dot the surface of Ladoga is Valamo, founded in the tenth century by Sergej and Herman. The retreat is visited by thousands of Russian pilgrims during the festival of SS. Peter and Paul in June of each year. Valamo itself, which has an area of about 12 square miles, is surrounded by about 40 smaller islands. A second monastery on the island of Konnevitz is also a popular place of pilgrimage.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY For Four Days and Nights From DIARRHOEA

Diarrhoea arises from many causes such as change of diet change of water change of climate, catching cold, the eating of unripe fruits or anything that will cause an excess of bile.

On the first sign of any looseness of the bowels it should not be neglected, but should be looked after immediately, for if not diarrhoea, dysentery or some other serious bowel complaint may ensue.

Miss Florence Harfield, 325 Lauder Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with a violent attack of diarrhoea. I suffered terribly with it for four days and nights, and finally I became so weak I did not think I could stand it any longer. My sister advised me to try a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I did so, and after I had taken three doses I felt a whole lot relieved. I kept on taking it, and by the time I had taken six doses, the diarrhoea had completely stopped. I think it a wonderful remedy, as it is so quick to act. I will recommend it to all my friends."

There are so many spurious "Strawberry" preparations sold that you should see that the name "Dr. Fowler's" is on every bottle you buy. Price 35c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Italians Are Sweeping Forward

THE CAMPAIGN IS DEBACLE OF DEFEAT FOR THE AUSTRIANS

Italians Are Sweeping Onward From Heights Of Monte Santo

Pursuing Retreating Austrians Across the Plateau of Bainsizza---Enemy Retire at Several Points to Save Whole Divisions From Flanking Moves ---Condition in Austria is Bordering on a Panic

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:—

BERNE, August 28.—Germany is suffering from almost nation-wide epidemic of dysentery. German mortality rates have jumped from fifty to a hundred per cent. since the first of the year. Tuberculosis is ravaging the people due to their weakened condition and through lack of proper food. This information came to-day from a source of highest authority. The German Government is making frantic efforts to conceal the dysentery epidemic. All German cities have stopped the publication of mortality statistics. The tuberculosis rate is said to have nearly doubled in the last few months. Every effort is being made to reassure the German public.

LONDON, August 28.—Italy's sweep forward from Monte Santo across the Plateau of Bainsizza is fast becoming a debacle of defeat for Austria. The Austrian staff has decreed retirements at several places to save whole divisions from flanking moves. The morale of the retreating troops, constantly battered by Italian, French and British long-range guns, and attacked incessantly by Italian flyers, is steadily decreasing. To-day's front despatches indicated not only hot pursuit of the retreating Austrians across the Bainsizza, but attacks further south by the Italians at the chain of rocky promontories of which Kuk, Monte Santo and the Vodice are the three largest. Swiss despatches brought word that Austria is seething with discontent. Allies' victories are causing widespread alarm.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, August 28.—A thrilling story of two-hours' running fight with a submarine during which the new bombs which shroud vessels with thick black smoke were used as one means of defence, was told by passengers arriving here on a French steamship to-day. The submarine attacked the vessel at 9:45 a.m. August 26, just outside the Bay of Biscay. Most of the women passengers were still in bed, and at the danger signal came tumbling on deck in various phases of undress. The ship immediately began to zig-zag, while naval gunners blazed away at the U-boat which could be plainly seen before the smoke-screen was released. The new smoke contrivance looks like a series of huge cheese boxes swung on the side of the ship. The bombs are released from these boxes and let loose dense clouds of smoke. Passengers said the screen was entirely effective.

COPENHAGEN, August 28. — Pope Benedict's peace note will be the principal subject of discussion at a meeting in Berlin this afternoon in which Imperial Chancellor Michaelis, members of the German Parliament, and representatives of Prussia, Bavaria, Saxony and Wurttemburg will participate.

WASHINGTON, August 28.—Trieste is being evacuated. Its civilian population is deserting the town at the order of the Austrian high command, according to the Zurich correspondent of the Corriere D'Italia, whose despatches were cabled to the Italian Embassy here to-day. "Most of the citizens left yesterday, taking with them all articles of value," the cable stated. "They sought refuge in the interior of Austria."

PETROGRAD, August 28.—Without even having been under attack, Russian infantry around Boyany retired permitting enemy occupation of postions, to-day's official statement declared.

PARIS, August 28.—Violent artillerying over half a dozen sectors of the French front coupled with raids, were reported in to-day's official statement. "A violent German bombardment of Californie Plateau and at Cerveux was stopped by the French artillery," the War Office said. The enemy was unable to attack. "French troops raided Butte Souain taking prisoners. Around Verdun, in the Avocourt Wood and Beaumont sectors, artillery fire was very active.

LONDON, August 28.—British forces in Flanders last night took a tightere grip on the German third line. Field Marshal Haig reported an advances of 2,000 yards astride the St. Julien-Poelcappelle Road.

"Hourly the Italian offensive becomes more certain of a military decision," cable messages say. The Austrian troops in the sector dominated by Monte Santo are reported so far ahead of the Italians in their retreat that no trace of them can be found except stacks of abandoned munitions, guns and food. From Monte Santo many square miles of territory can be raked by the Italian artillery. No Austrian position in the zone can be held more than a few hours. Monte Gabriele and Monte Daniels are still held by the Austrians, but are isolated. No food or munitions can reach the beleaguered troops. The fall of these mountain forts is a matter of days, the cables say. Emperor Charles spent the entire of August 22nd at the front with the Austrian high command. He saw Tarnovo captured and one fort on the Carso destroyed by the Italian bombardment. He left while the Italian troops were charging to victory. Austrian papers admit the precarious position of their troops.

The Lokal Anzeiger correspondent makes no effort to conceal the important advantages gained by the Italians.

A FLAT INCREASE IN PENSIONS IS TO BE PROVIDED

Pending Final Action in Regard to New Scale Government Proposes to Give An Increase Dating From April 1st

PREMIER'S ANNOUNCEMENT

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—Pending final action in regard to pensions to soldiers and soldiers' dependents there is to be a flat increase in the rate of pensions to meet the increased cost of living. The announcement was made in the House to-day by Sir Robert Borden in explaining the Government's decision to postpone legislative action upon the proposed new scale of pensions.

The whole pension question, stated the Prime Minister, was one that should be dealt with by the new Parliament that would shortly be summoned. It was a fact, however, that the cost of living had materially increased in Canada, and the Government deemed it advisable, pending final consideration of the question, that there should be a further allowance to those drawing pensions. The proposed increase would date from the beginning of the present fiscal year, April 1st.

To Hon. Charles Murphy the Prime Minister stated that the Government had not decided upon the rate of increase.

Canadians Better Than The Average

Rev. Dr. Chown Discussed Conditions in the Old Country

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, Superintendent of the Methodist church, who has just returned from a visit to the military hospitals in England, when questioned regarding the prevalence of certain diseases among Canadian soldiers, said: The Government of Great Britain seems to be indifferent to the utterly immoral conditions that prevail in certain parts of London, and they should be stirred up by the Canadian Government to safeguard our soldiers. The record of Canadian soldiers as compared with certain others in this regard, is very gratifying indeed. I think that our mothers can draw a great deal of comfort from the fact that their boys are leading purer lives than the average. In fact it is doubtful whether apart from the City of London and the outskirts of a few camps, there is any greater danger than if the boys were at home. A close examination of produced official statistics showed that 25 per cent. of the cases were brought over from Canada, 40 per cent. took place in London, 20 per cent. of the cases are relapses, and 12 to 15 per cent. are contracted in provincial towns.

IS FOOD CONTROLLER MISLEADING THE PEOPLE?

MONTREAL, August 28.—The Gazette, the leading Government organ, states editorially to-day: "That the announcement that the British Government will buy no more Canadian hogs or bacon indicates that either the Food Controller has misled the people of Canada or the British Government's action is due to the Canadian packers having dealt unfairly with them."

Le Canada charges Hon. Mr. Hanna's appointment as Food Controller is merely an attempt to throw dust in the eyes of the public while the profiteers are accumulating a stock of meat, poultry, eggs and vegetables. "The vampires of cold storage warehouse are quiet. No one will disturb them."

CORP. J. H. HAW.

Mrs. John Haw has received official word from Ottawa that her husband, Corp. J. H. Haw, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been wounded. Corp. Haw, who is well known in the city, enlisted and went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front. He was the teacher of a boys' Sunday School class at the Park Street Baptist Church, and the majority of the class have donned the khaki.

PTE. P. RATCHFORD

Pte. Patrick Ratchford who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion in February 1916 and went to Barriefield with the Peterborough County Battalion afterwards being transferred to a Canadian Pioneer Battalion at St. Andrews' N.B., is officially reported wounded and gassed. Pte. Ratchford left the 93rd Battalion in the same draft as Pte. S. C. Hartley who was yesterday reported gassed. He had lived in this district for a long period.

PTE. "BUTCH" GARBUTT

Pte. R. G. "Butch" Garbutt, a well-known and popular former member of the 93rd Battalion has been dangerously wounded in the recent fighting. Pte Garbutt went to England with the 93rd and afterwards was drafted to France. He is a brother of Mrs. R. P. Gollop, Charlotte street.

PTE. GORDON CARTER

Pte. Gordon Carter, son of Mrs. Wm. Carter, Bolivar street, who enlisted and went overseas with a Cobourg Battalion has been wounded, according to an official message received by his mother, which stated that he had been admitted to the 1st Canadian Hospital at Etaples, suffering from concussion of the knee.

PTE. ALBERT KENNEDY.

Mrs. B. N. Padgett, Edison Avenue, has been notified from Ottawa that her brother, Pte. Albert Kennedy, who left here with the 39th Battalion, has been admitted to No. Six Casualty Clearing Station, on August 18th, suffering from gunshot wounds in the side and arm. Pte. Kennedy was with the 20th Central Ontario Battalion at the front, acting as a stretcher bearer. This is the second time he has been in the casualty list. He was wounded in the head, in January last, and returned to the firing line in March.

PTE. A. RUTTER

Pte. Andrew Rutter who as reported in the Examiner yesterday has been wounded, was among the first to enlist with the 93rd Battalion and went overseas as a Sergeant in A Company. He had to revert to the ranks to go to France in a draft, and had been at the front for about eleven months with the 21st Battalion. His wife resides on Lake street.

CAPT. HALL REVERTS.

Capt. W. Gordon Hall who went overseas as officer in command of B Company of the 93rd Battalion and who has been in command of D. Company of the 6th Canadian Reserve Battalion at Seaford, Sussex, England has reverted to the rank of lieutenant and gone to France. He left for the front on August 15th and is detached to the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion.

Toronto, Aug. 27.—Big Bob Dibble, the U. S. and Canadian amateur single sculling champion, is in the hospital for the second time. In February, Dibble was buried and injured in the head and back by a minnewerfer up on the Vimy Ridge front. He went to "Blighty," but again returned to duty early in July. Saturday his father, Mr. Harry Dibble, of Woodbine Avenue, received a cable saying that his son had been again wounded. This time he is suffering from gunshot wounds in the head and thigh, and is reported to be in a critical condition. It is more than likely that Dibble was injured by machine gun fire during some of the advances in the outskirts of Lens. Another Toronto athlete on the injured list is Lieut. George Roper Gouinlock, who played on the Aura Lee and Varsity junior O.H.A. hockey teams when they won the championship in 1915 and 1916. He went to France with the Canadian Field Artillery. He was wounded and is now in a hospital in France. Gouinlock was probably the speediest rover in the junior series in 1915 and 1916.

London, Aug. 27.—Canadian soldiers who married since the war opened are naturally gratified with the new order-in-council which cancels the regulations requiring an engagement to marry to have existed prior to the war. The new order is retroactive, and wives are entitled to draw allowances due since the date of marriage. It is also provided that where a soldier neglects to apply for allowance, it may be done through the commanding officer.

London, Aug. 27.—Canadian forces have been withdrawn from Crowborough and the headquarters there closed down. As a consequence, the Canadian officers' hospital at the Limes, Crowborough, ceases to be operated as a Canadian military hospital.

A change has come over the various order sheets issued daily in the Canadian quarters, giving general routine and camp orders. Hitherto battalions when mentioned have been specified by number and thus

A WILD SCENE IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

Union Government Is Now Declared Dead as the Result of the Application of the Closure in the C. N. R. Discussion.

BITTERNESS MANIFEST

OTTAWA, Aug. 27. — Union Government died in Parliament to-night. The Government, for the first time since its creation and initial operation on the naval aid measure in March, 1918, invoked the closure to-night to force through the Canadian Northern purchase bill. It met a united opposition with two exceptions, from Liberalism. Liberals argued that a Government that was committed by its head to let the returned soldiers wait for permanent pension legislation till the new Parliament, had no right to force through a measure which, Hon. Charles Murphy charged, was designed to "help out" certain favoured financial interests.

There were stormy scenes. Sir Thomas White moved the postponement of further discussion of the first clause of the bill under rule 17 (the closure). Deputy Speaker Rainville, who was in the chair, attempted to put the motion, but was met with a vigorous chorus of protest. Hon. Dr. Pugsley maintained that the Finance Minister's motion required notice and was debatable, and on these grounds appealed from the ruling.

The House resumed with Speaker Rhodes in the chair, and, upon a straight party vote, with two exceptions, the ruling was sustained. Cries of "Clifford Sifton" greeted the vote of Mr. J. G. Turriff with the Government, and "Why don't you go over where you belong?" was the query hurled at Dr. Michael Clark, when he did likewise. With these two exceptions and that of Mr. R. B. Bennett (Conservative, Calgary), who left the House and did not vote, the division was on straight party lines, all the conscriptionist Liberals present voting or pairing with the Opposition. The division was 42 to 24, while, when the House resumed in committee, Sir Thos. White's closure resolution was carried by a vote of 46 to 30, the difference in the totals being due to "pairs" in the House division, which did not apply to a committee vote. The committee resumed at once the consideration of the additional clauses in the bill.

Bitterness was manifest. Before the closure was applied Mr. Murphy had charged that Sir Thomas White was appointed Minister of Finance by a group representing the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Canadian Northern Railway and the National Trust Company, of which the Finance Minister was then General Manager, and as a consequence this group received many favours from the Borden Government. After the vote was taken Dr. Pugsley warned Sir Thomas White that although he might "throttle discussion under the rule of the gag in the House of the people's representatives," he would hear from the people themselves

GERMANY'S LOSSES IN FLANDERS FIGHT HAVE BEEN HEAVY

Thirty of the Thirty-seven German Divisions Engaged Since July 1st Have Been Withdrawn on Account of Casualties

PRISONER'S STATEMENT

(By Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 28.—Germany has lost over $50,000 men in the Flanders battle alone since July 1st, according to figures completed to-day, when the assembling of data obtained from prisoners was completed. Prisoners said thirty-seven German divisions (approximately 555,000 men) had been engaged in the Flanders sector since the 1st of July. Thirty of these (approximately 470,000 men), have been withdrawn on account of losses. The German high command's usual practice is to withdraw a division for reorganization after its losses have taken from 2,000 to 2,500 men. Taking this as a basis it can be assumed that if Germany has withdrawn these divisions her losses must be anywhere from 60,000 to 75,000. Seven German divisions which were on the Flanders front on July 1st, are still there. These estimates of losses do not take into account the huge casualties which the enemy has sustained of late around Verdun and the Chemin Des Dames.

FOOD WASTE AT PETAWAWA

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Aug. 28.—A Perth traveller says the amount of waste of foodstuffs at Petawawa Camp was almost beyond belief. Beef, pork, beans, bread and other eatables were thrown in the garbage by tons. Three hundred pigs were not found equal to consuming the wastage, and the number is being increased by two hundred, according to the informant, who said that barrels of meat had been buried in order to be gotten out of the way.

VETERANS WILL MEET TO-NIGHT

Members of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veteran's Association are reminded of the important special meeting in the Barrie Building to-night. Several matters of importance are to come up and it is urged that as many members as possible should endeavour to turn out.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, AUG. 28, 1917

A GOOD MOVE.

Credit is due the government for its action in providing for the building of 6,000 cars for the governments railways, the G. T. R. the C. N. R., and other lines. Lack of rolling stock has been one of the important causes of unsatisfactory transportation conditions. The coal shortage of last winter was intensified, if not largely created, by the failure of the railways to move stocks through lack of cars. The estimated cost of $600,000, will be virtually met if the provision of sufficient rolling stock eases the coal situation and helps reduce prices, and avert shortage and popular suffering or discomfort.

It is in the power of governments to do many things the people cannot do for themselves.

PETERBOROUGH, TOO.

In the House on Friday, $8,000 was voted towards construction of a high level bridge in Ottawa, over the Rideau Canal. Hon. Mr. Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, explained, in justification, that the bridge will save the government the annual cost of operating a swing over the canal. The high level bridge is being built by the city of Ottawa, and will cost $100,000, to which the government gives $40,000. The government's contribution is reasonable, and right in principle. The high level bridge is built over a Dominion canal and its construction will, by dispensing with the maintenance of the swing, save $400 or $500 annually, equivalent to the yearly interest on far more than the total cost of the bridge.

This is a precedent which should justify the government in granting a liberal share of the cost of the proposed high-level bridge over the river at Hunter street. This will obviate the construction and maintenance of a swing at this point; and justify government help; for when the canal is completed, and the Quaker Oats plant in operation, the stretch of river from the Little Lake to the Quaker Oats dam will be one of the most important and vital parts of the Trent Canal. The Quaker Oats Company decided to rebuild in Peterborough on the assurance of the Government that the canal would be completed in a short time — doubtless within the time the new buildings are completed. This commits the government to recognition of the fact that the canal extends to the Quaker Oats Company's plant; and creates the obligation on the part of the government to give access for boats to the company's wharves, involving under ordinary circumstances, the construction and maintenance at Hunter street of a swing.

This expense will be saved and traffic purposes served by the erection of an overhead bridge. Considering the interest of the government in this bridge and the fact of the government help being extended to a similar but less important bridge over the Rideau canal, is a precedent that cannot in fairness be ignored in respect of our bridge. It would seem that Peterborough has a good claim for government help to bear a proportion of the cost of the overhead bridge at Hunter street.

The fact that the government has so far refused to give this help, should not prevent the city authorities from pressing Peterborough's claim upon the government to meet its palpable obligation to bear a substantial share of the cost of a work in the interest of canal navigation, to which it is committed by the facts as well as by the precedent of bearing a share of the cost of a less important bridge in Ottawa.

It is estimated that Canada's wheat crop this year—east and west—amounts to 260 million bushels.

A Jersey cow sold by auction in England recently for 470 guineas, which is said to be a record price for the breed in that country.

PRAISE OF CANADIANS.

While we all felt that Canadian soldiers in the work of war, would, as we expected they would do, cover themselves and their country with glory; while we are pleased to read of their courage and gallantry, we are not averse to hearing praise of their exploits from others. The French, good judges, with ample opportunity of observation, and themselves amongst the best of fighters, show their traditional chivalry by bearing testimony to the splendid work of the Canadian troops. The war correspondent of Le Petit Parisien writes to his journal thus:

"If it were known what human misery, abnegation and self-sacrifice were involved in those 1,300 metres of trenches recently captured. An enemy officer remarked of of hell, in which every German soldier fought like a wild beast, the people would be touched and thrilled an enemy officer remarked of the Canadians: 'Only once have I known a class of soldiers as brave and thoroughly trained, namely, Von Kluck's men in 1914.'"

When a Frenchman praises Canadians we are pleased and proud; when a German officer, trained from the cradle, to hold German soldiers as invincible, the greatest on earth, rates Canadian troops on a level with Germans—praise extorted by costly experience of Canadian valour and achievement, it becomes "praise from Sir Hubert." What Canadians are doing, what fame they are winning by winning battles, will be a continued story if Canada is true to them, and keeps up the supply.

The Kaiser's hatred of England comes from Britain's success in war—from her supremacy and growing superiority on sea and land and air.

MUNITION ORDERS AND WORKERS.

The munition worker who is making big wages is advised to turn farmer to the extent of "making hay while the sun shines." Owing to the fact that Britain has an immense surplus of munitions on hand and has abundant means of keeping up the supply of munitions, that country will give no further orders in Canada. This means that existing contracts unfilled will, for the immediate future at least, be all the munition making in Canada. Workers are therefore advised to make the most of their opportunities.

Munition workers have been getting very high wages for many months. These will soon be at an end; and those who still have work on unfinished contracts are urged to make the most of their opportunities, and lay by all they can, and those few who have saved money not to spend it in idleness but to seek other employment.

The Financial Post, a good authority, says that while wages will be cut as compared with munition work figures, there is likely to be no great lack of employment in other lines than munitions. But there will, of course, be a considerable reduction in wages. A large munition plant manager is quoted as saying that the "average munition worker who has been getting $3 to $4 per day and upward, will have to be content in other lines with $3 per day and downward." He adds that "when the demand for skilled labour increases, as it will do, they will be paid from $4 to $5 per day, and more."

It is probable that the demand for skilled labour will continue or come. Two of our large manufactories in Peterborough have virtually worked out of munition making and are busy upon their regular work, and have large orders to be filled. A Montreal locomotive works, which has been employing between 4,000 and 5,000 men, will, under the new order, or rather lack of orders, release about 3,000 men, but will retain a force of about 2,500 mechanics, which can be kept busy for a year on already booked orders. The release of 3,000 unskilled, or skilled only in parts, in one place, with similar releases all over the country, will relieve the labour shortage, and permit of many things being done that lack of labour has postponed.

The reduction of munition production will create somewhat of a revolution in conditions. A great number of men have been making "big money," and it is feared that in a large number of cases they have lived up to it, spent it freely in buying unduly luxurious necessaries of life, and unnecessary luxuries, like inordinate pleasures, and in the purchase of motor cars, and in a generally extravagant scale of living, which could only be justified if the golden stream of munition wages would last indefinitely. The expenditure among merchants, business men and others made possible, may be greatly decreased when the work ceases or considerably falls off.

It all depends upon munition workers themselves, whether or not the receipt of big munition wages has been a good thing for them. Those who have spent freely if not wisely, will in the process have acquired costly habits that will make the drop to normal conditions a considerable jar. Those who have been prudent, who have saved their money, and become capitalists, will have not only improved upon habits of thrift and saving, but will be able to make advantageous investments, when lack of capital will create demand.

The Kaiser has long held that he had a hereditary claim to the British throne—about as shaky as the tenure of his own throne.

Those Free And Easy Democrats

(By Alexander M. Thompson in The London Mail)

PETROGRAD.—Of all the peoples I have lived with, these Russians are by far the most essentially democratic.

Everybody talks to everybody with as complete freedom from class distinction as the sparrows. There is no suggestion of servility or superiority. The phenomenon of political discussions by motley groups in the Nevsky Prospekt is a marvel without precedent and a wonder without end.

Last night I listened through the medium of an interpreter to a debate between a recalcitrant common soldier and a man whose garb in England would have betokened a superior person, but whose tone here was that of a kindly father to an obstinate son. The argument was keen but, as in all cases, perfectly tempered. The bourgeois pleaded that the cause of the allies was the cause of the revolution and liberty. The soldier affably demurred. Two ladies in the crowd intervened, asking the soldier if he was not a volunteer. The soldier pleaded guilty, but smilingly declared that he did not know why he had joined. One of the ladies suggested that it was to defeat that German militarism which was the supreme danger to the world's peace and freedom. The soldier objected that he did not see much difference after all between being oppressed by Prussian militarism and by English capitalism.

Always "English capitalism" and "English capitalism"! Always the same answer—always "English capitalism." I am assured that this popular fear of our exploitation is quite a new product born of vague rumors obviously made in Germany as to England's recapious terms of usuary on the money advanced to Russia. Anyhow, it is universal. Would it not be well for the British government to issue a precise official statement as to the conditions of the loans?

Another example of Russian immunity from what vulgar friends in London call "side" was vouchsafed to me to-day in meeting the secretary of a minister whom I lately visited. The secretary had just returned from Helsingfors, where he had been negotiating with Finnish statesmen on Finland's projected rupture and was proceeding immediately to the Russian northern front. When I expressed the wish that I could accompany him he asked eagerly why I had not mentioned it before. His minister, who had started the previous day, would have been delighted to take me. When I explained that I had appointments detaining me in Petrograd he pressed me to accept the loan of his motor car and chauffeur, assuring me that he had no present use for them. And as I thought of some Whitehall members of the eternal Barnacle family I had met it was again borne in upon me that there is a simple, natural democratic free-and-easiness about these Russians which is exceeding ingratiating.

On the subject of Finland, when I ventured the opinion that the attitude of its government was not very friendly, my friend generously answered that Finland had not had much cause in the past to feel grateful to imperial Russia. Still, he reluctantly admitted that her government was causing difficulties for the young republic, and that instead of threatening immediate rupture it would have been better to wait for the efforts of the constituent assembly, which meets in September.

Returning to my own obsession, I called my friend's attention to the statement of the vice president of the economic department in the Finnish senate—that Finland's reluctance to lend money to Russia is due to the fear that the ruling classes in England will influence the Russian revolutionary democracy to the continuance of the war.

"Why," I asked, "this eternal blazon about England's warlike purposes? What is the cause of this invidious prejudice against England?"

My friend's reply was that there had been some feeling, due partly to the tone of some English papers, that Great Britain was not sympathetic to the revolution, but that the feeling was rapidly disappearing. As for needed prodding to continue the war, that might have been true when it seemed that Russia's army had gone to sleep; but, he continued with flashing eye and exultant tone, "we are now showing—and are about to show still more forcibly—that Russia is very much awake and is as keen for the defeat of Prussian militarism as any of the allies!" If the Germans ever hoped, and through Finnish friends spread the belief, that the Russians Socialists desired the acceptance of German domination, they may now bury that hope with others that have been rudely shattered in this war.

One demonstration of the Russian passion for freedom has affected me more familiarly than, but not quite so pleasantly as, some others. When I rang for my morning coffee on rising yesterday the boy who cleans—or, to be accurate, let us say wipes—the boots appeared, with the eternal cigarette between his lips and with a whistling noise accompanied by a sweeping gesture, and gleefully signified in cosmopolitan language that the whole staff had gone. The long threatened general strike of hotel and restaurant waiters had materialized.

The event had cast its shadow before in the shape of an excessively large, elderly chambermaid who some days before demanded largesse. I answered that it was my habit to lavish my benefactions on departure; whereupon she smiled bitterly and signified that in view of the revolution she wanted it weekly in advance. When I feebly inquired how much she wanted she answerd that for herself and the bedroom waiter she wanted 15 per cent. of my total bill. In my revolutionary zeal I capitulated to this rather large demand, but diplomatically entreated that, as she had never yet done anything for me, she would condescend in return to darn a small hole in a sock from the laundry. To this bumble request she indignantly replied that this was not her business and bounced out before I had time to pay.

Now she is the leading lady in the latest addition to the endless array of proletarian processions in the Nevsky Prospekt, and, as I immediately left the hotel for private life, I saved my money. The episode is small, but the intimately trivial may express more than the distantly colossal.

A Wild Scene in the House of Commons

"more of this iniquitous deal." Mr. Murphy demanded that, before more of the public money was voted, "Mackenzie and Mann and Walker and Lash be eliminated."

"This bill and the resolution preceding it has been under discussion for many days in this House," said the Finance Minister in moving closure. "The discussion which has taken place here to-day is really discussion pertaining to the second reading rather than to the first clause of this bill. We have made no progress in committee. The transaction, of course, is important, but unless members of Parliament are going to be here all summer we must make progress. I, therefore, beg to move that further consideration of clause one be postponed, and clause two be taken up."

DR. PUGSLEY CHALLENGES RULE.

"Under what rule?" asked Hon. Dr. Pugsley.

Sir Thomas White (in an undertone)—It's closure.

Dr. Pugsley—Mr. Chairman—— (Cries of "Order, order," and "Sit down.")

After the Deputy Speaker had read the rule (Rule 17 A) Dr. Pugsley said: "This motion cannot be made without notice. The question is still under consideration, I submit respectfully, until the Minister gives notice."

The Deputy Speaker—The question is on the motion.

Dr. Pugsley (amid cries of "Order and "Sit down")—I appeal from your ruling. I appeal to the House. This cannot be done without notice.

"It won't be done, either," added Hon Mr. Lemieux.

"Let the Prime Minister give his opinion," observed Mr. Charles Wilson of Laval. But the Premier sat silent. "He can't; he's too much bothered with union Government," commented Mr. Gauvreau (Temiscouata.)

The vote was then taken on clause one.

WILD DISORDER, NEARLY A RIOT.

Wild scenes of angry disorder, which threatened at one time to terminate in a riot, swept Parliament to-night. Amid shouts of "Call in the police!" and a tumult and angry roar above which no words could be heard, Sir Thomas White and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux were both on their feet, quivering with passion, and gesticulating at one another and at Deputy Speaker Rainville. A moment later, Hon William Pugsley, backed by Opposition cheering and Government hooting, was out in the middle of the floor, facing the manifestly nervous Deputy Speaker, and demanding recognition from the Chair for Mr. L. J. Gauthier (St. Hyacinthe), who was endeavoring to address the House.

Passion ran riot in the Chamber, and both sides roared personalities and insults at one another. The din at times was deafening, and nothing beyond the babel of shouts could be heard in the Press Gallery. Bitterness and trouble had been brewing all night, but the storm broke shortly before midnight, when, under the closure rule, Sir Thomas White endeavored to take the floor from Mr. Gauthier, and was recognised by the Chairman.

Sir Thomas White gesticulated angrily, but could not be heard. "Shame," "Coward," "Serve your masters, the big interests." "Call in Lash to tell him what to say," were among the shouts heard from the Opposition side. "Give the plain people a chance once in a while, Mr. Millionaire Financier," was Mr. Ethier's taunt, amid mingled cheers and groans.

The uproar was even greater on the Government side when Messrs. Pugsley and Lemieux endeavored to be heard.

"All the Government railways should be put under one board of managment independent of political control, and operated on a strictly commercial basis, in the interests of the public," said Mr. W. M. German, who opened the discussion. "The combined systems" he claimed "could be operated with commercial success, instead of being a gigantic failure, as the Intercolonial Railway has been. If the public ownership of these railways is to be a success the principal thing is to get away to a good start."

Mr. German added that his contention was that the C.N.R. stock had no value, and that, therefore, there was nothing to refer to a board of arbitrators. The Minister of Finance stated last Thursday that he could very easily explain why proceedings should not be taken under Section 24 of the legislation of 1914 to get control of the C.N.R. property. He would be glad to get that information from the Finance Minister, because he himself could see no reason why the Government should not proceed under the 1914 legislation to acquire the railway. The Drayton-Acworth Commission had reported that the stock of the company had no value at all. Therefore, the Canadian Northern should hand over the stock without any payment at all. The Commissioners not only said that the stock had no value, but they also said that the liabilities against the company were many millions more than the property was worth. They did suggest there might be a sort of honorarium to Mackenzie and Mann for their time and trouble, and the "Gag them." "Shut up." "Rats." "Conscript them." "Throw them out." were among the shouts directed at the Liberals.

TO TRAVEL PRIVATELY

Parliamentary Under-Secretaries Are to Use Private Cars When They Are Needed.

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—Government war-time economy received its latest exemplification in Parliament Saturday. Parliamentary Under-Secretaries are, according to the statement of Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, to travel in private Government cars when they want them, providing the cars are available.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

KEEPING A RESOLUTION

By MARGARET C. DEVEREAUX

The day I was graduated from the medical school—the only woman in my class—dear old Dr. Phillips, who handed me my diploma, said to me, with a smile:

"There it is, my dear. But it will do you no good."

"Why do you say that, doctor?" I asked, much disconcerted.

"Some young fellow will induce you to marry him, and you will have no time to practice a profession which, if practiced properly, will require all your time."

I was young and headstrong. Moreover, I had spent years preparing myself for my vocation. I grasped the doctor's hand and, raising my other, dramatically said:

"I promise you, Dr. Phillips, that I will devote my life to the sick. I make this pledge that it shall be impossible for me to go back on my profession."

I shall never forget the kindly smile or the twinkle of the eye with which the good doctor received this vow. I strutted out of the room and as I closed the door behind me shut off part of what he said:

"I'll bet you don't practice three"—

I tried to get a position that would give me hospital work, but, failing in this, hung up my shingle as a general practitioner. I had been practicing but a few months when an elderly lady came to my office and said that she would like me to treat her son. From her description of his disease I thought that it was probably melancholia. The young man was up and about and attending to business. I therefore suggested that he call at my office during my consultation hours. But his mother said that it was she who desired the services of a physician for her son and she could only succeed in submitting him to treatment and insisted on my going to the house. Besides, she wished him to see a woman physician, whereas if he went to an office he would probably go to a man.

This argument prevailed, and it was agreed that I was to call the next day after 5 in the afternoon, when the young man—Dick his mother called him—had returned from business. I made the call, was received by the lady and introduced to the patient. There was that about him which reminded me of some one else, but I could not tell who the other person was. He did not appear to be ill, but appearances are often deceptive.

I plied him with questions, which he seemed disinclined to answer, and I succeeded in getting very little out of him. All I could do was to recommend that he take out of door exercise and have what society he relished. His mother was present during the interview, and when I arose to depart she put her arms about me and said:

"Help us out by giving us your company occasionally as well as your professional services, won't you? Dick won't go out, and I know no young persons to invite to the house."

I could give no definite reply to this, of course, and simply bowed assent.

"Oblige me by staying to dinner with us," continued the old lady, and she began quietly to remove my hat and coat. I made but a faint resistance, and we were soon enjoying ourselves at table. For my life I could see no sign of illness in Dick, who was very entertaining and charmed me with his conversation.

I am not going to give the history of my professional treatment of my patient, Richard Ashley, for mingled with it is a love story of which he is the hero and I the heroine. He was never ill, though he led me to suppose that there was a nervous weakness about him that did not appear on the surface. I studied his case for months, trying different remedies, which I had my doubts he ever took. Finally I found myself so deeply in love that I was ready to sacrifice my profession for him. Indeed, the great problem of my life became, not how to cure him, or any one else, for that matter, but to appropriate him to myself. It was I rather than he who suffered from a peculiar disease. If any attractive young woman came near him I was seized with a terrible anxiety lest some other woman should take him away from me.

However, time proved that these fears were groundless, for one evening after one of my visits to him and I had been invited to dinner his mother left us alone together in the library, and what I so desired was clinched by a proposal.

As soon as our engagement was made known to the members of our respective families congratulations began to come in. "His sisters and his cousins and his aunts" called on me, and they were all not only very gracious to me, but regarded me with an amused curiosity. One day who should come to see me but my old preceptor, Dr. Phillips, to whom I had made the pledge not to marry. I could not escape him, so I faced him. He was brimming over with amusement.

"You little humbug!" he said. "I knew you would not be saved for the medical profession, so I resolved to get you into my family. I told my nephew about you and your pledge, suggesting that he make you break it. He has done his work beautifully, though his mother has been of great assistance to him."

"You miserable, mean, good for nothing"—

I threw myself into the dear old man's arms.

STOP HEADACHES BEFOREHAND

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

Two generations of healthy, vigorous people have done this by taking one pill at bedtime, regularly—a larger dose when nature gives the warning.

Playgrounds Are Closing

Exhibition of Industrial Work at Central School Wednesday and King Edward Thursday

The Central School playgrounds will close Wednesday afternoon with an exhibition of the industrial work done by the girls, and an ice cream cone treat to all the youngsters. Tickets are being given out to the boys and girls which will entitle them to one free cone. Additional cones can be bought at five cents each.

The King Edward playgrounds will follow the same programme on Thursday afternoon. The parents are invited to come and enjoy the afternoons with the children.

We believe that playground work and all organization and direction of youthful activities and even recreation for old as well as young is more necessary at this time than at any other.

We believe with Sir Robert Baden-Powell of England, the founder of the Boy Scouts and famous general and educator, that "The war will be decided in 1935. The true victory will not lie so much in the actual tactical gains on the battle field to-day as in the quality of the men who have to carry on the work of the country after the war. War kills off the best of the nation's manhood; therefore extra care must be exercised to save every child, not for its sake but for the sake of the nation."

Seeing that our boys and girls get a large part of their education through organized and supervised play seems to us a patriotic duty fully as important as planting a war garden, and as fully deserving of the same amount of time, effort and money.

But we still hear someone say, but such time and money was not spent on us in our day. Too true, and we look at ourselves, and in all truthfulness we can say more is the pity. Come to the playgrounds and see for yourself.

Bacon and Beef Absent From The Boston Cafe Menu

To-day's menu at the Boston Cafe indicated a strict observance of the new food law. Mr. Douros stated that he intended to follow it to the very letter. On all days except Tuesdays and Fridays beef and bacon are served at only one meal. The following bill of fare shows an absence of beef and bacon:

DIED WHILE UNDERGOING OPERATION FOR TONSILITIS

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 27.—Mary Evelyn Hutchinson, a bright thirteen year old school girl, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hutchinson, of the fifth concession of Thurlow, died very suddenly this morning in Foxboro, collapsing while undergoing an operation for tonsilitis. At the same time her twin-sister Muriel was successfully operated upon for the same trouble. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson are heartbroken over the death of the child.

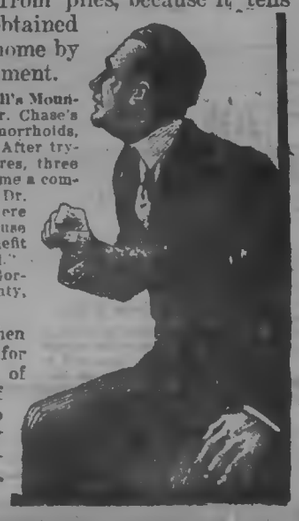
HOOVER TO SAVE MILLIONS ON SUGAR

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Herbert Hoover, the Food Administrator, has reached an agreement with the beet sugar producers which, he announced, would mean shortly a reduction of approximately one and one-half cents a pound to the consumer, or a saving of about $30,000,000 between now and the first of the next year. Mr. Hoover also predicts a further drop in sugar prices when the Cuban supply is available.

Piles Cured By Dr. Chase's Ointment

IT is a surprise to many to learn that there is any cure for piles short of a surgical operation. The doctors have encouraged this idea until the sufferer from this annoying ailment lives in constant dread of the surgeon's knife.

This letter from Mr. Campbell carries a message of good cheer to all sufferers from piles, because it tells how relief and cure can be obtained in the quiet of your own home by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.



Mr. Donald M. Campbell, Campbell's Mountain, N.S., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment with great success for hemorrhoids, or piles, of fifteen years' standing. After trying all kinds of so-called pile cures, three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment gave me a complete cure. I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and there are no others so good. You may use this letter, if you wish, for the benefit of others who may suffer as I did."

(Sworn before me, Murdoch Gordon Campbell, J.P., in the County, and for Inverness County.)

You are not experimenting when you use Dr. Chase's Ointment, for it has an unparalleled record of cures to back it up. Beware of imitations and treatments said to be "just as good." They only disappoint. 60c a box. At dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

FIRE DESTROYS BARNS AND CROPS

Disastrous Blaze on the Farm of Wm. McLaren, Cavan

On Saturday while Messrs. Fisher Bros. were threshing for Mr. Wm. McLaren, Cavan, North, fire broke out in the barn and before it was gotten under control the barn and all the crops except about fourteen acres of oats which had not been cut, were destroyed. A cultivator and set of sleighs, four pigs and twenty hens were also burned. Mr. McLaren's loss will be very heavy as he had no insurance. The barn belongs to Mr. Robt. Syers of Millbrook. The threshers had just completed threshing at Mr. Armstrong's, and had been at work about an hour at Mr. McLaren's when the fire broke out.

120 Casualties In Petrograd Explosion

Special to The Examiner:

Petrograd, August 27.—Three factories in the south-eastern portion of the city were burned to-day as the result of an explosion. One hundred and twenty persons were killed or injured.

Petrograd, August 27. — General Korniloff, the commander in chief of the Russian army, informed the press that he intends to make a report on the military situation to the conference at Moscow and hoped that important resolutions would be adopted.

WOMEN OF ENGLAND CHANGED BY WAR

(From the London Daily Mail)

War has done strange things to women, it has made of thousands of them home-makers and home-lovers. In the days of peace there was a great restlessness, a craving for club or corporate life, but out of the confusions and disruptions of war has been born a deep longing for quiet things and for the solitude of the home.

Clubs and hotels for women were popular three years ago, especially those which were run on common sense lines without annoying rules and restrictions. Because so many women must live in London to-day, and because there is so little room for them, most of these hostels are full. But they are now unpopular. They are regarded as useful stopgaps. In the heart of almost every hostel-dweller, however, there burns the secret desire for a little house of her own, a house that is utterly unconnected with marriage and motherhood.

The dream of lifehood that shone as a star for so many girls before the war has faded away. Happy mating is the remotest of possibilities for hundreds of thousands of women workers to-day. Women have given not only their husbands to the battlefield, and so it is that the dream-home of to-morrow is one in which the man has no part.

GRAIN FAST RIPENING.

Cutting General in Alberta Next Week—Sufficient Labour.

EDMONTON, Aug. 27. — Weather conditions during the past week have been ideal for ripening and filling the grain. There have been two or three hailstorms, one of which did considerable damage over a somewhat extended territory where splendid crops were ready to harvest. Harvest operations are quite general throughout the eastern and southern part of the province, with fair yields and good sample grain, but harvesting won't be general throughout the whole province until the middle or end of the week. Harvest operations are in full swing throughout the Peace River district, which continues to report very optimistic conditions. Labour conditions are now quite satisfactory.

CARPENTIER BROKE HAD BOUGHT COAL MINES NEAR LENS

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Georges Carpentier, champion heavyweight boxer of Europe, who is the idol of France, both as a fighter and an aviator, is expected to arrive in America soon to give the flying men the benefit of his great experiences in the air. He is expected to mix a little boxing with his aviation duties.

Carpentier declared when the war broke out that he would not engage in any boxing for his own benefit until peace terms were signed and has plainly stated that any money he receives from his boxing exhibitions he will give to the Red Cross fund. Georges has been made practically penniless during the war, for the fortune he had made in the ring he invested in the coal mines at Lens. He also bought a home for his parents, whom he has not seen since the war began.

Jack Johnson, formerly heavyweight champion of the world, is still hanging out in Barcelona. The negro has filled out considerably and is making ends meet in Spain, for he is a great favorite with the people there, both in the bull ring, and in the boxing ring. He has a cafe in a fine neighbourhood, managed by his wife.

HALF OF GERMANY'S WEALTH GONE IN WAR

AMSTERDAM—The Munich Independent Committee for German Peace again strongly protests in the press against a peace without indemnity. It shows that the public wealth of Germany just previous to the beginning of the war was estimated at about 360,000,000,000 marks ($90,000,000,000) of which half has been dissipated by war expenditures. To pay interest on the redemption of that huge loss, the committee says, it would be necessary to rais by taxation 12,000,000,000 marks ($3,000,000,000) annually, whereas the imperial budget heretofore has been only 2,500,000,000 marks ($975,000,000), and it is impossible to raise if beyond 6,000,000,000 marks ($1,500,000,000).

Strong Protest Is Made By Belgians

Deportations Are Still Continuing—"German Decrees Completely Overturn Belgian Law and Gravely Attack the Belgian Constitution" Says Protest.

HAVRE, Aug. 27.—The Belgian Government has addressed a long and earnest protest to allied and neutral Governments against German violations of international and moral law in the redistricting of Belgium so that it will have two Governments and two capitals instead of one, and in deporting or arresting Belgian officials who resigned their positions rather than continue in office under the new regime.

The protest begins by the citation of article 43 of the fourth Hague convention, according to which an occupying power must, in so far as it is possible, govern occupied territory in conformity with the territory's own law. The protest then points out that this clause was violated by the Germans, March 21, 1917, by a decree creating two administrative regions with capitals at Brussels and Namur, and by decrees of April 13 and June 9 and 10, confirming the execution of the March pronouncements. These decrees, says the protest, completely overturn Belgian law and gravely attack the Belgian constitution, which divides Belgium into provinces and places the capital at Brussels.

"The measures have only the goal of serving German interests to the detriment of Belgium and creating a schism between the Belgians."

The protest concludes as follows: "In the presence of systematic flagrant violation of international law by the acts denounced above, the Belgian Government protests solemnly against the administrative separation which the occupying power is forcibly establishing in Belgium and against acts of violence to which functionaries are subjected who exercise their inconteatable right to refuse to lend their hand to what they consider injustice and unjustifiable measures. The Belgium Government denounces this new violation of human rights to the allied and neutral Governments who subscribed their signatures to the convention concerning the laws and customs of war on earth."

DEPORTATIONS STILL CONTINUE.

HAVRE, Aug. 26.—It is officially announced by the Belgian Government that the Germans have ordered the Bank of Courtrai, West Flanders, to transfer its funds immediately to Brussels.

About a thousand Flemish civilians have been deported to Zeebrugge to do work of a military nature, according to the official announcement. Civilians also are being similarly employed at Blankenberghe and near the Dutch border. Near Ypres the Germans are requisitioning barges in large numbers, but 55 out of 60 boatmen at that point have refused to work for the Germans, despite promises of good pay.

At Malines all walnut woods have been requisitioned to make rifle butts.

AUSTRIAN DIVISIONS DECIMATED

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Eleven Austrian army divisions have been decimated in the Italian sweep along the Isonzo front. The condition in Austria is bordering on a panic.

CANADA'S CATTLE NOW TO TRAVEL TO UNITED STATES

That's What Local Packing Men Say Will Be Effect of British Order

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—"Canada is completely cut off from the British market—there is no doubt about that," declared the manager of a Toronto packing firm in discussing the reported order of the British Food Controller, Lord Rhondda, that no more bacon or hogs will be bought by the British Government from Canada.

"We have not solved the philosophy of it yet," said one leading packer, "but one thing we do know—it is going to be a mighty serious thing for Canada. Some of the newspapers seem to treat it as a serious thing only to a few employers. It's far more than that. It affects the entire live stock industry of Canada, for that industry is bound up closely with, and is dependent on, the packing industry."

Drive Cattle to the United States.

"Further it involves the livelihood of thousands of workers in Canada, and may possibly throw them out of employment.

"Do you know what effect this order will have" he went on. "It's going to drive the Canadian cattle across the boundary on the hoof, and that means that the packing will be done in the United States instead of in Canada. The recent Department of Labour report and the publicity given to packing industry matters by the press have dealt a heavy blow at Canadian trade."

It's a Big Trade.

The following table of the trade of the packing firms of Canada in 1916 gives some idea of the size of the business which now loses its British market. The figures are:

Purchased by Packing Companies.

158,848,834 pounds pork at 15 cents, 125,605,834 pounds of bacon at 15.76 cents per pound 14,383,485 pounds of ham at 19.20 cents per pound.

Sold by Packing Companies.

123,686,256 pounds of pork at 16.85 cents. 151,309,429 pounds of bacon at 20.34 cents, 14,390,367 pounds of ham at 21.32 cents.

Export by Packing Companies.

Bacon, 144,918,867 pounds; ham, 8,732,857 pounds; pork, 1,990,856 pounds.

What Will Hanna Do Now?

How the British order will affect the regulation of Food Controller Hanna, banning bacon on Tuesdays and Fridays, remains to be seen. The Star tried vainly to get in touch with Mr. Hanna to-day to get his view on the matter in its new aspect. Packing men refused to venture an opinion as to what Mr. Hanna might do now. They admitted, however, that if the local stocks of bacon piled up now there would not be the same reason for keeping bacon off the breakfast table.

GOOD WORK OF PETERBORO' SOLDIER ATHLETES IN ENGLAND

The London (Eng.) Sporting Life of August 13th gives a most interesting account of the athletic meet for the overseas military forces of Canada in the British Isles, held at Seaford, Sussex, in which two Peterborough athletes, Capt. R. W. Frank and Sergt. Charlie Thorpe made a splendid showing. Speaking of the Peterborough men "Sporting Life" says:

In the field events the performances generally were quite good. The honours, generally, fell to Capt. R. W. Frank, who, indeed, did so well in these as to win the individual points trophy with a high jump of 5 feet 8 1- inches, a shot put of 36 feet, 7 1-4 inches, and a hammer throw of 127 feet, 9 1-2 inches, he proved himslef an all-round champion.

In regard to Sergt. Thorpe, the London Journal says: "The mile winner, Sergt. Thorpe, had an equally easy journey and could have knocked a good deal off the 4 mins., 47 2-5 secs. which he put up, had occasion demanded.

Sergt. J. H. Massey, the old Birchfield man, was somewhat fancied, but after getting up to his men was not placed. Sergt. Thorpe led throughout the last lap and won by twelve yards. Gunner Lawrence, Hastings, was second; Pte. Marsh, Seaford, third; Pte. H. S. Jackson, Witley, fourth; Lieut. E. J. Le Blanc, Shoreham, fifth, and Q.M.S. H. M. Williams, London sixth."

Thorpe also started in the three-mile cross country race, but had the misfortune to sprain his foot in the second mile when well up with the leaders.

MUNITION FIRMS MAY NOW DO SHIPBUILDING

SOME FIRMS TO STOP.

Borden Says He will not Produce Baptie Report in House.

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—Before the orders of the day were called W. F. Maclean of South York, referred to a Toronto despatch to the effect that the British food administrator had stated that the import of Canadian bacon and hogs products will cease from this forward. Had the Government anything to say on the matter?

The Prime Minister stated that he knew nothing of the matter, excepting what he had seen in the papers.

Mr. Maclean also referred to the fact that it was reported that the purchase of munitions in Canada had largely ceased.

Sir Thos. White read a memo from the Imperial Munitions Board, in which it was stated that toward the close of 1916 it was decided in Great Britain that it was no longer necessary to continue the purchase of munitions from the United States excepting for a few special lines. Now it had been considered unnecessary to continue manufacture and purchase on the present scale in Canada. On certain lines a slackening down had been decided upon. In others a complete cutting off had been ordered, while in the case of others a continued output at the old rate had been decided upon. In others a complete cutting off had been ordercomplete cutting off had been ordered, while in the case of others a continued output at the old rate had been decided upon. In some cases it would be necessary for firms to stop work. Such firms, however, were in many cases now preparing for shipbuilding or other useful war work In some cases night work would cease. In others plants would continue at the usual capacity.

Sir Thomas stated that to date Canada had made advances to the Imperial Munitions Board for the purchase of munitions in Canada to the amount of $285,000,000, while the banks had advanced $100,000,000.

Big Staff Increases.

Sir George Perley had taken charge of the other side staff in England, had increased tremendously. Sir Robert read a further cable, which showed that while the administrative staff in December, 1916, numbered 125 officers and 568 men, in August, 1917, it numbered 139 officers and 486 men.

Sir Thomas White referred to an item appearing in the Regina Leader which he declared did a grave injustice to the Bank of Montreal. In this item it was represented that the bank received $1,750,000 for the flotation of the latest Canadian war loan in the United States.

BIG FLEET OF DESTROYERS

Secretary of United States Navy Will Ask for $350,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels expects to submit to Congress this week estimates of $350,000,000 for a great fleet of destroyers.

The money will be used to expand existing shipbuilding plants and also to build additional engine and boiler factories, as the destroyer programme upon which the shipbuilding industry is now engaged represents the full capacity of the industry. Navy designers are preparing plans for a standardized destroyer to facilitate the quantity production.

New destroyers will be delivered so rapidly, beginning early next year, that the supply of trained officers and men will be taxed in putting them into commission.

REBEL AT DISCIPLINE.

Revolutionary Committees in Russia Incensed at New Orders.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—A despatch from Odessa to the Times says the Revolutionary Committees there are much incensed at accidentally discovering a new army disciplinary code, which is being prepared by a special military board. The committees declare such a step anti-democratic; demand that the board be suppressed, and another one representing the committee formed.

WHY THE TRENT CANAL SHOULD BE FINISHED AT ONCE

To the Editor of The Examiner:
RE TRENT CANAL.

Dear Sir,—All the people of Canada have heard of this so called Canal. The subject has been before the Dominion Parliament very many times. Huge deputations have gone to Ottawa from time to time to advocate the early construction of this great waterway. The old men of the country know much about it. The young men have heard often of it, but very few people understand it, and, for their enlightment, I give a short sketch of the scheme.

Prior to 1837, the year of the rebellion, there were no railways in Canada and the men of that early day looking at the map saw that there lay between the Georgian Bay at the point about where Midland is and from thence, south easterly, a chain of waters, which, if utilized and made navigable, would afford direct connection between Trenton and Midland. These waters were examined by a Civil Engineer called Baird, who reported that it would be possible to utilize them by a canal which would connect the Bay of Quinte at Trenton and the Georgian Bay at a point near Midland. The Government employed Mr. Baird. He made surveys and plans and estimates, and so feasible was the scheme, and so available for a large traffic by water and at such a small cost, that steps were taken to construct what is commonly called the Trent Canal. This Canal would follow up the Trent River to Campbellford, thence into Rice Lake at Hastings; thence continuing west through Rice Lake to the Otonabee River, which is really the northern part of the Trent River, and should never have been named otherwise. Following up this River to Peterborough and thence to Lakefield the canal would enter the link of lakes known as Katchawanooka, to Young's Point; thence it locked into Clear Lake, on through Clear and Stony Lakes into Chemong Lake, through Chemong Lake then by Bobcaygeon in Sturgeon Lake, through Sturgeon Lake via Fenelon Falls, into Cameron Lake; thence dropping down into Lake Simcoe and down to the River into Georgian Bay. The whole length from Trenton to Gorgian Bay being miles, of which two-thirds would be through open lakes and open rivers. Baird estimated the cost of a five foot canal at five or six millions of dollars, but that was in the early days when wages were low and five feet was considered all the depth that could be got. The rebellion broke out in 1837. The money that was appropriated by the Government for the construction of this Canal was taken to quell the rebellion. In following years the Welland Canal was constructed, railways were built and conditions changed so that, apparently, the urgency for the Canal and not so great as in the earlier day, but other conditions changed. The Great West was discovered. It had become part of Canada. The settlement of the lands occurred. Then commercial interests were developed. Port Arthur and Fort William became the largest shipping ports in the world for grain. The tonnage on the Great Lakes became greater than the tonnage on the Suez Canal. Railway charges are necessarily high and the three transcontinental railways are unable to meet the requirements of the country. The Trent Canal is needed much more to-day than in 1837. Eight or ten millions of dollars have been expended on this canal. Three fourths of the work has been done. The greatest lift-lock in the world is on it and the second lift-lock, a little smaller than the greatest, is also on it. The capital that has been spent on it is useless as the canal is blocked at both ends Two or three millions of dollars will complete it. Sir John McDonald's Government adopted it as a Government measure, but for reasons that no one can understand the work has not progressed but has apparently been deliberately blocked, and the money sunk in it is bringing no return. The Government is trifling with the people. When questions are asked as to when it will be opened they give answers that are evasive and not such as would come from a business body to business people. The people are being aroused and the question is asked, who controls this country, the railways or the Dominion Government? The delay in the construction of the canal cannot be explained, and is not explained, but the people put two and two together and simply say the Erie Canal had to fight the railways of New York State their struggle to get the first Erie Canal and in their resent struggle to get the now building enlarged Canal. They fought the railways and beat them. It will become a fight in this country. It is said on good authority that the Trent Canal with eight feet draft of water, the great open lakes and rock bound rivers will have a larger carrying capacity than the new Erie Canal, which is costing about fifty millions of dollars and that the motives that are holding back the construction of our canal must be inquired into and the people will have to be satisfied that it is proper to let all the millions that have been expended be there while the people are demanding a greater outlet from the west and in short the enlargement of the spout that the grain our people are raising, in the West may get to the sea board and the railways controlled in their charges.

This thing can stand as it is no longer, and the quicker it is attended to the quicker will the wants of this country be supplied, and the people satisfied.

It is said the wasteful delay in completing this great water way can only be explained by attributing it to railway influences, the railways fought the original Erie Canal. The later and greater Erie Canal now approaching completion, but the people of the great state of New York fought them to a finish and beat them. Our greater Dominion seems to have been an easy conquest by the apparently omnipotent railway companies who have bled the Dominion white, while the need of three or four million dollars has been allowed to block a water way of more value to Canada than the Erie to the State of New York.

How long, Oh Lord, how long?

ALBERT BROWN COMING SOON

Famous Canadian Actor Will Be Seen in New Romantic Play

The gifted and universally popular actor, Albert Brown, will show Canadians a new phase of his art this season and is making a sumptuous production of Paul Kester's beautiful romantic play, "The Love of a King." "When Knighthood was in Flower," an earlier work of Kester's, made a fortune for Julia Marlowe and is still a household word among playgoers, and his new play is regarded by critics as an even more brilliant achievement. It deals in a drastic, yet idyllic way with the love story of George, Prince of Wales (afterwards George III) and the pretty Quakeress Hannah Lightfoot. Though the plot is founded on fact the play is no dry historical treatise. It is a charming mingling of comedy and sentiment and shows George as the princeliest of lovers, and later as the most unhappy of old men.

In presenting the piece Mr. Brown is satisfying his ambition to show Canadian playgoers the best that is in him and demonstrate the lights and shades of his art. He feels that the time is ripe for a revival of costume plays alive with colour and based on manliness and sentiment, in contrast to the melodramas and farces of a realistic kind which have been so popular of late years. Such a play is "The Love of a King," and in it Mr. Kester has provided him with the opportunity of a lifetime. It must be remembered that George before he became involved in the cares of state, was one of the most popular princes in the annals of British royalty and it is in this aspect that he is shown. A large and carefully selected company will present the piece, and for the role of Hannah Mr. Brown has secured Lenore Phelps, one of the most beautiful and talented ingenues on the American stage.

Mr. Brown's bookings include all the Canadian towns and cities he has visited the past two seasons and his innumerable admirers are assured of a refreshing treat.

The Peterborough date is Sept. 15.

LEFT ARMY TO PERISH

Russian War Minister Sent Promises But No Munitions.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 27.—Gen. Yanushevich, formerly chief of the general staff, testifying before the Cassation Department of the Senate at the trial for high treason of General Soukhomlinoff, the former Minister of War, and the Minister's wife, charged with being an accomplice, drew a graphic description of the terrible position of the Russian army when it suddenly found itself almost completely without shells or rifles. Urgent demands by the hundreds, he said, were sent to Soukhomlinoff, but all were answered simply by reassuring promises, and nothing was done.

Russian soldiers perished in masses.

THE WAR NEEDS OF CANADA

THE NEED THAT CONSCRIPTION BE BY SELECTIVE DRAFT

BY BENJAMIN ANTHORP GOULD

TWO

The Militia Act has been the law of Canada for more than a dozen years. It recognizes clearly, as does the Military Service Act of 1917, that in time of war all citizens are liable to be called upon for service. It also recognizes that the defence of Canada may require the services of Canadian soldiers outside of Canadian territory. It recognizes the possibility of what this war has proved to have developed into an actual fact, that the first line ofCanadan defence lies in the trenches of France.

It is evident, therefore, that there is no difference in fundamental principle between the Militia Act and the Conscription Act which the present Government intends to enforce. Yet this Militia Act was adopted by a government of which Sir Wilfrid Laurier was Prime Minister.

The Militia Act, however, is not suitable for the present emergency, not because it is not drastic enough —in fact it is far more drastic than the Act of 1917—and not because in principle it is at all inconsistent with the latter Act, but because the methods provided for its operation are no longer suited to the requirements of the country. When the Militia Act was adopted no one realized that a great modern war, if of any considerable length, must be fought by the effective organization and co-operation of all the people of the nation, and cannot be successfully carried on merely by the military forces. The provisions of the Militia Act were only designed to obtain the necessary reinforcements for the army, and neglected to protect the productive abilities of the nation from damage by the loss of necessary men. At the time this law was drawn up, no one foresaw that the injury to the real military effectiveness of the nation by the withdrawal of skilled men from essential industries might be greater than the aid given by drafting these men to the active military forces. In other words, the law did not provide against making the same mistake made both in England and in France at the beginning of the war, when patriotic volunteers were accepted for the army without due consideration of their economic importance in their trades or professions. Subsequently it was found necessary to bring back and return to mufti a large number of men who enlisted, because the needed support of the army required their services at home.

If the provisions of the Militia Act should be put into force it would be merely a matter of chance whether the men drafted were not doing greater injury to Canada by leaving their positions than good by serving in the army. There exists in it no sufficient means for selecting the men for the draft other than their physical and mental qualifications to serve as soldiers.

The important difference between the Militia Act and the present Conscription Act is, therefore, that the latter seeks to take only such men as can be spared from the necessary work in Canada. It does not change the existing law in any way insofar as it recognizes the right of the Government to demand military service. It seeks to provide that the men who are doing their full share toward winning the war in their civilian activities shall not be taken, but that those of military age and fitness who are not engaged in necessary pursuits shall be obliged to serve. The men who are useful to Canada at present must remain to continue their usefulness. Those men on the other hand who are useless in their present activities must be made useful by service in the army.

The result of a wise enforcement of the law of 1917 will therefore be to obtain necessary recruits only from those places from which they can be spared. We all know that there are many such men in Canada and nearly all of us feel that these men should be compelled to make a return in service for the benefits of citizenship which they enjoy.

The haphazard methods of voluntary enlistment which have prevailed during the first three years of the war have caused a serious disarrangement of the productive abilities of the country. New and incompetent men have had to be trained to take positions in essential industries vacated by old and tried men. As a consequence, the disturbance of production by the voluntary enlistment of four hundred thousand men has been much greater than would have been that caused by taking double the number under a properly applied selective draft. The total enlistment in Canada have been about five per cent. of the population, whereas in Great Britain the number of men serving in the army and the navy amount to nearly thirteen per cent. of the population. In spite of this fact, after the original mistake of accepting men under a system which was not selective had been remedied the nation has been able, with the splendid assistance of its womanhood, not only to maintain its total production, but to double the output of peace times. Accurate figures of this production are of course not at present available, but I think that I am conservative in saying that Great Britain is producing twice as much as before the present huge armies were created.

In like manner, it is perfectly possible here in Canada even at this late date to obtain for the army a number of men greatly in excess of the hundred thousand called for under the existing law without causing any serious dislocation of productive activities. The active farmer must not be taken, the skilled munition maker must not be taken, the man who is doing necessary work for which by training or education he is specially fitted must not be taken. Men of this stamp must be kept to form the nucleus around which increased production may be organized. But, on the other hand, the man who is doing nothing, the man who is a spendthrift or a waster, the man who is contributing in no way to the real wealth of the country in productive activities, must be made to do his part for Canada in the trenches.

Canada has no considerable class of professional soldiers and therefore all the Canadian armies have had to be made out of raw material. The experience of other nations, as well as ordinary common sense, shows that it is an economic waste to create these armies out of material which has been trained and fitted for other necessary useful service when such an army can as quickly be made out of untrained raw material which is not doing necessary work.

In short, the useful man must be kept to continue his usefulness here at home; the useless man at home must be made useful to his country abroad.

Mrs. John Dawson is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. W. Mulligan of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Byam and family are camping at Bryce's Landing, Otonabee river.

Pte. Walter Harkness has received his discharge and has returned to Millbrook.

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. White and children of Port Hope, are visiting friends in town.

A Wild Scene in the House of Commons

MR. GAUTHIER TRIES TO SPEAK

In a momentary silence Mr. Gauthier commenced speaking in French. "Sit down," shouted Dr. Edwards.

"I'm addressing myself to the question before the House," retorted Mr. Gauthier in English. "If you can't understand, it is not my fault." (Cheers and groans.)

Mr. Rainville began to rule that Sir Thomas White had the floor. "I saw him first," he explained.

TWO CLAIM THE FLOOR

Sir Thomas White made another effort, but Mr. Lemieux faced him, and the two glared at one another. "I noticed you, and you know that Mr. Gauthier had the floor," exclaimed Mr. Lemieux, shaking his hand at the Chairman.

"He looks only at one side," snapped Mr. Oliver.

CRIES AND COUNTER-CRIES

Sir Thomas White again endeavored to go ahead. Mr. Gauthier spoke at the same time. "Stop him," shouted the Conservatives. "Try it," retorted the Liberals. "He's not to blame," exclaimed Mr. Gauvreau, pointing to the Finance Minister, amid a roar of jeers. "He's only serving his bosses."

"He's got to put through the steal," shouted some one over the din. There were roars of "Shame" and cries of "Call in the police" "Call in Mackenzie and Mann, Clifford Sifton and the other patriots," was the retort, amid further wild noise.

DEPUTY SAW FINANCE MINISTER.

The tumult broke when, upon the conclusion of the speech of Mr. J. E. Marcile (Bagot), Mr. Gauthier and Sir Thomas White rose. Mr. Gouthier had the floor first by a narrow margin, but the Deputy Speaker turned to the Finance Minister. There was a roar from Opposition members that the Chairman had turned his back upon the St. Hyacinthe member in order to enable Sir Thomas White to move the clouse motion. The latter began.

CHAMBER IN AN UPROAR

"Listen to the voice of Toronto and the big interests," shouted an Opposition member. Sir Thomas shouted something back which could not be heard, for the Chamber was instantly in an uproar.

"No Chairman has the right to turn his eyes away from a member," exclaimed Dr. Pugsley, stepping over to the table in front of the Chairman and shaking his fist. There followed a sharp altercation between the Deputy Speaker and the member for St. John which could not be heard. The Government benches were shouting "Question" and the Opposition benches "Shame."

CONSERVATIVES CALL FOR POLICE.

Dr. Pugsley, returning to his seat, announced that the Chairman wanted to make an explanation. It was some time, however, before the Chairman got a chance to say anything. "Call in the police," shouted the Conservatives "Call in Mackenzie and Mann and Clifford Sifton," reiterated the Liberals.

Following the wild scenes of anger and disorder the Chairman put the question "Poor Pug," shouted a Conservative, amid jeers. The wrangling at once resumed, members shouting across the floor at one another. Then Dr. Pugsley, rising, declared he desired to speak to a point of order "Police! police!" shouted the Conservative benches.

MIGHT AS WELL GO HOME

The member for St. John said that if business in Parliament was to be conducted in this manner the members might as well go home. "Well, go home," shouted the Conservatives, interrupting. Dr. Pugsley replied that they might as well go home themselves, for they would vote, like machines, for any measure, no matter how iniquitous, the Government might bring in. They might better be home harvesting the crops.

Annual Outing Of Employees Of The Peterboro' Lock Co.

The Peterborough Lock Company's employees held their annual picnic at South Beach yesterday. The Stoney Lake made the trip in good time, and at the Clear Lake resort everybody spent an enjoyable afternoon. The races held resulted as follows:

Girls, 6 years and under — 1 H. Archambault, 2 M Lynch, 3 C. Whaley.

Boys, 6 years and under—1 H. Whaley, 2 D. McColough, 3 A. Archambault.

Girls, 8 years and under — 1 M. Drury, 2 M. O'Connel, 3 J. Murray.

Boys, 8 years and under— 1 W. Archambault, 2 H. Gilman, 3 J. Weir.

Girls, 12 years and under—1 M Lynch, 2 E. Archambault, 3 F. Callahan.

Boys, 12 years and under—1 L. Collins, 2 J. Roach, 3 W McColough.

Girls, 16 years and under —1 I. Dyer, 2 F. Ruseau.

Boys, 16 years and under— 1 S. Young, 2 G. Williams.

Single ladies—1 F. Harrison, 2 M. Lynch.

Single men—1 R. Brady, 2 J. Guerin.

Married ladies—1 Mrs. Went, 2 Mrs. M. Whaley.

Married men— 1 H. Black, 2 Jim Duff.

Mr. M. T. Thomas carried off the honours in the absent-minded race. Before going in for a swim he hid his roll of $25 under a stone and forgot all about it until the boat had begun its return journey. The result was that he had to run from Young's Point to the Beach and double back again, covering the distance in record time.

500 Chinese Bodies Are Exhumed For Shipment Abroad

BONES BEING CLEANED AND PRESERVED FOR TRANSFERRAL TO CEMETERIES IN CELESTIAL KINGDOM.

Five hundred graves in Lone Fir Cemetery are being opened and from their depths are being exhumed the remains of as many Chinese buried there during the past twenty years, says the Portland (Ore.) Evening Telegram. The remains are to be forwarded to China for final burial in conformity with an ancient custom.

This custom is in reality a religious mandate that no follower of Confucius may attain the Chinese Nirvana unless his bones have been interred alongside thos of his ancestors in his native land. So, in order to achieve the bestific state the practice has been maintained through the centuries.

Four white men are engaged in the work of exhuming the bodies. Working near the graves are a score of Chinese experts busily engaged in cleaning the remaining bones of the departed and preparing them for shipment and subsequent preservation after the second interment. The remains are treated with peculiar concoctions of herbs to insure them against decay and carefully packed in tin cases.

The local Chinese city of the dead has for many years been in the southwestern of Lone Fir Cemetery. Since the beginning of the immigration of Orientals to the shore of America they have been using this section of Lone Fir as the temporary resting place of their dead, but have exhumed the remains at frequent intervals and sent them back to China.

However, it has been fifteen and twenty years since the Celestial sleepers in Lone Fir have been distributed and the present excavations are attracting wide attention.

From the graves are being removed large sums of money which in coins was placed in the grave and upon the mound when the remains originally were buried. Other relics and mementoes are being unearthed.

In the early days of the Chinese settlement many an urchin has filled his pockets with the coins that were lavishly heaped upon the graves of the Oriental dead in Lone Fir.

COURT REFUSES BAIL

Material Witnesses in Dr. MacRobbie Case Are Remanded.

HAMILTON, Aug. 27.—A further remand of a week was granted this morning in the case of Harry Smith, Walter Scott and J. J. McAuliffe, held as material witnesses in connection with the death of Dr. D. G. MacRobbie, found dead in the premises of the Crescent Oil Co. M. J. O'Reilly, appearing for one of the prisoners, made a strong plea for bail, insisting that the inquest so far revealed that at the worst if anything had happened it was among a lot of drunken men and no one was to blame. The court refused the request.

TWO MEN SHOT DEAD

Refusal to Give Free Drinks Cost Them Their Lives.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. — Two men were shot dead last night and two others were perhaps mortally wounded by three gunmen, who entered a saloon in the lower east side and demanded free drinks. The intruders opened fire as soon as their demand was refused, killing Michael Quattrone, the proprietor, and Frank Zastagon, an employee. Two others were seriously wounded. The gunmen escaped.

THE LIVE STOCK MEN STAGGERED

WINNIPEG, Aug 28.—Live stock breeders and Abbatoir men are staggered by the announcement that no more Canadian bacon will go to Britain. The opinion is prevalent that the order will reduce production and will, perhaps, lower prices, although all the feeding is done with high-priced coarse grains and will divert shipment to the United States yards where large contracts for the Allies are held. It will certainly affect breeding, as farmers will be discouraged.

MANY PITCHERS LEFT THE MOUND

Phillies Beat Cards When the Twirlers Were Hit Hard.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.— Hard hitting in the seventh inning, aided by errors by Hornsby and Snyder, gave Philadelphia the victory over St. Louis to-day, 6 to 4. The visitors pounded Mayer's delivery hard and led until the seventh. Then Horstman was knocked off the rubber, and his successor, Doak, was touched up for two singles before being succeeded by Ames. A sacrifice fly and two errors then put over the winning runs. Bender, who went to the rubber in the eighth inning, fanned three batsmen and blanked his opponents. Horsby made three singles and a double in four times at bat. The score:

	R.	H.	E.

Batteries— Horstman, Doak, Ames and Snyder; Mayer, Bender and Killifer, Adams.

At Brooklyn— Brooklyn bunched a single, a triple and a home run in the first inning, and a triple, a double and four singles in the fifth inning of to-day's opening game with Chicago driving Douglas out of the box and winning by a score of 7 to 1. Coombs allowed only five scattered hits. Kilduff's triple driving in the visitors' only run. The game lasted one hour and 23 minutes, the fastest of the season here. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Chicago	1	5	1
Brooklyn	7	11	0

Batteries—Douglas, Prendergast and Elliott, Dilhoefer; Coombs and Miller.

At Boston— Errors by Third Baseman Smith of Boston opened the way for the scoring of all four Cincinnati runs to-day, while Boston's two runs off Ragan were earned. After the fourth inning Tyler was given good support and was not hit safely. Kopf's play at short was brilliant and steady. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Cincinnati	4	9	1
Boston	2	9	3

Batteries—Ragan and Wingo; Tyler and Tragesser.

At New York— Pittsburg defeated New York in the first game of a three-game series here to-day, 1 to 0. Cooper, Pittsburg's left-handed pitcher, won his third game of the season on the Polo Grounds, and the second one by a 1-to-0 score. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Pittsburg	1	6	1
New York	0	7	1

Batteries—Cooper and W. Wagner; Benton and Rariden.

WEIRD GAME WON BY WASHINGTON

Six Pitchers Knocked Out—Triple Steal Figured Among Dozen Pilfered.

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—Washington won a peculiar game from Cleveland to-day, 11 to 9. Cleveland drove out three pitchers, but so did Washington. Playing an up-hill game, Cleveland took the lead in the fifth, but Morton's poor work, aided by Harris' error, sent Washington into the lead again in the sixth. Johnson was credited with the victory, as Morton was charged with the defeat. Cleveland staked a triple steal in the fifth, both scoring while Harris and Wambsganss advanced. Twelve bases were stolen by the two teams, Roth stealing four and Rice three, the latter also stealing home. Gallia struck out the entire side in the second, while Shaw performed the same feat in the fourth. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Washington	11	11	3
Cleveland	9	10	5

Batteries — Harper, Gallia, Shaw, Johnson and Ainsmith; Klepfer, Coumbe, Morton, Covaleski and O'Neill.

At Chicago—Chicago gained a full game on Boston in the American League pennant race to-day by shutting out New York; 3 to 0, while Detroit won from Boston. The White Sox now are three games ahead of Boston. Shawkey handed the game to Chicago in the seventh inning. He walked Felsch, Gandil and Schalk, and Manager Rowland then sent Eddie Murphy in as pinch hitter for Cicotte. He singled to right, sending Felsch and Gandil home. Schalk, who had gone to third, then scored on a wild pitch. After retiring Chicago in the seventh Shawkey protested heatedly to O'Loughlin against the umpire's rulings on balls and strikes. He was put out of the game. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
New York	0	5	1
Chicago	3	8	1

Batteries — Gullop, Shawkey, and Alexander, Nunamaker; Cicotte, Faber and Schalk.

At Detroit.—Detroit bunched hits off Ruth to-day and defeated Boston 5 to 1. Hits by James, Cobb and Veach, a base on balls, to Vitt, and a wild throw by Lewis gave Detroit three runs in the fifth, and two more came in the eighth on a base on balls and Burns' home run over the left-field fence. Boston's run was the result of a base on balls and two hits in the fifth inning. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Boston	1	6	1
Detroit	5	8	0

Batteries — Ruth and Thomas; James and Stanage.

At St. Louis—Seibold held St. Louis to four hits and Philadelphia shut out St. Louis to-day, 8 to 0. Seibold's support was perfect. Not a St. Louis player got beyond second base. The visitors pounded Sothoron for ten hits, and were helped by three costly errors. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia	8	11	0
St. Louis	0	4	3

Batteries—Seibold and Schang; Sothoron and Molyneaux, Severoid.

LACROSSE

Port Hopers will be given a treat on Wednesday afternoon next when the Maitlands of Toronto and the fast team of Havelock, will meet in a championship match in the Town Park. The two teams are tied for first place and the Association has elected Port Hope as the battle ground to decide the winners. Some years ago Port Hope was a real live lacrosse town and no doubt a large crowd will be out to see the game. In order that both clubs may make train connections, the game will start at 1.30 o'clock sharp.—Guide.

Camp Borden, Aug. 17.—Owing to the number of Canadians who are available when a choice is made of candidates for commissions in the Imperial army, the age limit for such is being reduced. None will be taken over 35 years of age, and if a large number of applications are in when the next selection is made the perference will be given to those under 30 years. Col. Lang, G.S.O., has returned to camp from Toronto, where he assisted Maj.-Gen. Gwatkin on Saturday in making the selection.

Mrs. Arthur Kent, 278 Thomas street, has received the following letters in regard to the death of her brother, Sapper J. K. Smith:

No. 8 Casualty Clearing Station.

Dear Mrs. Kent,—In reply to your letter, your brother, Sapper J. K. Smith, 180133, 478th Field Company R. E., passed away here on June 5th at 7.45 a.m. He was brought down here on June 4th, very badly wounded in the head and legs. All that was possible was done for him, but from the beginning we knew his condition was most serious. Like many others he did not realize how ill he was. He was laid to rest in the British cemetery here. His grave is marked with a cross, his name and particulars. Please accept our deep sympathy in your great sorrow.

Yours faithfully,
AGNES M. SMART,
Sister in Charge.

The chaplain writes as follows:

Dear Daughter in Christ,—The shadow of His cross falls on you. Alas your dear one passed to his rest early this morning.

You will have had a warning letter from me telling of his wounds. I was with him some time, prayed with him and sought to cheer him and keep him in the grace of God. He was unconscious the last few hours and sent no messages. Few men do, for all hope for recovery.

God bless and support you in your dark hour. But let the thought of the cross be an inspiration and a comfort. He died for others, for his country, his people, the sacred cause of freedom. He is with Christ in Paradise. God be your help and strength in time of trouble.

Your sincerely
ANTHONY F. FENN,
Chaplain.

Pershing's Troops Hate "Digging In"

EAGER TO FIGHT IN THE OPEN

Americans Share With Canadians the Dislike for Mole-like Tactics Which Germans Delight In.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Aug. 27.—One of the greatest problems American officers have before them is impressing upon their men the absolute importance of learning the best ways of keeping under cover. The American soldier is not a natural "digger-in." He is much like his Canadian brother-in-arms in that respect for it is an old saying on the British front that Canadians will die in the last ditch, but never dig it.

It is the American spirit, as it was that of the Canadians, to up-stake and fight; but the world war has long since passed that stage, and now in the long wear and worry of a struggle of attrition the best commander is the one who best conserves his men by keeping them under cover. One of the great reasons why the Germans are still in France and Belgium is their wonderful facility for digging themselves in. They have a perfect passion for it and an incentive as well, for the allied artillery never ceases to pound them day and night.

The German belief that they can dig faster than a modern army can advance is one of the principles of their defensive tactics. Notwithstanding all that has been told along this line, notwithstanding the heroic efforts to rouse his enthusiasm over the pick and shovel, the American soldier has remained decidedly lukewarm. He came to France to fight the Germans, he says, and not to dig a hole and look at them through a spy glass. The French, Canadian, and Australian soldiers resent the idea of digging in, and would not admit the necessity of doing so until bitter losses taught them a dearly bought lesson.

This Is "a Time-Clock War."

It is purely a matter of temperament, and there seems to be little doubt now that only actual battle experience will convince American soldiers that the ability to take advantage of any bit of cover is one of the greatest assets the modern man at arms can have.

"It seems a shame to have to curb the first fine fighting spirit of our troops," said an American training officer recently "but the men must be made to understand as far as possible that impetuosity must be subordinated to steadiness. This has become a time-clock war. The men must advance in given time and go no further. Every step of infantry advance must first be worked out with the artillery, and when the plan is arranged it must be strictly adhered to.

"We realize that it will be difficult to hold our men to this plan. If they see a battle going on their favor its impulse will be to push on as fast as they can and some are bound to do so, just as the Canadians did in the earlier stages. We will undoubtedly have big losses in this way, but the men who come through our first battles will be worth their weight in gold thereafter. They will learn quickly the value of steadiness and absolute discipline under fire, and they will be the steadying influence we can distribute through the newer units of our great army as they get their final preparation for trial by fire."

The natural fighting man, it seems, has a natural antipathy to digging in. Even in these late months of war British Tommies would much rather remain above ground and stand chances of getting killed by shells than to dig the deep dugout so adored by the Germans. In planning the battle of Messines Ridge, which was a model of a clean-cut victory, the British army commander took into account the fighting man's point of view and when the advance had reached a stage where it gave the British covered high ground the fighting men were directed to take a rest, while specially organized labour battalions were rushed up from the rear to do the necessary digging and consolidating of new trenches so as to make them thoroughly proof against counter-attack.

The result was that the fighting men were unhampered and unworried by the necessity of digging, went forward later in the day and took objectives that were rather hoped for than actually expected. Those are the tactics the American fighting man would like to see. They appeal to him, but just now he is being put through a pretty stiff course of digging.

Taught to Make Individual Cover.

This does not apply to digging trenches alone. He is being taught how to dig himself in individually while lying flat on the ground in the face of enemy fire, thus getting the temporary shelter and protection of a sort of grave-like excavation. It is not so often nowadays, however, that a man has actually to dig himself in on solid ground, for there is seldom an infantry advance made over anything but ground all pitted and torn with shell craters.

Fighting from shell holes is an art in itself, and one that Americans must learn before taking their place in the allied line. German prisoners say that they would rather fight from shell holes on an active part of the front than from a regularly organized trench system. The latter affords the artillery too good a target, while isolated shell holes are difficult for the enemy guns to deal with. The Germans even conceal some of their shell holes by putting brown waterproof sheets over them whenever an allied aeroplane is seen approaching. The passion of digging in is so strong with the Germans that they have been known desperately to claw holes in the ground with their hands till the ends of their fingers were practically worn off. Thus some were found dead, and others, who had been taken prisoners, had to be sent to the hospital with all their finger nails gone.

FISH FOR ROYALTY.

Major Green Sends Sample of Canadian Supplies to Windsor Castle.

LONDON, Aug. 27. — Major Hugh Green in charge of frozen fish supplies for the Canadians, has been commanded to send a sample of all varieties to Windsor Castle.

Canadian fish now forms a part of the regular diet of the British as well as the Canadian troops.

Thomas Robinson, trawler owner, Grimsby, among the new knights of the British Empire, is well known to the Canadian fish industry.

Given Another Chance To Change Manner Of Living

Out of consideration of the care of her six children the woman who was arrested yesterday on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, was given her liberty, but during the next month must show a complete change in her conduct. Magistrate Dumble gave the most earnest advice to a young girl who has been flirting with the danger of companionship that bade anything but good.

Two young men were each fined $13.75 for being frequenters.

FUNERAL OF MR. SAMUEL CLEGG

The funeral of the late Samuel Clegg, 295 Stewart street, held under the auspices of the Oddfellows, took place this afternoon and the last mortal remains laid at rest in the family lot at the Little Lake cemetery. An unusual number of beautiful floral tributes were received, testifying the sympathy of the many friends of the late Mr. Clegg.

The pallbearers were Messrs. R. J. Kidd, D. H. Moore, J. Garrow, Mr. Adamson, M. Lytle and W. J. Green.

Rev. Dr. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Trinity church, conducted the service which was held at the family residence before leaving for the cemetery.

FRENCH MUST CUT SMOKING.

Government Says the Increased Tobacco Demand Cannot be Met.

Paris, August 27. — Smokers are being warned by the Ministry of Finance that the day is coming when they can only have a fixed allowance of tobacco and cigarettes. The supply is again deficient and it is impossible to increase the output.

The chief cause of the trouble is the great increase in consumption since the war. The first half of 1917 compared with 1913, shows an increase of 1,380,000 pounds of cigarettes and 13,192,000 pounds of smoking tobacco.

WIFE SENDS HIM TO ARMY.

Says Lear Ignored Her Until He Wanted Exemption.

Atlantic City, N. J., August 27.—On his wife's testimony John Lear of Atlantic City was to-day drafted into the national army. He asked for exemption on the ground that he supported his wife and child. Mrs. Lear told Mayor Harry Bacharach that her husband had not spoken to her for three years until the day that he hunted her up to sign affidavits. She said that he paid her $5 each week for the support of herself, child and mother.

"You don't care if your husband goes to war or not, do you?" Mayor Bacharach asked.

"No, just so I get the $5," Mrs. Lear told the board.

Eugene N. Apel, a grandnephew of Count Zeppelin, must serve in the national army. His mother was formerly Countess Dagenfeld. Apel did not claim exemption, but Adolph B. Apel, his father, who is a boat builder and holds government contracts, asked that he be relieved, as his services were invaluable in the fulfillment of navy orders. The petition was denied.

BERLIN'S NEW VICTORY PLAN

To Starve the World into Submission by Two More Years of War.

Washington, August 27.—According to information received by the State Department from what is regarded as a reliable source in Germany, the Berlin government is urging the people to make preparations for a two years' war, on the basis of representations by German scientists that the world outside of Germany will be as hard up for food at the end of that period as is Germany to-day, and will be forced to yield. The scientists have prepared statistics to prove it.

If the war is continued for the period mentioned, the people are told, Germany cannot be defeated, because the people of the countries now at war with the Central Empires will not endure the hardships which the German people are willing to endure.

THE GRAND TRUNK AT TORONTO EXHIBITION

A most attractive display of Canada's beauties and resources is made by the Grand Trunk System this year. Many new ideas have been introduced and the Grand Trunk building is one of the features of the Exhibition. In addition to a comprehensive display of the principal attractions of Eastern Canada, including enlargements from direct photographic negatives recently taken in the many districts that make up what is known as the "Highlands of Ontario" and the Thousand Islands region, there are a series of handsome views of the Atlantic Coast and other territories that appeal to the holiday seeker. All phases of life in the splendid Western Canada territory served by the Grand Trunk Pacific are depicted and there are samples of soil, dairy and farm products and specimens of the rich mineral wealth of British Columbia. The new route to Alaska is shown in an attractive manner, while the Transcontinental Line via North Bay, Cobalt and Cochrane connecting Eastern and Western Canada and opening up opportunities for thousands of homeseekers in New Ontario has a prominent place. Representatives competent to give all information concerning the territories served by the Grand Trunk System are in attendance.

OBITUARY

EMILY HERRON.

Emily Herron, relict of the late Robert Herron, died yesterday afternoon at St. Joseph's Hospital after an illness of some months' duration. She was born in London, England 59 years ago and has resided in Peterborough for a number of years, during which she was a faithful member of St. Luke's church.

The funeral will take place to-morrow (Wednesday) afternoon from the family residence, Robinson street, to the Little Lake cemetery at 2.30. A service will be held at St. Luke's church before leaving for the cemetery.

R. T. A. THORNE.

The sympathy of the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. George Thorne, 360 Smith street, will be extended to them in the death of their only son Bobby, who died last night, aged 3 years, and was laid at rest this afternoon at four o'clock in the Little Lake cemetery.

SEIZE MUNICH FOOD HOARDS.

The Police are Searching the Hotels Throughout Bavaria.

Amsterdam, August 27. — The police of Munich have made extensive seizures of foodstuffs at a number of the fashionable hotels and restaurants, according to the Leipsic Volkszeitung. At one restaurant 9,000 eggs and several hundred weight of honey, flour and venison which had been procured clandestinely, were taken by the officials.

A rigorous search is being made in all Bavarian health resorts. The information regarding the secretly hoarded food stores leaked out through gossip by wealthy visitors.

Fixed Price Of Coal May Influence The Local Prices

Naturally, the recent action of President Wilson in fixing the prices of coal at the mines has raised the question of its probable effect on Canadian prices. A local dealer after a telephone conversation with Buffalo to-day said that there was no definite information among the trade in that city. It was believed that there might be a reduction of the prices of those dealers who had demanded the highest figures. But the limitation of business that is expected to follow the Government's (U. S.) restriction may result in a preference being shown to short haul contracts with quick return of cars and, of course, a greater volume of business than would accrue from the long hauls to Canada. At the present, however, there is nothing definite. Wood is selling from $8 to $9.50 a cord and is practically on par with coal prices. Some local dealers have already discontinued the acceptance of orders for wood.

FOOTBALLS FOR SOLDIERS.

Harvard Graduates to Raise $20,000 to Buy Athletic Equipment.

Cambridge, Mass., August 27. — Twenty thousand dollars worth of footballs, baseballs and other athletic equipment, is to be sent overseas to Uncle Sam's soldiers with the compliments of the sons of John Harvard.

Fred W. Moore, graduate manager of the Harvard Athletic Association, this week forwarded a circular letter to the 25,000 Harvard graduates, whose names are on the football application list, in which he asks that each man contribute $1 or more for footballs, and possibly other athletic equipment, as a present from Harvard graduates to American soldiers at the front.

Furthermore he got busy himself, and forwarded 500 footballs for soccer and Rugby to the Red Cross which is to ship the goods abroad without delay.

Eliot Wadsworth of New York, a Harvard graduate, who is the acting head of the American Red Cross, asked Mr. Moore to raise such a fund.

CALL BATH ORDER FOLLY.

Berlin Papers Say Health will Suffer from the New Prohibition.

Amsterdam, August 27.—The prohibition of bathing at home in Germany to save fuel and soap is called rank folly by the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin. The paper says many of the public baths are already closed owing to the lack of coal, and attributes notable increases in skin diseases, dysentery and other disorders to enforced uncleanliness.

The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, also points out the increase in cases of dysentery in Berlin, a high percentage of which is fatal, while typhoid, which is spreading, is also causing uneasiness.

VILLA AND 1,000 MEN KIDNAP THIRTY GIRLS

EL PASO, Texas.—Sweeping from the Durango Mountains, Francisco Villa, at the head of 1,000 bandits, raided small hamlets in the vicinity of Santa Barbara and carried off more than thirty young Mexican girls, according to information received here. When the bandits entered the settlements Villa gave no officers permission to select any girl they wanted.

Young girls were torn from their mothers, placed on horseback and carried away. The bandits also took all arms and ammunition and virtually all provisions in the Santa Barbara district.

N.C.O. MARRIES AN HEIRESS.

Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt is Bride of Canadian Lance-Corporal.

LONDON, Aug. 27.— The marriage of Miss Gertrude Langtry, adopted daughter of Frederick W. Vanderbilt, of New York, and Lance-Corporal Locquell, of the Canadian army, son of a professor in Oporto University, is announced in the Daily Mirror. The bride said her parents had not yet heard of the wedding, which took place at Seaford and which was extremely quiet, only a few witnesses being present. The bride gave the name of Vanderbilt, which she said she was authorized to use. The girl said she became acquainted with Corporal Locquell while riding along the seashore. Becoming ill she was obliged to dismount. Locquell happened to come along, assisted her with the utmost kindness, and the acquaintance ripened into mutual love.

NEW ADVERTISING STUNT.

American Department Store in England Insures Customers Against Air Raids.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—It's a poor air raid that blows nobody good.

Witness a big American department store in London advertising that any person injured in an air raid while in their stores is insured. One leg blown off gets the victim $250, while both legs pay double. For minor injuries he gets hospital expenses, and in case of death the heirs draw $2,500.

There hasn't been a raid since the advertising stunt began, so the store hasn't had any opportunity to test its "pulling power."

MAKE SLAVES OF BELGIANS

Germans Deport 1,000 Civilians to work at Zeebrugge.

HAVRE, Aug. 27.—It is officially announced by the Belgian Government that the Germans have ordered the Bank of Courtrai, West Flanders, to transfer its funds immediately to Brussels.

About a thousand Flemish civilians have been deported to Zeebrugge to do work of a military nature, according to the official announcement. Civilians also are being similarly employed at Blankenberghe and near the Dutch border. Near Ypres the Germans are requisitioning barges in large numbers, but fifty-five out of sixty boatmen at that point have refused to work for the German despite promises of good pay.

At Malines all walnut wood has been requisitioned to make rifle butts.

"MAKE READY TO REPORT"

Drafted New Yorkers Get "Little Green Cards"—Warning for Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—"You should put your affairs in order to report for military duty upon twenty-four hours' notice."

Little green cards bearing that notice were being distributed on Saturday by letter carriers to hundreds of homes in New York. It was the first official call to many who are to go into the new army with the first detachment of recruits taken in the draft. The green card is the Government's formal and official notification to be ready.

"You are hereby notified you have been selected for military service as part of the quota from Local Board —" (giving the number), the green card states. The name and address of the registrant is given. The instructions continue:

"You will therefore hold yourself in readiness to report for military duty at the office of this local board at a time to be specified by notice posted at the office of this board in the near future. Notice will be mailed you, but the posting of notice at the office of the board will charge you with the obligation to report From the date so specified for you to report you will be in the military service of the United States and subject to military law.

"While as much time as possible will be allowed you, you are hereby cautioned that the necessities of the service may require you to be called on very short notice. You should therefore put your affairs in order to report upon twenty-four hours' notice."

KORNILOFF PRESENTS GLOOMY PICTURE OF RUSSIAN ARMIES

Commanders Have Been Shot by Troops and Treachery Abounds—Supplies of Shells and Airplanes Decrease —Serious Victualling Problem.

MOSCOW, Monday, Aug. 27.—The second general sitting of the National Conference was held this afternoon. General Korniloff, commander-in-chief entered the hall in company with Premier Kerensky. His appearance was the signal for a prolonged and enthusiastic ovation. All the delegates cheered for Russia, the revolutionary Government and the army.

Premier Kerensky introduced Gen. Korniloff, saying the Government had thought it necessary to invite the commander-in-chief to lay before the conference the situation at the front and in the army.

Gen. Korniloff said the death penalty, together with other measures, constituted only a small part of what was necessary in an army stricken with terrible evils of disorganization and insubordination. In the present month, Gen. Korniloff said, soldiers had killed four regimental commanders and other officers, and ceased these outrages only when they were threatened with being shot. Quite recently one of the regiments of Siberian Rifles, which had fought so splendidly at the beginning of the revolution, abandoned its position on the Riga front. Nothing except an order to exterminate the entire regiment availed to cause it to return to its positions.

"Thus we are implacably fighting anarchy in the army," the commander continued. "Undoubtedly it will finally be repressed, but the danger of fresh debacles is weighing constantly on the country.

SITUATION AT FRONT IS BAD

"The situation on the front is bad. We have lost the whole of Galicia, the whole of Bukowina and all the fruits of our recent victories. At several points the enemy has crossed our frontier and is threatening our fertile provinces. He is endeavoring to destroy the Rumanian army and is knocking at the gates of Riga. If our army does not hold the shore of the Gulf of Riga the road to Petrograd will be wide open.

"The old regime bequeathed to Russia, an army which, despite all the defects in its organization nevertheless, was animated by a fighting spirit and was ready for sacrifices. The whole series of measures taken by those who are completely foreign to the spirit and needs of the army has transformed it into a collection of individual groups which have lost all sense of duty and only tremble for their own personal safety.

"If Russia wishes to be saved the army must be regenerated at any cost. We must immediately take measures such as I have referred to, which have been approved in their entirety by the Acting Minister of War."

Gen. Korniloff then outlined the most important of these measures, in addition to restoration of the death penalty, which are:

MUST STRENGTHEN AUTHORITY.

First, restoration of discipline in the army by the strengthening of the authority of officers and non-commissioned officers; second, improvement of the financial position of officers, who have been in a very difficult position in the recent military operation; third, restriction of the functions of regimental committees, which, although managing economic affairs of the regiments, must not be permitted to have any part in decisions regarding military operations or the appointment of leaders.

"The strength of every army depends upon conditions in the district in its rear," Gen. Korniloff continued. "The blood which will inevitably flow during the restoration period may be shed in vain if the army, having been reorganized and prepared for battle, remains without reinforcements and fresh supplies of projectiles and equipment. I therefore think it indispensable that the measures taken at the front should also be applied in the rear."

ARMY FACES FAMINE.

The commander went on to say that according to information at his disposal the condition of the railways was such that by November the army would not receive any more supplies. In support of his statement he quoted a telegram from the commander-in-chief of the south-western front, saying that the short age of bread and biscuit on this front amounted almost to famine. Gen. Korniloff then read figures relating to the production of war materials, which he said had fallen compared with the period from October, 1916, to January, 1917, by 60 per cent. for guns and shells and 80 per cent. for airplanes.

"If this state of affairs continues," he added, "the Rusian army will find themselves in the same state as in the spring of 1915, as the time of the retreat in Poland, Galicia, and the Carpathians."

RUSSIANS IN THE WAR TILL VICTORY IS WON

National Conference Cheers Patriotic Utterances of Gen. Korniloff.

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—In his address to the National Conference to-day General Korniloff expressed his firm belief that the measure which he proposed would immediately be put into action.

"I believe," he said, "that the genius and the reason of the Russian people will save the country. I believe in a brilliant future for our army. I believe its ancient glory will be restored."

When General Korniloff concluded his speech there were prolonged cheers from every side except the extreme left, where several members of the Soldiers and Workmen's organization remained silent. General Korniloff immediately left the hall and proceeded to a train which took him to headquarters.

Close Union With the Allies.

After the religious delegates had spoken, General Kaledines, leader of the Don Cossacks, representing the Council of Cossacks, mounted the tribune and read a resolution passed by the Cossacks demanding above everything, for the salvation of the country, the continuation of the war, until complete victory was attained, in close union with the allies.

New Measures Urged.

General Kaledines proposed with the same end in view, the following measures: (1) Placing the army outside of politics, (2) the suppression of regimental committees and councils and the restriction of the functions of those which may be maintained with a purely economic mission, (3) revision of the declaration of soldiers' rights, (4) reinforcing discipline by strong measures and by the application of those measures to the districts in the rear, (5) restoration of the rights of commanders to inflict punishment.

The reading of the resolution was punctuated by cheers from the right and by some protests from the left.

Little Son Was A Pitiful Sight

With Ringworm Which Turned to Eczema. Just One Mass. Cuticura Completely Healed.

"My little son, three years old, took ringworm on his left arm, and he scratched it so that it turned to eczema. It then spread to his back, chest, arms, legs and head. It was just one mass of corruption and it made my heart ache to see him scratch; he would just tear himself. He was a pitiful sight.

Question Of Poultry Feed A Serious One

Experimental Farm Suggests the Use of More Mash Feeds, Including Screenings

The question of feed for poultry is becoming serious. Corn is practically off the market, oats high in price, barley and buckwheat very scarce as well as high. Wheat, the most popular poultry feed in Canada at any price, should not, under present conditions, be used for poultry if it is fit for military purposes, for the prospects are that this year's crop will leave the world's supply of wheat still short and it will be necessary to save all suitable wheat for human consumption. Poultrymen will, therefore, have to look for a substitute.

Before looking for other grain feeds, it might be advisable to suggest that more mash feeds be used in the rations. During the summer both the chicks and the layers could be fed a larger proportion of dry or moist mash and less grain than is usually advised. Mill feeds such as shorts and bran are easier to get and cheaper than the grain feeds, and when the birds are on range could be eaten in larger proportions.

For the grain part of the ration it might be necessary to use oats, barley, buckwheat, etc., when these are procurable at reasonable prices. In many places these cannot be obtained; here the screenings from flour mills and elevators should be used.

There are considerable buckwheat screenings procurable at a reasonable price at the prairie and Port Arthur elevators, which make good feed. At the middle eastern flour mills there are quantities of screenings taken from milling wheat that would form almost an ideal grain mixture and could be purchased at about the price of shorts. In fact, most of this class of feed is ground and mixed with the mill feeds and as a consequence is lost as a grain feed for poultry.

Such foods make very suitable rations, especially for growing chicks or for the summer feeding of laying stock and they are much more economical than wheat. In an experiment conducted at the Cap Rouge Experimental Station screenings at two-thirds the cost of good wheat produced eggs at less cost than did the wheat. Some of this feed may be fed whole and some ground for a mash.

Samples of feeds and prices in car lots have been submitted which, even with a reasonable commission could be retailed at a comparatively low price. Some of these samples are: Buckwheat screenings, $25 per ton at Saskatoon, this is a cracked feed, 90 per cent. wild buckwheat and cracked wheat, 4 per cent. weed seed of various kinds. It is a good rearing feed and may be fed whole or ground. Another sample, was quoted at $1.90 per cwt. f.o.b. Toronto; a sample of small wheat with a few oats and a trace of wild buckwheat, price $2.00 per cwt.; two samples somewhat better at $2.10; a good sample of brunt wheat at $2.50 and a better sample at $2.90.

These are all satisfactory feeds and the prices quoted show that compared with wheat they are cheaper. They could be used as whole grain or as a mash feed. In some of them weed seeds will be found, and care must be taken to feed so these will not spread. Local flour mills in Ontario and Quebec submitted all the samples but the wild buckwheat screenings. No doubt, feed of this nature could be secured at any mill making flour, and if poultrymen would ask for it, more of it would be available.

For British Columbia and the Maritime Provinces, the buckwheat screenings seem the best available and a little co-operation might be the means of securing this feed in car lots.

Poultry that has been eating good wheat and corn may not at first take to the screenings, but with a little time and patience they will eat it readily. A car load of it was received at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, at a cost of $35.00 a ton. It has proven very satisfactory for growing chicks and for summer feeding of hens. It may not be ideal for litter feeding in the winter, but for fattening and mashed feeds is most satisfactory.

Hog Market Firm At Lower Figure

Manitoba Wheat Remained Firm

Union Stock Yards, Aug. 28.—Receipts 47 cars; 765 cattle, 89 calves, 687 hogs and 275 sheep.

No appreciable difference in the condition of the cattle market, particularly in the hog section, where prices yesterday broke $2.50 down on the little animals, fed and watered, was noticeable this morning as far as prices were concerned. It was the usual Tesuday market, an off day in the week's trading. The demand, however, was slightly above precedent, and this resulted in firm steady prices.

Calves were especially in active demand, and some sales were made at a few cents in advance of yesterday's quotation. Sheep had a good demand, with prices firm to strong.

Monday's run of some sales were made at a few cents in advance of yesterday's quotation. Sheep had a good demand, with prices firm to strong.

Monday's run of some 8,500 head of stock resulted in about 300 being left over for to-day's market. Practically no real choice cattle were offered to-day, but the demand for the stock was pretty well satisfied yesterday. Small meats were always in demand, and prices were inclined to be a little stronger than yesterday, but only a few cents on the hundred weight.

The hog drovers woke up this morning to find the big packers as adamant to-day as they were yesterady in their refsual to pay more than $17 per cwt. for hogs. Indeed, they were quite indifferent about making any offers at all. The situation appears to be very uncertain and owners and buyers are now jockeying for better positions. Meanwhile the very needy ones paid $17.15 for some small lots, and this, perhaps, only to feel out the general market condition. Their purchases at this price cannot be said to represent the real market prices.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

Enid had bought it at an antique shop and recognized even the odd dent in the beaten silver rim. She slipped it unostentatiously into the front of her shirt waist and eyed her patient with growing distrust and disfavor. However, the pin had come into his hands it could scarcely have been by any honest means. Acting on a sudden impulse Enid suggested his turning his face slightly on his other side, with his face away from her. This was accomplished with comparatively little trouble. As soon as his head was turned, Enid quickly plunged her hand into his pocket and drew out—a handful of jewelry of varying value. Among them was a little college pin of garnets and pearls—a white "H" upon a deep red flag. She had one exactly like it given her by Jack Radnor, and she knew that Ralph Denby had given Alice one.

Suddenly she knew that this man was someone who might some day be very much wanted by a great many persons. And yet she must stay here and nurse him instead of giving him up to justice. Before she had time, however, to feel more than the beginnings of dismay at this situation, all responsibility was taken out of her hands by the man turning on her with an unexpected, cat-like twist, and—catching her in the very act of examining his loot!

The quick rage that lighted his eyes made the girl retreat from the couch. She had never believed a human countenance could be capable of so much vengeful malevolence.

"So!" snarled the man, breathing hard and painfully. "You'd rob a chap that's sick and not able to take care of himself! You are a pretty one, you are! But, you'll not get off so easy—you——"

He struggled to get off the couch.

"Oh, don't!" cried Enid in real distress, her new-born excitement in the role of amateur detective lost in these purely humane desire to keep him from hurting himself. "You mustn't! You'll start your wound bleeding again! I only happened to see the things——"

"You lie! You're a rotten spy!" croaked the man venomously. "They left you here to spy on me and rob me! But I won't stand for it—d'you hear? I won't——"

Tottering weakly, he did actually manage to stagger to his feet and with his face the more terrifying because of its ghastliness started toward her. A deep red streak widened on his dirty shirt sleeve with every movement that he made.

Beseeching him to be quiet, to lie down, Enid backed away from him, wondering what in the world she ought to do. Again the decision was taken out of her hands by the Chance that seemed to rule that strange night.

The quiet darkness outside suddenly became populous and violent. Down the clear long stretch from the Ridge Trail horses were plunging at a dangerous pace. The ring of shots in the distance was caught by the granite crags about and multiplied in very tantalizing echoes. Men's voices came stridently nearer and there was the crunch of gravel under slurring hoofs and the unmistakable creak of leather. A horse snorted and sneezed—pulled up abruptly, and rough voices lowered to tense urgency....

The door opened quickly and vehemently to admit the Tool-gate Keeper himself. With him was Martin Hale and behind him a knot of the hill outlaws.

The situation, hastily, not to say, sketchily, explained by old Mason, was this:

The men of the hills, realizing that Martin Hale had not meant to betray them, had suddenly turned in his favour. When Heaton's posse had appeared it had only been a minute before these rough but sincere mountaineers had rallied around their old comrade and contrived one of those elusive and baffling getaways with him that are forever exasperating even to the most experienced minions of law and order. Somewhere from under old Heaton's eyes they had abstracted the prisoner and with him had melted away among the rough undergrowth that fringed the Ridge. At the plateau before the Toll-gate House they had met with Mason who was now about to help Hale to safety. Seeing Malone, he had given a sharp ejaculation and said: "He must be looked to, as well, boys! Lord knows I did not want to be mixed up in these doings any longer, but Mart's innocent and has to get off, and we can't leave Malone for them to pick up at their convenience."

"What'll you do—send 'em by the Other Way?" demanded one of the mountaineers.

Mason nodded.

"I reckon," he said. "Anyhow you can leave the two of 'em here all right. They'll not be taken, I'll bet ye!"

"That's good enough," said the man who had spoken before. "Good night, partner."

A low mutter of "good-nights" rumbled through the darkness — a darkness which Enid thought was beginning almost imperceptibly to lighten to a faint and ghostly gray. A moment later the Toll-gate Keeper closed the door and turned to her.

"Well," he said, "kindly enough, "are you game, young lady? Your mother was."

"Do you know my mother?" asked Enid, surprised.

The old man nodded.

"Maybe I do and maybe I don't. I think so. Anyway, we've no time for all that now. We've got to send these chaps the Other Way."

"And what," asked Enid, utterly mystified, "is the Other Way? It sounds—creepy, somehow, though I don't know why?"

The Toll-keeper laughed.

"The Other Way," he explained, "is simply a way of saying the way that other folks don't know of—not the regular way, not the known way, not the above ground way. Don't look so puzzled, child. You'll see in a moment what I mean.

Hale helped him to move a chair and a rug away from a certain spot in the floor. The boarding underneath showed on close scrutiny a definitely square outline. Almost at once Enid saw what it must be: a trapdoor of some sort leading — where?"

"The other way," proceeded Richard Mason, kneeling to insert a stubby knife blade in a crack, as a prier, "is the way through the underground caves of these mountains of ours. We use it very seldom but it is a safe, secret country in emergencies and—this is the door of it!"

He bent further over and, fascinated, Enid's eyes followed the deft movement of his hand.

CHAPTER XV.

THE OTHER WAY.

So I'm aff and away to the muirs...
Banging far frae frowning faces, and the douce folk here;
Crawling up through burn and bracken, louping down the screes,
Looking out frae crag and headland, drinking up the simmer breese.

Oh, to hear the eagle screaming, sweeping, ringing round the sky,
That's a bonnier life than stumbling ower the muck to colt and kye.
—Charles Kingsley.

Slowly the solid oak lid of the door moved upward; for a breathless moment Enid gazed into a hot darkness that thrilled her with mysterious potentialities. So the Toll-gate House was built like this, on a veritable volcano—or what seemed actually worse than a volcano—a space, an abyss of undreamed of depth and reach warmed and freshened by strange underworld airs, that faintly murmured, or so the fancied like captive winds. Already Hale was carrying the wounded man across the room—it was a painful business for he was fretful with pain—half delirious, indeed—and Martin was forced to pause more than once to ease the tortured shoulder and wipe the cold sweat from his drawn face. And before the black gap in the floor could be reached—they all started and listened with strained attention. For they were coming—the men of the law. The voices of men and the scrambling tread of pressed horses always closer. There was no time for escape now. Noiselessly, with a frowning look, Richard Mason lowered the trapdoor. Hale, Holding his burden hesitated and Enid pulled the couch quickly forward.

"Lay him here!" she said. Hale did so; the couch was sufficiently close to the trapdoor to hide it from the casual observer. There had been no time to replace the rag rug. It was Enid, too, who, even as heavy feet falls sounded at the door of the Toll-gate House, seized the cloth on the centre table. Mason, quicker witted than Hale raised the lamp enough to let her pull the covering off. She flung it over Malone, whispering "Do not move, as you value your life!"

Then she pushed Martin down back of the couch so that he crouched close to the edge of the trapdoor. Mason saw her idea.

"We'll do it yet!!" he muttured exultantly, and then called aloud: — "Coming, coming! What's all the row about?"

As he hurried to the door he could not suppress a chuckle as he caught a glimpse of Enid calmly settling herself upon the couch, leaning back against the covered form of Malone as nonchalantly as though his bumpy little person were a pile of sofa cushions.

The opening door admitted Jack, carrying Polly, Ralph Denby and Heaton. The rest of the sheriff's men waited outside—pushing as close to the door as possible in order to miss nothing. Even in these wild hills a night like this was something a bit out of the ordinary.

It was a question as to which face Jack's or Enid's, was the greater study at that moment—his when he saw her languidly lounging there, apparently quite indifferent to the turbid happenings of the night, or hers when she stared at him carrying Polly Mason in his arms.

However, there was no time for personalities of any sort, as the business of the moment was the apprehension of Martin Hale. Mason, with a coolness which the Sheriff's men found disconcerting, told them to search the place. Enid, as they proceeded to do so, stretched herself even more lazily and comfortably against the curiously padded back-rest of her couch. And as two of the posse passed into one inner room to search, one into another, and a fourth went to peer through the back door, Enid's eyes caught those of the Toll-keeper in a swift illuminating flash. Jack Radnor saw that look and stood rooted to the floor, for it was as though he saw Enid for the first time. That alert, alive, significant expression that could not belong to his conventional little fiancee. He had no time for wonder, however. Almost as soon as that lightning glance had passed between them, old Mason had clumsily stumbled against the heavy centre table. Down it went, lamp and all, and after a crazy flash and a great deal of evil smell, the Toll-gate House was in complete darkness. So many sounds were audible, or seemed to be audible, in that darkness, that it was hard to say what one heard and what one did not. There seemed to be faint groans, sundry creakings as from rusty hinges or the like—and a faint, dull bang, then a scuffling sound, and then—some one found a match and struck it. Its fitful flare showed Enid standing erect, with some heavy drapery in her hands. A tardily discovered candle disclosed the same thing, only revealing further that she was crying hysterically with her face buried in the folds of what she held. It appeared to be the cover which had been upon the couch.

Jack stirred instantly at sight of her overwrought condition, took a quick step forward toward her, but she turned from him and sank in a heap on the floor not far from the couch. As she crouched there she listened eagerly for the sounds that would tell her that Martin Hale and Malone were escaping on the other way. For naturally they had taken the opportunity that Mason had given them by overturning the lamp. And, of course, Jack Radnor had to choose that moment to say:

"Enid, is there anything I can do for you?"

She turned on him in an irritation that positively made her tremble. For the first time in her proper little life she let herself go:

"Yes!" she cried vehemently, "Go to the devil!"

Radnor stared blankly at her and walked away.

Heaton and his men scattered to hunt for the fugitive Hale, and Mason bent over his daughter, petting her and making much of the hurt ankle. Enid hid her face and did not lift it again until Radnor came in again with the formal announcement that the horses were ready.

GERMANS IN CONFERENCE.

Bankers Reported at Meeting of European Financiers.

BERLIN, via London, Aug. 27.—German bankers are reported to be participating in Switzerland at a conference of European financiers, but no confirmation is obtainable.

The Deutsches Zeitung, of Berlin, learns that if such a meeting is taking place it is wholly in the nature of deliberations on financial groups of the belligerent countries who are interested in international holdings. The publication adds that if the political situation is being discussed any German representative who is there is acting wholly in a private capacity and without official authority.

Squirrel Design in Filet Lace

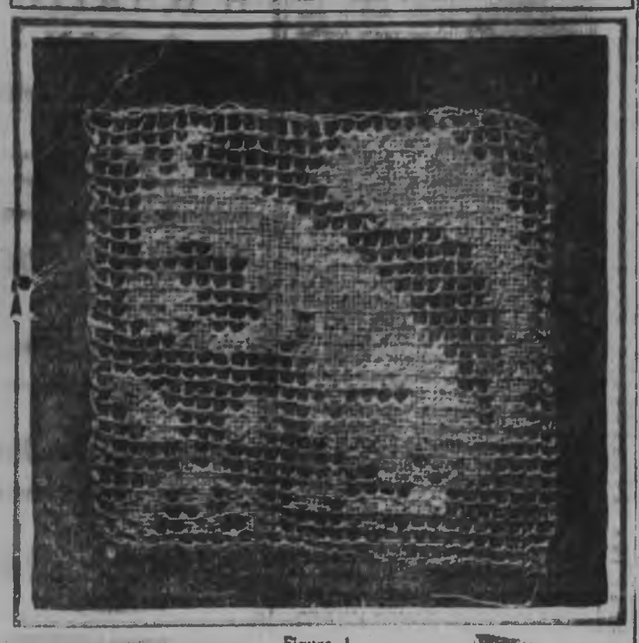

Figure 1.

I THINK my readers will be interested to-day if I show them how to make a piece of work much in vogue in household linen, in furnishings and in apparel.

In a preceding lesson I have shown you the way to stretch net and the way to work the stitches to make filet embroidery.

To-day I will teach you how to reproduce a design on the net (See Fig. 1). Use a square of filet net, corresponding to the size of the work you have in your mind. Stretch this net on the frame, as already explained to you, and find the cent so as to get the design on straight.

This design is twenty-six loops high and is begun at the right ear of the squirrel. The first loop is filled up in going in the direction of the height and the width.

When the thread is brought to the right, this first loop being made, you descend the thread six loops, then up and pass over the two first.

Then fill up two others. Then fill up a new square to the right, then a second one to form the other ear.

Then you work six loops across, then four loops high, then nine across and one down in the same direction to form the eyes. Then twelve loops across, then two other loops in the same direction; go through again the two loops below the eye, and finish after the four loops worked across.

Then darn eight loops already worked the first time. Weave nine loops across, then two loops across below, then two loops toward the bottom to form the foot. Weave three loops across, then one up, then one more up, weave one loop at the right, then four in the same direction to start the nut.

It is necessary to count the stitches exactly in following the thread of the work (See Fig. 1).

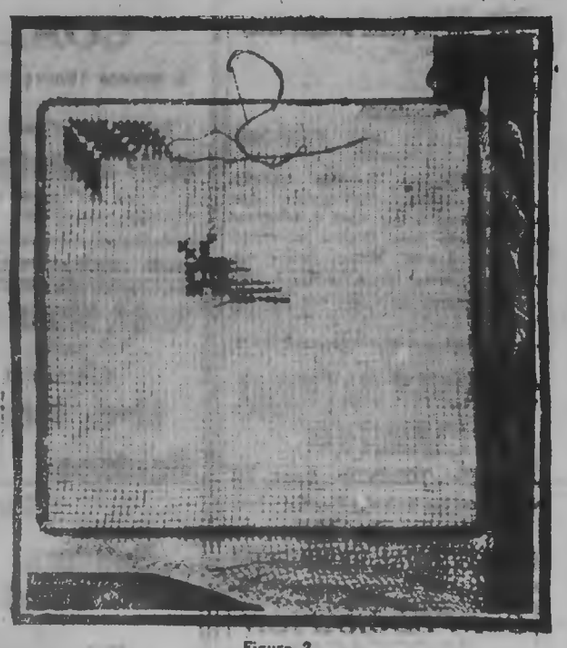

Figure 2.

In this way my readers will be able to finish the design and easily understand other models in the future.

This square of filet is suited to cover a pincushion, bordering it with Cluny lace insertion and a picot lace edge, which will be described later in another lesson. If you prefer a larger piece of work, you have to take a larger square of net and you embroider a border design around (See Fig. 2). When the border and the squirrel are started the work is held taut by the iron frame.

For another style of cushion use a larger insertion or, better yet, set the net square into a larger linen embroidered square.

If you wish to ask any question about making filet lace write to the Embroidery Editor, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope for a reply.

Miranda on Beauty

"YES," said Miranda, "I don't like to feel that perhaps my maids and even my nurses have dipped into the articles that I must apply to my complexion. Possibly I'm fussy, but I think it's being clean."

Miranda found a tiny gilt key and opened the inlaid hiding place for—well, we had all expected jewels, and found just rows of boxes and bottles. "Toilet articles," said someone.

"I think it's quite a good idea," said Enid [illegible]. "I shall copy it."

"Why—does one face powder cost so much more another so little?" some one asked.

"That is," said Miranda, "most often due to the perfume with which they are created—some are expensive"—she shrugged her shoulders—"some not so."

"How do you apply face powder?" inquired some one.

"If at home and making my toilet I first moisten my face with warm, not hot water; then I apply a little cold cream—French cold cream, of course. This I remove with a soft damp cloth, which I then, like this, throw away; then I apply the powder with a lamb's wool puff and remove any excessive amount with a piece of chamois."

"And," continued Miranda, "can one tell me why it is that no woman thinks to powder her throat a little?"

Every one laughed and one or two ventured to look in the glass.

"Very few women seem to know," said she, "that there are powders for evening and day use and divide between these also."

"And women who use rouge"——

"Bah!" said Delphine. "The majority had better not."

Be Natural

TO be natural should be the easiest thing in the world, girls, but—it isn't.

The girl who is full of affectation, who never is her real self, never is the worth while girl.

The worth while girl is not necessarily pretty, but she must be graceful, attractive and healthy. A few years ago about all a young man demanded in a girl was good looks.

A girl must dress well and tastefully, but not extravagantly. She must know how to entertain, to cook, to make bread as well as fudge, and she should like sports.

She should be well educated, though not of necessity a college or boarding school graduate; gentle to children and elderly persons.

"SHOPPING ON PROBATION" IS PUT UNDER THE BAN

By ANNETTE DUMONT.

WAR has set up a great national housecleaning.

When Savonarola started to convert the city of Florence into a model Christian commonwealth he commanded the women to throw on his "bonfire of vanities" all their jewels and costly clothes. War has exacted even more from the women of our times. Many of her cherished traditions and pet habits and personal idiosyncrasies have had to be sacrificed in the general conflagration.

War has entered her stronghold—the kitchen—and established martial law there. It threatens to invade her domain of clothes also. She now wants to lengthen her skirts and is told the nation cannot afford the extra expenditure in cloth. The census taker comes along and demands her age, her choicest secret, and she meekly surrenders it, proving that there is no more fight left in her.

Now the Council of National Defence recommends that a woman be deprived of her natural right to change her own mind. She has been shopping for years with the comfortable feeling that she could always beat a strategic retreat if she so desired. In the fever of shopping she might order gowns, hats and merchandise to be delivered at her home. All she had to do when she viewed these things later in the cold light of reason and found them to be unnecessary, undesirable, unbecoming and extravagant was to send them back where they came from, and "no one was the worse off," she reasoned. Brown & Co. had the gown again and she had her money back. So where was the harm?

Stop It, War Demands.

Along comes the Council of National Defence and says this seemingly innocent foible of woman must be stopped. What a woman buys, she buys. It becomes hers to have and to hold for all time. When she orders her gown delivered she has crossed her Rubicon. Henceforth the transaction is as fixed as the laws of the Medes and Persians.

Through the investigations of its commercial economy board the Council of National Defence has discovered that a department store to which twenty per cent of the merchandise sent out is returned suffers a loss of $14,000 in the office, $20,000 in packing and $16,000 in delivery in one year alone.

Big merchants heartily agree with the findings of the board and would welcome any official action as a war measure in Washington which would relieve the situation.

The assistant general manager of a big store informed me that he already had instituted two measures of reform in this direction. Since February the time limit for the return of goods has been reduced from two weeks to ten days.

Carelessness Charged.

"Our clerks also have been instructed," he said, "to ask customers to carry home the small parcels which they have always had delivered before. We have kept a record of the number of such requests made and of those granted by the customer, and are gratified to learn that forty per cent have complied with our request.

"In cases of returned goods there is a fairly large percentage that I should class as legitimate returns. For example, there is the mother of a large family who does the shopping for every member of that family. Of course she could only approximate the tastes of each one, and where her choice has been unsatisfactory we are glad to exchange the goods.

"Too many women, however, make their selections carelessly and without exercising much thought or discrimination, relying upon their privilege of returning goods to remedy their faults in judgment.

Trickery Plays Part.

"Then there is always the dishonest class—small in number, but these, unfortunately, always deal in the very highest priced goods. They order a costly gown for a special occasion, wear it, and then return is as unsatisfactory. A woman wants to give a social tea and her own rug does not quite measure up to the occasion. So she orders one of our costly Persian rugs delivered the day of the tea, and then telephones us the day after to call for it, stating its colors do not harmonize with her wall paper and hangings.

"If women only realized that the saleslady loses also by the unbusinesslike transaction of returning goods it would go a long way toward mitigating the evil.

A Baneful Effect.

In a recent number of Harper's Monthly Mr. Simeon Strunsky analyzed the psychology of the feminine shopper. He shows that our civilization is based on the inviolability of contract, and that this privilege of women shopping with a proviso is bound to have a baneful effect on their moral nature. If a man breaks a contract he is penalized. The shopping world is a fictitious world, in which consequences do not follow acts. May not this habit of irresponsible choice extend to her acts when she selects a profession, a cause to work for, or even a husband? "Yes; may there not possibly be a connection," Mr. Strunsky asks, "between the growth of the shopping habit and the divorce habit among women of the unoccupied classes?"

Take Time To Be Polite

WITH the harsh conditions induced in many lands by the cruelties of war one may, perhaps, overlook the small amenities of life which go so far toward making this world a delightful place in which to live.

In the rush and routine of work men and women are forgetting the "oil of kindness," the lubricant, of all others, which enables the wheels of commerce as well as social life to go smoothly and swiftly.

It is not always easy to be pleasant. But it is always possible. And it pays.

Worth While Effort.

A young saleswoman in a large department store recently illustrated the importance of pleasantness in a wonderful way.

Holding a very responsible position in one of the largest establishments of the city, she comes in contact with many women of varying dispositions and frequently finds it difficult to keep herself well poised in the rush of business.

In telling the story she said:—

"The firm makes a point of courtesy to customers, but sometimes it is difficult to keep the impatience from one's voice when one has stood for long hours and waited upon every conceivable kind of unreasonable woman.

"The day had been a hard one for me and it was nearly lunchtime. I had a headache and felt decidedly cross and irritable. Then Madam came.

"She was large and the kind of person whom one knew at a glance would be hard to fit. With her was a smaller friend, whom I was sure would be equally difficult as to the matter of clothes.

"Madam had a card with my name—some one had recommended me, she said, as a painstaking person who would be the very one to fit them out with new suits. She had been told that there were some very good looking clothes here that had been reduced in price. She wanted something very nice but reasonable.

"Should I fit Madam and have some one else serve her friend? But, no—Madam wished to have her young friend fitted very carefully and wished me to wait on both.

"Having been seated, the dress parade began and suit after suit in serge, in taffeta, in combinations of every kind of material, was brought out, carefully inspected and tried on by the smaller woman under the keen eye of her more experienced friend, at last resulting in the sale of a taffeta coat suit at $22, to be altered at a cost of $6, bringing the total result of my tiresome task to the sum of $28.

"Each minute my headache seemed to increase in violence and valiantly I strove to keep the impatience out of my voice. But $28 for all that time and trouble! Madam looked prosperous, however—perhaps I might yet be repaid.

"And so the fitting began all over again. Madam chose her gowns from more expensive stock—gowns which had been $100 or more, reduced to $80 and $90. It was a long and tedious trial of patience for us both. Nothing was just right. This was not the right color, this shade was just the thing but not the right material—one was too youthful, another far too staid.

"And so it went until both Madam and I were exhausted, and she had tried on more than fifty suits. At last we found a suit at $115 which was just the style that Madam wanted, just the color, but it was in serge and Madam wanted taffeta. Too bad!

"And she slipped out of the coat and smiled. A smile for the faithful try-out of fifty suits! I am not a swearing person, but I wanted to swear.

"And then Madam said to me:—'You have been most kind, most gracious, and I am very sorry indeed that I have not been able to find just what I wanted. It is no fault of yours nor of the stock. I can seldom find anything in stock that I can wear.

"'But I like this serge suit and I shall have it copied in taffeta. I have just had some fittings in the special fitting department and they are making me two evening gowns, a reception gown, some waists and other things. I appreciate the patience and care you have shown and I am glad Mrs. —— recommended you. I shall not forget you, and I, too, shall pass your name on to others.'

"She smiled again, took her young friend in tow, and was gone, leaving me smiling still and gasping with relief.

"Relief that I had been patient, that I had not let my headache react in rudeness, relief that I had been pleasant—and had kept my job!

"A great lady, indeed, and a wealthy one—and one of the firm's oldest and best customers.

Value of Courtesy.

"She was as good as her word, and time after time women ask for me to serve them, saying they have been recommended by Mrs. ——, and my sales have never been so good, and I am hoping for a raise in the fall."

This is just one little experience of one busy young woman employed by a well established firm which, having realized the value of courtesy in business relations, has made it a requirement of their employes.

This experience is by no means isolated, but is one of many which make or mar the business and the society man or woman day after day.

Take time and trouble to be polite. It pays.

CLOTHES LINE CLEANER.

It required a woman to think of a clothes line cleaner, which is a new addition to the household conveniences just being introduced. Nobody but a woman realizes the amount of dirt which a clothes line may catch without regard to the amount of care that is bestowed upon it.

The device is a little double scrubbing brush with stiff fibre bristles set in such a manner that they close together and reach every part of the clothes line as it slips between them.

Each brush back has a flange that extends to the full depth of the bristles and is rounded on the outside edge so that the two brushes, which are hinged together, open and shut easily. Two string straps keep it from slipping out of the hand.

Winning Hands and Their Secret

I NEVER saw my Cousin Alicia seated anywhere on a veranda, it seemed to me, with her hands entirely idle.

Not that they were exactly busy, either. They never flew over her handiwork as if it ever needed to be finished. Somehow the slow, languid manner in which she pulled the silk or thread in and out of her embroidery frame seemed only to emphasize her leisure.

"But why?" I asked, "do you pretend to do anything at all, Alicia? You never will have it done by Christmas at that rate. You might just as well be playing with rose leaves for all the progress you are making."

"My dear," remonstrated Alicia, "it isn't progress; it's prettiness. For instance, what have you been thinking about as you watched me?"

"I've been wondering," I confessed, "what it is you do to make your hands so exquisite."

Alicia smiled triumphantly. "You couldn't see them half as well if I kept them quiet in my lap," she said, "nor even if I fluttered rose leaves. There's nothing like an embroidery frame and some bright silks for handwork. I've put through some good things with those accessories."

"Have you?" I inquired. "I don't seem ever to have seen any, Alicia. I've seen Betty's work, and I usually get something hand made from Aunt Alice at Christmas. But what do you do with your embroideries?"

Alicia flashed me a glance.

"Dear Hilda," she said caressingly, but a little condescendingly, too, I thought, "you are a dear, matter of fact little creature. You know there are all sorts of pretty work in the world, dear; it isn't all to be seen in Christmas presents. This," she twisted a gorgeous engagement ring around on her finger, "is part of my pretty work. Of course, it may not last as long as mother's doilies or Betty's bureau scarves, but engagement rings are so interesting. And I'm sure I owe at least several of mine to my handwork."

I watched Alicia's snowy fingers, smooth as satin and rosy tipped, hovering gracefully over the maze of bright colored silks and wondered.

"Nature did help you out with it," I remarked enviously.

Alicia regarded me severely.

"Don't put it on Nature, poor old dame," she reproved me; "that's a lazy person's way out." She regarded my rather red and roughened hands musingly.

"Have you ever tried rubbing them with sweet almond oil?" she asked. "Try it for three days in succession. If that doesn't soften them keep it up a bit longer. And you mustn't get discouraged, Hilda, if almond oil doesn't prove your panacea. There's no royal road to beauty. Beauty is an infinite capacity for taking pains.

"Oh, I thought that was genius," I commented.

Alicia yawned and quoted Keats:—

"'Beauty is truth, truth beauty.'

"That is all we know of life, and all we need to know," she drawled.

Out of her working she slipped a gold stoppered bottle.

"It's the oldest fashioned thing in the world," she explained. "Just one part glycerine and three parts rose water. Even a country chemist can make it up for you. If you use it after washing your hands, while they are still wet, rub it in pretty well and then dry with a towel in the usual fashion. It is pretty sure to give you the velvet mitts—that is, unless you have the sort of skin that doesn't agree with glycerine."

"And does all that white and rose and satin smoothness come from such simple remedies?" I questioned.

My Cousin Betty, who had been busily puzzling out a new design in crocheting, lifted expressive eyebrows at me.

"Did you ever see the fair Alicia in Slumberland?" she asked.

She stretched out a pair of small brown hands, exaggerating their size as much as possible, spreading the fingers wide apart and curling them over at the ends.

"She looks like a drunken young gentleman who has gone to bed with his gloves on," she explained sweetly; "that is, her hands do. If a burglar were to come in at the door and see the hands first he'd be sure he had a man to cope with. You know, Brother Bob's gloves are rather menacing, especially when they are wrinkled. I honestly believe that a temperamental burglar would be frightened by them. There's something strangely terrifying—almost like Mr. Hyde in his worst moments—about those unnatural looking pawa stretched out on the counterpane."

Alicia permitted a strand of black silk to fall over her shell-like fingers.

"Don't mind her, Hilda, dear," she said sweetly. "I do use Bob's gloves for whitening my hands at night, and I'll give you a pair for the same purpose. One needs gloves enormously too large. I rip them up and spread them with a paste and then sew them together again. You make the paste of soft soap: add a gill of salad oil, an ounce of mutton tallow and boil it together. After they are boiled put one gill of spirits of wine and a scruple of ambergris into the mixture. You'll find this wonderful for whitening your hands. If it doesn't happen to agree with you try bran filled gloves, moist, for a few nights."

My Aunt Alice came out on the veranda at this moment and settled comfortably into her chair.

"Talking of hands," she said, cheerfully, "Hilda, dear, don't spend your money for expensive remedies. Any woman who can afford a cupful of kerosene and cornmeal may improve her hands a thousandfold. I remember well when your father was courting me that I used this mixture all the time to make my hands soft and whiter. When you rinse your hands off in hot water and air them a little there isn't any odor left, and you can put on a few drops of any perfume you like. I remember that your uncle used to say that my hands always looked as if they had been washed in rose dew and moonshine."

The luxurious Alicia had covered up her rosy ears with her rosy fingers.

"I can't bear to think of kerosene and beauty," she remonstrated. "But—even that treatment is better than nothing. For after all, Hilda, dear, always remember this as you go through life, everybody wants to hold winning hands, you know."

Does It Mean Strength or Weakness?

HOW often we hear men—and women, too—declare that nothing can change their opinion on certain subjects. There are many such persons in the world, persons with whom you can argue by the hour without altering their viewpoint in the slightest. You may perhaps admit the justice of their side of the case, but nothing would induce them to see your side of it. They are firmly intrenched behind the bulwarks of their convictions, and nothing can oust them from their position.

Is this characteristic, which can be found in all classes and conditions of man, a sign of strength or of weakness? Does it indicate greatness of conviction or narrowness of mind?

No one has the right to declare that nothing can change his opinion. We may be so decided on a certain subject now that we feel quite safe in saying that nothing could alter our viewpoint. But five years hence our ideas may have undergone a great change, and the ideas to which we are now violently opposed may then be our pet projects. The man who stands still, whose ideas never change, is hopeless, for these are times of progress, and such a man is soon left far behind.

Progress comes from experience. As we find that our old ideals are insufficient to meet our growing mental needs we look ahead for new ones, and so we progress. Our convictions on a certain subject may be very strong to-day, but as our experiences grows the old convictions give way to broader, bigger ones. This is the working of progress.

It is all very well to have decided opinions—that is a token of mental strength—but to blind your eyes to the opposite viewpoint is a sign of a narrow mind. The man who cannot see the other fellow's side of the story as well as his own, is the one whom progress leaves behind. The woman who is unalterably convinced that her opinion is the only right one is outstripped in the climb to success by her opponent who sees both sides of the question.

In forming an opinion on any subject at all you ought to look at all sides of it. Otherwise your opinion is worth nothing. If, after you have weighed every point, you are convinced that justice is on one side of a case your opinion has at least the right to be heard. But you must remember that there are at least two sides to everything; sometimes there are more. And if you base an opinion after hearing only one side your opinion is quite valueless.

We all feel very strong convictions at one time or another. Religion, politics, suffrage or non-suffrage, all bring forth the most pronounced opinions. But we should never allow ourselves to become so bigoted that we cannot listen in patience and with some comprehension to the opposite viewpoints.

It is not the man who shuts his eyes and his ears to all arguments who wins the struggle for recognition. On the contrary, it is the man who recognizes the justice of all other claims, but meets them and overcomes them one by one by a broad minded decision: who sees both sides but rejects one because it is just.

We should have convictions and should form decided opinions, but we should not be so convinced and so decided that we become narrow minded. Time changes all things. So we should never declare that nothing can alter our opinion, no matter how decided we may now be.

Progress brings many alterations, especially mental alterations, and we should be prepared for them. If we wish to advance we should be ready for mental changes, not stubbornly opposed to them. We should be open to conviction by others, not so firmly intrenched in our own opinions that we cannot hear others. Progress comes to those who are ready to advance and leaves far behind those whom "nothing can change."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If oilcloth be occasionally rubbed, with a mixture of beeswax and turpentine it will last longer.

Use soapy water to make your starch; it will give the linen a gloss and prevent the irons from sticking.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice to a quart of water will make rice very white and keep the grains separated when boiled.

Where grease is spilled on a kitchen table or floor, pour cold water on it at once. The cold will harden it. It may then be taken up with a knife and not allowed to sink in.

FELT LIKE A NEW PERSON

After Taking Only One Box Of "Fruit-a-tives"

GERMANY SHORT OF COAL

Strikers of Miners Reduced Production Over 1,000,000 Tons.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 27.—Strikes of miners in Silesia last month reduced the German production of coal by more than 1,000,000 tons, according to statements made in the debate in the Reichstag main committee on the fuel problem. Vice-Chancellor Helferich gave an urgent and earnest warning against further strikes.

A representative of the military authorities declared that more miners could not be spared from the army.

The gravity of the situation is shown by the seriously considered proposal to restrict production of iron, although this is needed for munitions.

WEST NEEDS MORE HELP

Only Half the Number of Men Expected Arrive.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 25.—Eastern harvest excursionists to the number of eight thousand have arrived in Winnipeg this week. This is about fifty per cent. of the help expected from Ontario and Quebec and from the States. Few harvest workers are coming in spite of the amendment to the immigration laws of the Dominion.

A number of women accompany the harvesters. Among a party of Ontario women is Mrs. J. McLaughlan. As her assistant in distributing these women is Miss Sarah Wilkinson, of Toronto.

GERMAN GIRLS FOR HARVEST

Called Home from Switzerland to Help in the Work.

BERNE, Aug. 25. Numerous German girls employed in Switzerland as nurses and servants have received an official call to return home for harvest work.

Others who are now in Germany for holidays are prevented from returning to positions in Switzerland for the same reason.

TWO LIBERAL VIEWS.

No doubt it is a clever move on the part of Mr. Rogers to seek to cover up his retreat by jockeying the Liberal party as he has so considerate of it in the embarrassing position, but is it the kind of treatment which the premier had a right to expect Sir Robert merited a good deal of public confidence by sticking to Mr. Rogers for so long, and if there was "unction and confession," surely Mr. Rogers, at all events, should be the last to make a public exposure of it.—Montreal Herald.

A man can sometimes learn a great deal by studying the disposition of women—but the tuition comes high.

Joseph E. Howard's Assets Two Suits; Liabilities $127,238

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Jos. E. Howard, who wrote the words and music of "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," and a big string of musical comedy successes is broke. His liabilities are placed at $127,238, distributed among 160 creditors. His assets are two suits, one for the Broadway board walk, and the other a trick suit of evening attire, much worn.

The largest creditor is Mrs. Flora Stern, for $12,000. Mrs. Stern, who lived at the Woodstock Hotel, is now in aliformia. The sum was said to be money advanced to Mr. Howard for his theatrical enterprises. Debts due women of the stage run as small as $5. Mr. Howard owes the Messrs. Shubert $5,000 for alleged breach of contract; Selwyn and Co., $4,406; Miss Mabel McKane, his one-time partner in vaudeville and member of a prominent St. Louis family, $5,000, and Miss Emma Carus, singer, $385.

Mr. Howard, who lives at No. 204 West 108th street, was seen much on the stage with the late Miss Mabel Barrison, who was his third wife. His creditors have been notified to present their claims to William H. Willis, referee in bankruptcy. Beyond two suits of clothes there were no assets mentioned.

IN THE DARK.

(Philadelphia Record.)

Berlin cannot have candles because fats are needed for war purposes. It cannot have lamps because the government needs the oil. It cannot have coal, or steam, or hot water, or electricity, except in very limited quantities. And now the supply of gas, made from coal, is cut in half. Germany started out to command a place in the sun, and it finds itself almost without light.

Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and General Stores.

SWITZERLAND'S TROUBLES.

Many Deserters Have Sought Refuge in Republic.

Between 10,000 and 12,000 deserters from the armies of the Entente Allies and the Central Powers have fled to Switzerland since the beginning of the war, or have refused to leave the country at the conclusion of furloughs and thus are classed as deserters. The majority are said to be Italians.

The long list constitutes a not inconsiderable problem for the authorities. They enjoy the same rights as other foreigners who are here legitimately, yet cannot be drawn on in any way for taxes or state expenses. They pay no military tax of immunity, and not infrequently commit deeds that make it necessary to send them to jail—where their support naturally falls on the confederation.

As a problem they may be said to rank in vexatiousness with the innumerable and constant violations of neutrality which come to light almost daily, especially on the part of the French and the Germans.

The general staff of the army announces on an average a dozen aerial violations a week by aviators who "cut across lots" on the way to or from France or Germany, and who cross the little neck of Switzerland that juts up into both countries in the north-west corner of the country.

This little neck also is weekly the target for both French and German shells. The gunners, far behind the lines get wrong ranges and "shoot up" Swiss territory before they can be told of their mistake.

Less often, but occasionally, prisoners of war attempt to escape either from Germany or France, and are shot and killed after they have reached Swiss territory, or else the pursuing shots crash over into Swiss territory and menace those on this side.

It is generally the case that fugitives who do manage to reach this side regardless of where they come from, are royally and handsomely treated. Recently four Russians escaped from Germany, swam the Rhine, and landed on Swiss soil. They were met by a veritable reception committee on the other side, were given a meal that satisfied even their enormous, starved appetites, and were generally feted before being escorted to an internment camp where they will spend the rest of the war.

The Gaucherie of Soldiers.

Soldiers when marching at night through open country invariably gravitate toward the left, not to the right This is the experience of an old soldier, who thinks the tendency is due to two causes: First as the rifle is carried in the right hand it naturally follows that the weapon arm must be kept free, and in case of pressure, when in close formation, the instinctive rule is to put up the left elbow and say, "Ease off to the left." Second, the soldier always steps off with his left foot, and, although it may be hard to prove, there is always a slight deviation to the left, even when a battalion is marching in daylight toward a fixed point or any other point of support.—London Chronicle.

Creating Common Enemies.

No one who ever read history is ignorant of the traditional policy of Prussia, the method by which Bismarck united the present German Empire. Creating common enemies in order to heal dissensions at home, and in order to establish the political supremacy of the strongest military state—that is the successful and time-honored method in Germany. What will now unite Germany, Hungary and Austria, and add to them Bulgaria, if the project should be accomplished, is an uncompromising policy of encirclement and aggression on the part of the enemies of the Central Powers. Let the Allies firmly declare that they will retain all German colonies, employ economic discrimination against Central European trade after the war, annex parts of Austria to Italy, Serbia, and Russia, parts of Hungary to Roumania, and parts of Bulgaria to Serbia—and the external conditions for creating Mid-Europe are provided to the heart's desire of the Prussian statesman.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH

How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

Count fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no strangling for breat at night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable Relief is sure.

A CITY WORTH HAVING

AUSTRIA'S DESPERATE DEFENCE OF BEAUTIFUL TRIESTE.

Great Port of Adriatic Stubbornly Held Against Italians Who Creep Ever Onward Towards Their Goal—Austrians Are Inspired by Commercial Value of City and Our Allies by Sentiment.

THE Italian military campaign continues its advance toward Trieste. It is a creeping sort of an advance, whether the armies of General Cadorna move down along the coast or across the rocky plateau of Carso, but nevertheless it is a forward movement.

Progress of only two or three miles since the spring campaign began might not seem much were it not possible to compare it with the advance of the Allies on the western front, where progress is measured by yards, instead of miles. Whether or not the Italian armies ultimately are able to take Trieste, they serve a military object of vast importance in keeping an enormous Austrian force busy in defending it.

Trieste is the queen city of the Adriatic. It is an attractive city, too, whether coming overland on the train from Vienna or across the bay from Venice. It fills a good many chapters in the history of the Italian struggles which have resulted in Austria keeping it until the present time, but it is not necessary to review the queen city in the historic aspect.

Lever, the Irish novelist, lived in Trieste as British consul when he wrote his book, "Charles O'Malley," which so good a judge of books as Theodore Roosevelt is said to have declared is the most entertaining military novel ever written. For Italians, Trieste has the same sentimental interest as the Trentino and the Tyrol, but the queen city of the Adriatic, though attractive, is not a Venice. Its winter climate is somewhat harsh, and the winds which sweep across it are so violent that on many days it is found necessary to stretch ropes along the streets for pedestrians to use in trying to get about.

In summer, however, Trieste is almost as delightful as Venice. There are vineyards in the surrounding country and the gulf itself offers some fine retreats. It is as an industrial and commercial city that Trieste is chiefly known, and while Italian sentiment is a potent force in seeking to recover it as a part of lost Italian territory, the commercial and military advantages of the city are more potent reasons of state. For the same reason its possession is of supreme importance to Austria, whose commercial existence almost depends on the continued possession of the city.

Trieste is the principal seaport of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Fiume, on the shores of the Adriatic, is a Hungarian seaport, but it has few of the advantages which Trieste possesses. Moreover, should the dual empire ultimately be split, and, as a consequence of the great war, Hungary set up in business for herself as a completely independent kingdom, Austria would be literally a land-locked country, whose only fluvial outlet would be down the Danube to the Black sea, through foreign territory, since Roumania always will be foreign, so far as Austria is concerned.

Austrian Lloyds is the best known of the shipping lines. It is partly a Government enterprise and has enjoyed large subventions. Its vessels, which pass through the Suez canal to the far east, compare very favorably with the French and English lines. Before the outbreak of hostilities the company was in a rather bad way financially, owing, it was declared, to mismanagement. The war, naturally, has made matters worse, and a recent report was to the effect that the company's losses for the current year were about $600,000.

Local Mediterranean lines have served the Austrian population in the Levant and Egypt. Austria has had considerable traffic both with Constantinople and with Alexandria.

The Austro-American line was the one which maintained a regular service with New York and with several of the southern ports, as well as with South America. This line drew considerable profits from its emigrant service at the period when the emigration of the Slavic population was encouraged.

With its facilities as a commercial port, Trieste offers some natural advantages as a naval port, and these have been improved. Though there may be some warships at Fiume, Trieste is the naval rendezvous of the Austro-Hungarian fleet. It is also the shelter and the starting point of the Austrian submarines. Little is known about the number of Austrian submarines, but when the war broke out they formed a part of the Austrian navy. It is assumed that more have been built in the meantime, or that Germany may have shipped the parts to Trieste to be assembled there.

Occasional reports have reached the outside world of attacks by Austrian submarines, and the blowing up of several transport ships of England and France has been attributed to them rather than to the German submarines. Whatever the Austrian fleet may be that is assembled in the Gulf of Trieste, it apparently has been effective enough to resist any attack by the Italian navy, supplemented by the warships of the Allies. The Austrian fleet may be bottled up there as are the German warships at Kiel and other German ports, but since Trieste is the objective of the Italian attack the Austrian fleet may be of more use to Austria than the German fleet to Germany, since it is able to supplement the strong land defences which must be overcome before an Italian army can have a chance to take Trieste.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it." —Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a pure remedy containing the extractive properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, meets the needs of woman's system at this critical period of her life. Try it.

If there is any symptom in your case which puzzles you, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

MAJOR H. G. BAKER KILLED

Father Notified of Death While Preparing for Convention.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 27.—City Clerk Samuel Baker while engaged this morning in directing the arrangements for the convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, which opened to-day, received an official notification from Ottawa that his son, Major Horace Greeley Baker, had been killed in action.

Major Baker was well known in London, and his death brought many expressions of sympathy to his father.

FATHER DROWNED, SON WOUNDED

QUEBEC, Aug. 27.—One tragedy provokes another. This axiom was again proved to-day when a telegram was received from Ottawa addressed to Mr. James Malon, who was drowned some days ago, telling of the wounding of his son at the front.

ITALIANS DRIVE TOWARDS TRIESTE

THE BRITISH ADVANCE NEAR LANGEMARCK

Italians Bring Up Heavy Guns To Blast A Way For Infantry

Forces Have Advanced So Rapidly That Heavy Artillery Has Been Unable to Keep Pace---Temporary Breathing Spell on the Bidnsizza Plateau But Further South Italians Are Driving Towards Trieste---Germany's Reply to the Argentine is a Complete Backdown.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:—

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW, August 29.—The spectre of a counter-revolution in Russia was invoked to-day to persuade widely split elements to reconcile their difference in the Russia national conference. The speaker was M. Orekhoff, spokesman for the railroad employees. He took the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates sternly to task for their imaginings that every step proposed by the cadets was a reactionary step. He declared, however, that if a counter-revolution did come he and his fellow railroad employees "would see that it failed" by tying up every means of communication in the country. "There is no doubt a counter-revolution is growing," he declared. "If the revolutionary leaders do not take action we railroad men by strikes will see that the movement fails."

LONDON, August 29.—"Southeast of Langemarck we cleared a strong point in France on our new line," was the only major fighting reported today by Field Marshal Haig from the British front. He also detailed successful raids carried out northeast of Couveaucourt and southwest of Halluch.

LONDON, August 29.—Even Italy's great offensive paused temporarily to-day making the "breathing space" in the series of simultaneous French, British and Italian drives complete. The Italian forces have advanced so rapidly that the heavy artillery has been unable to keep pace with the infantry. The Bainsizza Plateau now is virtually the centre of the Isonzo fighting. Austrian forces were reported to be preparing for a stand there with heavy reinforcements at hand to repel further advance of Cadorna's troops. In this contingency the Italian war command must move up its artillery over the rock heights of the Monte Santo chain to prepare for further blasting out of the enemy. Fighting is still continuing on a heavy scale south of Bainsizza as the Italian troops drive on towards Trieste. On the British front there was fighting at half a dozen spots, but apparently no concerted resumption of Haig's offensive.

Paris despatches indicated the same was true on the French front, an artillery duel being the main fighting activity reported. Of the German drive on Riga no fresh word has been received.

(By Chas. P. Stewart, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Buenos Aires, August 29.—Germany surrenders to the Argentine precisely the same principles as to neutrals rights in the submarine zone that she refused to relinquish to the United States. This was the outstanding comment to-day in both official and public circles over Germany's complete "backdown" in her .atest note, received last night. It was regarded as highly significant of a change of front from the ruthless submarine policy which ranged the United States and Brazil with the Allies.

RUSSIAN DIVISION FLEES IN DISORDER

PETROGRAD, August 29.—The War Office to-day declared that one whole Russian division in the region of Muntcbeliu had fled in disorder permitting an enemy advance. This retreat permitted the Teutons to advance throughout the day and at night to penetrate Russian positions in the region of Varnitza.

GIRL KILLED, TWO INJURED IN A RUNAWAY NEAR LANG

Otonabee Party Were Returning Home After Picking Berries—Mary Scully Never Regained Consciousness.

Special to the Examiner.

KEENE, Aug. 28.—A very unfortunate accident occurred at Lang on Wednesday last, when Mrs. James Nelson and little daughter, and Miss Mary Scully were driving home from picking berries. The horse took fright, became unmanageable and ran away. Mrs. Nelson received a bad shock and minor injuries, her daughter suffered a broken collar bone, and Miss Scully, who was thrown head first against a fence, sustained a fractured skull, from which she never regained consciousness. Death relieved her on Thursday evening.

The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon to Fife's cemetery.

Votes For The Women Who Are Of British Birth

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 29.—It is understood that the Government has reached a decision regarding the proposed franchise legislation. Any idea of a ruthless disfranchisement of men of alien enemy origin has, it is stated, been abandoned. There will be no disfranchisement. Instead, it is the intention of the Government to extend the franchise to all women in the Dominion who are British subjects by birth or naturalization. Very few women in Canada have actually been naturalized. The exceptions include widows of men who had homesteads and who had to be naturalized in order to come into their heritage. The Act will exclude all women, or nearly all women who came to Canada from foreign countries, including the United States, even though the women have married British subjects.

MODEL TRENCH TO BE BIG FEATURE OF THE EXHIBITION

Peterborough War Veterans Decide to Make Exhibit at the Peterborough Industrial—Will Build and Man the Trench Themselves

A SPLENDID ATTRACTION

One of the most interesting attractions that the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition has ever offered the public was made possible last night by the action of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association in deciding to build a model trench for the Exhibition and to make an exhibit of war souvenirs. The matter was discussed at a largely attended special meeting with Vice-President Fred Long in the chair.

The only condition is that the Exhibition directors will assume the expenses in connection with the matter, which will not be large, as Lieut.-Col. Ackerman has been successful in securing most of the equipment and material at Kingston, and the Veterans themselves will build the trench and man it afterwards. A call for volunteers at last night's session met with a ready response.

It will be the first opportunity the majority of Peterborough have had of seeing what a front line trench really looks like. The Veterans propose to build a trench exactly like those in use in Flanders with bays dug-outs, parapet firing step, sand bags, barb wire entanglements, etc. Machine guns will be in operation, sigmallers at work, and the trench will be manned by war veterans carrying the full equipment exactly as at the front. The public will be invited to take a trip through the trench and the Veterans on duty will explain everything to them so that visitors to the Exhibition will carry away with them an impression of what "the trenches" are like. It will be an educational feature of wonderful value and, coupled with a big display of war souvenirs, will make the Great War Veterans' exhibit one of the finest ever shown. The willingness of the Veterans to turn out and perform the arduous work of trench digging will be appreciated by the Exhibition directors and by the public.

It is safe to say that no one will leave the Exhibition grounds without a trip through the model trench. The Veterans decided last night to put on the exhibit entirely free of charge to the public.

Mr. H. MacLachlan Of Keene Injured

KEENE, Aug. 28.—Last Wednesday while driving from Keene station, Mr. Harry MacLachlan met with a very painful accident. The king-bolt of the waggon dropped out, throwing Mr. MacLachlan to the ground, cutting a bad gash in his leg and causing numerous bruises.

Recommend 50 Per Cent. Increase In Pay And Separation Allowances

Basing their finding on the facts that the cost of living and the wages paid in civil life have very materially increased since the outbreak of war, the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association declared at their meeting last night that the soldier's pay and the separation allowance in case of married men should each be increased by at least fifty per cent. This expression of opinion was given in response to Mr. G. N. Gordon's request for information on this point. A committee composed of Messrs. Victor, Cooper, Coleman, Bird, Smith and Gahagan, considered the question of what increase might be considered reasonable, and recommended a minimum of fifty per cent. which would mean a daily wage of $1.65 for the soldier, and a separation allowance of $30 a month for the wife. The report was adopted when submitted to the general meeting and will be forwarded to Mr. Gordon.

PTE. GEO. H. SADLER AND PTE. H. BROWN DEAD FROM WOUNDS

Other Peterborough Soldiers Are Officially Reported Wounded in To-day's List--Lieut.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Capt. Browning and Lieut. McNabb Home From Overseas---To-day's General Military News.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pte. Geo. H. Sadler, formerly of B Peterborough Squadron, 8th C.M.R., 560 Wolfe St.

Pte. Harry Brown, 10th Battalion, son of Mrs. P. McAuliffe, Emily.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Edward Howard King, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, 548 Downie St.

Pte. F. A. Anderson, formerly of the 59th Battalion, Union St.

Pte. L. L. Forsythe, Infantry, brother of Mrs. F. W. Bates, 564 Downie St.

Pte. H. Carter, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. Thos. J. Fitzgerald, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Douro.

PTE. GEO. H. SADLER.

Mr. George Sadler, 560 Wolfe St., has received the tragic news from Ottawa that his son, Pte. Geo. H. Sadler, Canadian Mounted Rifles, has died of wounds in No. 1 Casualty Clearing Station on August 22nd. Pte. Sadler enlisted here in January, 1915, with B (Peterborough) Squadron of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and went overseas with that unit, afterwards being transferred to another C.M.R. battalion at the front. He was wounded during the Somme battle last year. He was employed in the paint shop at the C.G.E. before enlisting. A brother, Pte. Jack Sadler, went overseas with the machine gun section of the 93rd Battalion. His father and two sisters are left to mourn Pte. Sadler's loss. The community generally will sympathize with the bereaved relatives.

PTE. HARRY BROWN.

Mrs. Patrick McAuliffe, of Emily township, received word on the 27th that her son, Pte. Harry Brown, of the 10th Canadian Battalion, A Co'y, was reported died of wounds on Aug. 17th, 1917.

PTE. EDWARD H. KING.

Mrs. E. King, 548 Downie St., received an official message from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Edward H. King, formerly of the 93rd Battaljon, has been admitted to the 2nd Western General Hospital, Manchester, England, on August 20th, suffering from gun-shot wounds and a fracture of the left leg. Pte. King went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and went to France with an entrenching unit. While serving with this unit he won his corporal's stripes, but afterwards had to revert when transferred to the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion.

PTE. FRED. A. ANDERSON.

Pte. Fred. A. Anderson, who resided at 613 Union Street when he enlisted here in the spring of 1915 with the 59th Battalion, is officially reported wounded—the second time that he has been hit. Pte. Anderson is single and is thirty years of age. He went overseas with a draft from the 59th and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front.

PTE. L. L. FORSYTHE.

Mrs. T. W. Bates, 564 Stewart St., has received official news that her brother, Pte. Louis Lloyd Forsythe, was wounded on August 15th. No further particulars have been received. This is the third time Pte. Forsythe's name has appeared on the casualty lists, as he was twice before reported shell shocked. He enlisted in Toronto with the 35th Battalion.

PTE. H. CARTER.

Pte. H. Carter, who enlisted here in October, 1915, with the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, is officially reported wounded. He has no relatives here, his next-of-kin residing in England.

PTE. THOS. J. FITZGERALD.

Mr. P. Fitzgerald, of Douro, received an official message from Ottawa on Monday evening, stating that his son, Pte. Thomas J. Fitzgerald, had been admitted to the 26th General Hospital, Etaples, suffering from gunshot wounds in the chest and arm. Pte. Fitzgerald enlisted and went overseas with the 93rd Battalion. On reaching England he was transferred to the 20th Canadians, and drafted to France, where he has been serving since October, 1916.

OFFICERS HOME.

Three officers who have been on overseas service arrived home this morning, in the persons of Lieut.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Capt. Browning and Lieut. Jack McNabb.

Lieut. Col. Clegg, who, at the time of the outbreak of war, was officer commanding the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, reached the city just too late for the funeral of his brother, the late Samuel Clegg, who was buried yesterday. Col. Clegg went overseas with the 1st Canadian contingent, leaving Peterborough in August, 1914, in command of the 57th detachment, and he has therefore been away from home over three years. Since January of 1915, when the Canadians went to France, Col. Clegg has been connected with the 9th Alberta Reserve battalion, with a month's service in the trenches with the 49th Battalion. He has now been ordered home to Canada at the disposal of the military authorities.

Lieut. Jack McNabb went overseas in July of last year as officer in command of No. 7 Platoon, B Company of the 93rd Battalion. He was transferred to a Canadian battalion at the front, but became ill soon after reaching France, and had to be moved to England, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis. He has now been granted a short leave home and will return to France in October.

Capt. Browning went overseas with a Port Hope battalion.

The Examiner has a letter addressed to Pte. Jas. W. Marsh, No. 1003607, Peterborough. Pte. Marsh may obtain the communication by calling at this office. The writer of the letter did no know his exact address and is anxious to get in touch with him.

The Kingston Whig says: Little is known of the hard work being done by the artillery at Petawawa camp. A week ago the whole division entrenched in Petawawa and occupied the trenches by night, firing at various targets from the trenches. Last week the division had a route march to Corry Lake, leaving at 2 a.m and not returning until five o'clock the

Will Be Called By A Proclamation

Men of First Class Under Conscription Bill Will Not Be Summoned Until Tribunals Are Established

MEASURE IS SIGNED

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General, signed the Military Service Bill of Government House, Toronto, shortly after six o'clock last night, Col. Henderson, his military secretary, being in attendance. The bill was brought from Ottawa to Toronto by special messenger, who arrived in the city in the morning and left again with the momentous document last night. Two other bills designated An Act to amend the Customs Act and the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway Bill were signed at the same time.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—The Military Service Bill will be formally assented to by Mr. Justice Duff, Acting Deputy Governor-General, in the Senate to-day. It has already been signed at Toronto by his Excellency the Governor-General. The bill will, when it receives the gubernatorial assent to-morrow, at once become law and all its clauses operative save that classes will not be called for service until the issue of a proclamation by the Governor-in-Council. When the necessary regulations are completed and tribunals established, which will require two or three weeks, all things will be in readiness for the summoning of the first class, comprising unmarried men and childless widowers between the ages of 20 and 34 years of age. The board of selection, which is to be appointed by joint resolution of the two Houses of Parliament and which is to name one member of each of the local tribunals, has not yet been named, owing, it is reported, to delay on the part of the leader of the Opposition in forwarding the names of his nominee for places on that body.

The clauses providing for the punishment of persons who incite others to resist the application o fthe Act will be operative when the bill is assented to to-morrow. These sections do not prohibit criticism by the people, of conscription. They do, however, impose severe penalties upon any person who advises men liable to serve to contravene the Act or the regulations under it, who wilfully resists or impedes or attempts to resist or impede the operation of the Act, or who persuades or induces or attempts to induce others to resist the operation of the Act, or to refrain from making application for a certificate of exemption. A person guilty of these offences will be liable to imprisonment with hard labour for not less than one year and not more than five.

Provision is also made for the suppression of publications that may be convicted of publishing articles which have for their object the incitement of those subjects to the Military Service Act, to refuse obedience to its provisions or impede its application in any way. Action against publications can only be taken with the approval of the central appeal judge.

When the Governor-in-Council, by proclamation, calls out for active service the classes required, any man who is called out, and who, without reasonable excuse, fails to report, may, on conviction be subject to a term or imprisonment not exceeding five years with hard labour.

Applications have been received by the Minister of Justice from prominent men in all parts of Quebec and the other provinces expressing their

HUNS MUST THROW OFF KAISER'S YOKE TO OBTAIN PEACE

President Wilson's Answer to the Pope's Peace Proffer Means That the Decision Rests With German People, Not Their Rulers

THE DOOR IS OPEN

(By Carl Groat, U.P. Staff Correspondent.)

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 29. — Peace rests upon the decision of the German people, not upon their rulers. The peace door is swung wide, but the Teutons must come through it without Kaiser Wilhelm as their leader. Else they must be pounded and pierced until sheer steel convinces them that the Kaiser's militaristic yoke is impossible, either for themselves or for the safety of the world. This epitomizes to-day President Wilson's answer to the Pope's peace proffer, probably now in the hands of the Pontiff. His rejection of peace at this time stands out in diplomatic minds as one of the most virile State papers of this war. Yet, it is tempered with another direct offer to Germany to get peace by spurning Kaiserism and its horrors and insincerity.

Don't Forget To-night's Meeting of Greater Peterborough Assoc'n

The meeting of the Greater Peterborough Association in the Council Chamber to-night should bring out a large attendance of members (every citizen is a member) who are anxious for the united effort that is almost indispensible to the city's progress. The committees are expected to present reports of whatever activities to which they have applied themselves, and there will be a general discussion and arrangement of the plans for the polling of the new Ackerman Shoe Company's by-law. The men who have taken a lead in this movement are urged to renew their enthusiasm and also to interest others that the meeting may be a success. Everyone is needed.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 29, 1917

"PITY THE POOR FARMER."

One frequently hears this ironical and sarcastic exclamation from some city dweller, who, in view of butter at forty-five or fifty cents per pound, eggs in the same ratio, sixty cents a pack for potatoes, and top prices for all farm products, says sardonically, "Pity the poor farmer"—who gets munition worker prices for his stuff.

There is a good deal of surface justification for this really unfounded reproach. Persons making it do so thoughtlessly, without thinking that the farmer, as a rule, even with high prices, earns hardly what he gets. He has to work early and late, has to contend with a good many disadvantages. Taking one season with another he has to suffer from drought or too much rain; he has to fight insect pests, and may often have to helplessly see blighting storms, hail and gales almost ruin a crop ready for the harvest. Or if that is spared, there are troubles from scarcity of timely help. He may be unable to promptly and profitably harvest it. Under these circumstances the farmer feels that he is justified in asking good prices, especially when he goes to the shops and finds that prices for all he has to buy—drygoods, hardware, groceries, boots and shoes, etc. —are almost double the prices he has been accustomed to paying.

But the farmers in general, except in a few instances—in the vicinity of a city like Peterborough—does not get the benefit of abnormally high prices. The commission merchant, the cold storage agent, goes through the country and gathers up farmers' products at far less figures than is got by those in close touch with the cities. Farmers in the country districts, many of them, do not know the prices, and do not know what to charge. A few days ago a city man on a fishing excursion near a village not more than a dozen miles from Peterborough, got a large basket of eggs in a village store at thirty-two cents per dozen, when they were selling "round" forty-five cents on the Peterborough market; and one citizen got his winter's supply of strawberries near another near village at ten cents a box, when the lowest price in Peterborough was fifteen or sixteen cents per box.

So that all the farmers of the county and country do not get the high prices which some of our near-by farmers "soak" us with as a rule.

It is human nature for a farmer or farmer's wife, or city man, to get as much money as is "going" for what he, in either case, has to sell. The workingman or mechanic properly want the highest wages that prevail. The hoarding of millions of dozens of eggs, tons of butter, etc., in cold storage plants, creates an artificial scarcity, and of course, increased demand; and the relations of supply and demand create prices, whether it is labour or food that is concerned.

As a general thing, we are suffering from high prices of everything that enters into our living, and in general this high range of prices is due to war conditions and war demands. But it is feared that there are other special reasons added to general conditions, such as withdrawal of food from the market by hoarding in cold storage and other combinations to increase prices which have a very decided effect in penalizing both town people and farmers with increased cost of living; and it is, therefore, natural that both town workmen and farmers should demand the highest prices for their labour or their goods.

"Pity the poor farmer!" comes sarcastically to the minds and mouths of many when they read or are told that at a farmers' picnic in the county of Welland, when 25,000 persons were present, there were at the height of the festivities, a million dollars worth of autos parked about the grounds.

Is it a surprise that farmers should have the luxury of auto cars? In the first place as a rule farmers can well afford autos — better, perhaps, than the majority of those who own autos in the cities, and can, many of them, obtain autos that do not represent a mortgage on the farm as a mortgage on a house and lot represents many other autos.

In the second place an auto is not always a luxury or a vehicle of pleasure to the farmer. It is a part of his equipment. Last Saturday on the London, Ont., market, there was a hundred farmers' autos that had come, some of them twenty miles—and a few eggs would pay for the trip even with gasoline at 35 cents per gallon; and the increased price got on the city market would well repay the investment. A prudent farmer can make an auto car or truck a paying accessory of his business; and its possession does not indicate a capacity or desire for luxurious enjoyment any more than the possession of a plough or a reaping machine.

When it comes to a consideration of high prices from which we are all suffering, it seems to be impossible to exempt anybody from this burden or attribute the blame to any one definite cause. We are all in the same boat. We are all paying the penalty of a state of war.

The more quickly the war is ended, the more soldiers and other help we send, the sooner we shall be able to return to normal conditions, and even that process will be slow. We shall have to contend with unknown and perhaps difficult conditions of readjustment.

With Sir Thomas White sitting on the safety valve, Sir Robert Borden orders "full steam ahead" for the C.N.R. big interests special.

WHERE ARE WE?

Canada does not realize where we stand in regard to conditions in this country. We know, however, where we stand as far as the soldiers who are doing their glorious bit in France and Flanders.

While they are bleeding in France, we at home are being bled—we are in the grip of the harpies of high prices due, in the main, though modified in detail, to the grip and greed of the big interests, the profiteers, which are fattening on the vitals of the country, encouraged, and fostered and permitted by the complaisance of the government; and it seems, sometimes, by the offered help of the government, animated by the desire of holding power even at the expense of the ruin of the country and the welfare and comfort of the people.

There seems to be an orgy of grab all through and all round: but the people are beginning to be aroused to the situation and may be brought to the point of refusing to continue to be pliant political instruments of their own enslavement.

Even journals friendly to the government as party organs are beginning to speak out. A despatch published yesterday states that the Montreal Gazette, the leading government organ of the country, editorially says, that the decision of the British government to import no more Canadian hogs or bacon "indicates that either the Food Controller has misled the people of Canada, or the British government's actoin is due to the Canadian packers having dealt unfairly with them."

Le Canada, another Montreal journal, charges that Hon. Mr. Hanna's appointment as food controller, is merely an attempt to throw dust in the eyes of the public while profiteers are accumulating stocks of poultry, meat and vegetables. "The vampires of cold storage warehouses are quiet; nobody will disturb them."

A Perth traveller says that the waste of food stuffs at the Petawawa military camp "is almost beyond belief"—beef, pork, beans, bread, and other eatables are thrown into the garbage dump by tons, and it is stated that barrels of meat are being buried there to be got out of the way; and that 800 hogs are not enough to consume the garbage and the number is being increased to 500 hogs—evidently not cold storage hogs; they would gobble up everything in sight or reach.

Now, these statements are, of course, subject to considerable discount, but even then, from what we know and see there is immense waste in military expenditure all over the country, with Ottawa and the government setting the pace and the example. While the people are begged by the government to pinch and save money to turn over to the government to help "win the war," we find the government throwing millions at the heads of the big interests in railway deals or steals; and even the gag is put into the mouths of members of parliament to prevent adequate discussion; and hasten the money into the pockets of the money magnates, the favourites of the government. The government through the food controller, prescribes "meatless" days, yet permits waste of meats by the ton in a military camp.

All round we have a desperate and exasperating condition in Canada. At the fountain head—at Ottawa—we have incapacity—"inactivity and indecision"—enough to induce a not too scrupulous minister to leave the government in disgust. We have miserable and expensive striving to retain office and strengthen the strangle hold of the big interests on the country. War interests, the interests of the people, seem to be forgotten. Everything seems to be at sixes and sevens, with only one thing certain and distinct—the people pay the piper in many ways—the war interests of Canada suffer—Rome burns while the politicians fiddle.

The less canned goods the people use, the bigger the hold-up hoard grows in the cold storage robbers' caves.

CANADIANS IN HOSPITALS

Seventeen Thousand Under Treatment in Britain.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—Of the boys whom Canada has sent to the front 8,840 are now enrolled in the Canadian military hospitals for treatment and re-education, according to the last report of the Military Hospitals Commission, dated August 15. Of these, 7,046 are in convelescent homes, and 1,115 are tuberculosis cases in the sanatoria provided by the Military Hospitals Commission for their treatment. The remaining 679 are chiefly in general hospitals. The increase in the total population of the various hospitals over last week is only 29.

The latest return from the Director of Medical Services in London indicates that on August 10 the Canadian soldiers being cared for in the hospitals and sanatoria in the United Kingdom were 17,813.

HIS PLEASURE WAS COSTLY

Owner of Motorboat Fined $400 For a Series of Neglects of the Rules.

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 28.—Don McKellar, who owns a motorboat, upon a visit to Alexandria Bay took a few friends out for a spin, but because he did not have the approved life preservers for each passenger a steamboat inspector imposed a fine of $100. For not having a whistle he was "touched" for another $100. But the worst was yet to come. His pilot rules were destroyed by water which had sprayed the boat in a heavy sea, and for not having them aboard $200 additional was placed in the reckoning, making a total fine of $400.

HOW WOMEN MAY HELP TO WIN THE WAR.

Reminding the women that they need not be afraid of being drafted, an exchange makes a few suggestions in regard to what they might offer to do to win the war. Here are some of them:

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Eventful Dialogue

By RUTH GRAHAM

A party consisting of an elderly gentleman, an elderly lady, a young man, a young woman and a notary were gathered in the drawing room of a chateau in the environs of Paris. The notary called each in turn for his or her signature on a paper lying on a table, then affixed his seal, folded the paper, put it into a tin box and, bowing, left the room. The young man and young woman followed, apparently wrapped up in each other.

"This takes me back nearly a quarter of a century," said the elderly man, "when I passed through a like ceremony. I was then as big a fool as Francois."

"And I as addle pated as Lucille."

"Your niece may possibly possess the gift of constancy."

"Your nephew may not be drawn hither and thither by every pretty face he sees."

During this bit of dialogue the man stood with one hand on the table where marriage settlements had been signed, eying the lady sternly, scornfully, reproachfully, while the lady had walked to a window and stood looking out, tapping the waxed floor with the toe of her slipper. The man was forty-two, the woman thirty-eight, and both still looked young.

"What has become of De Belleville?"

"How should I know? Why should I care?"

"It was he who rendered that signing of settlements between you and me null and void. But, parbleu, there has been time since then for many such interferences."

"De Belleville never interfered between you and me."

"Did not interfere! Will you be good enough to inform me what did?"

"That actress."

"What actress?"

"The one who was breaking the hearts of so many young fools. She played at the Theatre Francais, I believe, though it was so long ago I fail to remember. Doubtless by this time she is as unattractive as I am."

"Who told you that I admired an actress at the Theatre Francais?"

"I saw you there myself the evening of the day the settlements were made for our marriage. I was indisposed and about to go to bed when a friend gave me a bit of information. I went to the theater and saw you gazing upon the woman through adoring eyes."

"H'm! Had the malicious information communicated by your friend anything to do with my eyes appearing to adore the actress?"

"What I saw through my eyes"—

"You mean your imagination."

—"was convincing."

"Then?"

"Then I proposed that two could play at a game like that. De Belleville happened to call the next morning. You came while he was there. I compelled you to wait, and when he went away"—

"I see it all. Why have you waited all these years to tell me that under a false assumption, instigated by—by whom?"

"My cousin, Julie Demourier."

"Julie Demourier! Why"—

"Why what?"

"She threw herself at me as soon as you had broken with me."

"She threw herself at you!"

"Certainly."

"Oh, heavens!"

He strode toward her and stood beside her, looking into her eyes almost fiercely.

"She blighted our lives," he said.

There was no reply. She stood with her back to him, looking intently out through the window.

"You permitted yourself to be made a dupe by one who was not worthy to tie your shoe."

"If you had loved me you would have sought me again. You would have given me an opportunity to"—

"How did I know that you were prompted by jealousy and were showing a preference you did not feel for another?"

The argument was unanswerable.

"Heaven grant," he continued, "that no 'friend' will come between these two happy creatures who have just left us before the knot is tied."

She shuddered.

"Hortense," he said in a quieter tone, "there is yet old age for us."

"For me. You are in your prime. A man of your age, if he marries, will unite with a young woman."

"You are as beautiful to me as the day that contract was signed."

"Not to the world. You would become ashamed of me. Only men who grow old with their wives grow old in their affection for them."

"Hortense, let us close the gap between that settlement ceremony and the present so far as we can by a wedding. I will call the carriage; we will drive to the maire."

She neither answered nor stirred. He placed an arm about her and kissed her. Then he stepped to a bell and called a servant.

"The carriage," he said when the lackey entered.

That evening the two returned for dinner from a drive and were met at the door by the nephew and niece.

"Why, auntie, where have you been?"

"To the maire's," said her companion. "We have been married."

"Married!"

"Yes; we leave nuptial ceremonials to young fools like you. Thank heaven we have passed that stupid period."

"Mon Dieu!"

The Real "War Bread" must contain the entire wheat grain—not the white flour center — but every particle of gluten and mineral salts—also the outer bran coat that is so useful in keeping the bowels healthy and active. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the real "war bread" because it is 100 per cent. whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Contains no yeast, baking powder, seasoning, or chemicals of any kind. Food conservation begins with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for breakfast and ends with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for supper. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruits. Made in Canada.

Lost Fifty Pounds, On German Diet

Returned Resident Tells of Conditions in City of Hamburg.

New York, August 27.—Passengers arriving at an Atlantic port from Denmark say that economic conditions in Germany at the present time are so strained that they do not believe the war will last through the coming winter. The soldiers in the battlefields they say are feeling the lack of proper food and numbers of them home on leave have told their families that the armies could not stand another winter's hardships in the trenches.

Wm. Bartholomew, manager for twenty years of the Holland Oil Company, in Hamburg, returned to-day in poor health through lack of nourishing food. He has lost 50 pounds in weight since the commencement of the war. When he was asked about food conditions in Germany, Mr. Bartholomew said:

"It is impossible to get a square meal anywhere unless you have the money and influence, so you can imagine that living in Germany is pretty tough. For the last six weeks before I left Germany I was kept at my house in what the German officials call seclusion, and not allowed to go anywhere or see anybody, which I assume was done to prevent my carrying any news away with me. I was glad to get away and am going to my native city, Philadelphia, where I hope to remain for the rest of my days."

He told his friends that all the food in Germany was sent to the soldiers on the battle fronts, and the suffering among civilians, especially those who are living on small pension from the government, was very severe.

MAN POWER FAILING.

Regarding Germany's man power, Mr. Bartholomew said there seemed to be plenty of men not on the firing line, but the past six months he was permitted to see what was going on, he could not fail to notice a considerable reduction in the number of men drilling and being prepared for the war.

The U-boat is still looked upon by the German people as the nation's chief asset in bringing about what they seem to have faith will be an ultimate victory, he asserted.

YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY.

When I was a boy I used to go
Across the fields, where an unseen foe
Was waiting in ambush to give me fight—
Oh, I was brave and my cause was right!
I carried a gun that my daddy made,
And a sword as sharp as a hero's blade,
And a deadly dagger that Bill Brown found.
So I clattered away to the battle-ground,
And I dreamed as I marched away to fame,
That the world would ring with my mighty name!

My gun was made out of whittled wood—
That, I take it, is understood—
And I had no bullets or powder-flask,
So to shoot the foe was a man-sized task!
But the crouching enemy never knew
'Twas a wooden gun with an aim untrue;
And when I'd march to the bloodless fray,
He'd always scamper and hide away.
You see, my name 'most took his breath,
And he'd shudder and shake well-night to death!

'Most every day I would organize
A squad of soldiers about my size—
Once there were five in my company,
A goodly sight for the folks to see!
So did I lead my daring band
To the hidden foe across the land,
And Solly Wittig's old red drum—
With a broken head—just made things hum!
If there had been moving pictures then,
Ere now you'd have seen my gallant men.

* * * * *

To-day there marched along the street
Some bronze-faced boys with rhythmic feet;
It took me back to the long ago,
When I marched to conquer a bristling foe,
And oh, I wished I were marching too,
Under the brave Red, White and Blue!
I longed to go but I had to stay,
For my step is slow and my head is gray;
So I doffed my hat and sent forth a prayer
For those stalwart boys who must do and dare!

Will F. Griffin, in N. Y. Times.

For New Enlistments.

Further conferences have taken place between Sir Thomas Tait and the Government respecting the methods to be employed by the new director-general of national service, in raising the number of enlistments up to the half-million maximum.

Details as to these methods and as to the personnel of Sir Thomas Tait's associates will be made known probably next week. The enlistment scheme will be put into operation in such a way as not to reduce the supply of labor necessary to the production of war munitions and supplies.

NOW GET AN ALLOWANCE.

Wives of Canadian Soldiers Married Since the War.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Canadian soldiers who married since the war opened are naturally gratified by the new order-in-Council which cancels the regulations requiring the engagement to marry to have existed prior to the war. The new order is retroactive and wives are entitled to draw allowance due since the date of marriage. The order also provides that where a soldier neglects to apply for allowance the wife may do so through the commanding officer.

GERMAN ARTIFICAL HANDS "FEEL" FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS

Newspapers from Holland arriving here have long articles telling of the wonderful strides made in Germany in medicine and surgery as a result of the exigencies of the war. Thousands of German soldiers who have lost their hands, their arms and legs are being fitted with artificial members in a hospital at Singen, which are said to be the most ingenious and simple substitutes yet devised.

An artificial hand, which is the work of Prof. Stodola, technical engineer, and Prof. Sauerbruch, one of Germany's famous surgeons enables a man to do all the work that he heretofore was able to do before that member was amputated. In order that Prof. Sauerbruch can carry on his work to the fullest possible extent, the Prussian Minister of War has established the hospital for the purpose at Singen. He has at his assistants Professors Ruge and Felix, famous professors of anatomy, of Switzerland.

According to the German accounts after the amputation of a man's hand the muscles in the stump of his arm are grafted with the skin from the amputated member and this skin becomes a part of the muscles. To this skin the artificial hand is applied, just as a pipe of smaller diameter is set into one of larger diameter. The artificial hand is then under perfect control of the muscles of the arm which heretofore operated the muscles of the hand, and it is claimed that a man can almost "feel" with the artificial member.

Dr. Stadler is the chief surgeon of the hospital and in conjunction with Professor Sauerbruch, has developed the art of applying these artificial members so that it has become an art.

INVALIDS AT QUEBEC.

Largest Number of Returned Soldiers Are From Ontario.

QUEBEC, Aug. 28.—Over a thousand invalids reached Quebec early last night from overseas. The largest number come from Ontario and the west but some Montrealers also are in the batch.

Theodore Dreiser is the author of "The Genius," one of the best selling novels in the past ten years —a novel that created world-wide comment for its daring discussion of the artistic temperament.

Canned Goods The Order-In-Council Has Put Under Ban

A copy of a special issue of the Canada Gazette has the following Order-in-Council dated August 24:

(1) On and after the twenty-fourth day of August, 1917, and until further notice, except as hereinafter provided, the sale and purchase of peas, beans, tomatoes, beets, celery corn, spinach, rhubarb and pumpkins preserved in cans, glass jars or any other container, commonly known as "canned vegetables," is prohibited.

(2) The above regulations shall not apply:

(a) When such vegetables are sold by the manufacturer to the wholesaler, jobber or retailer; or by the wholesaler or jobber to the retailer; or

(b) When such vegetables are to be consumed in lumber camps, mining camps, construction camps, and dining cars, provided that they will be consumed within said lumber camps, mining camps, construction camps and dining cars, and not resold.

(c) When such vegetables form a part of the contents of a can, glass jar, bottle or other container, and are sold as soups, catsup or pickles.

(3) It is provided, however, that the Food Controller for Canada may issue licenses permitting the sale and consumption of said "canned vegetables" in such cases as he deems necessary or expedient.

SMOKE SCREENS.

Turned out in Thousands for U. S. Boats.

Washington, August 27. — Thousands of smoke producers to protect American troop, food and munition ships from submarines are being turned out daily by a government contractor in Delaware.

On and after October 1st no ship of any description may sail from an American port unless equipped with them. On that date, too, all vessels must be painted by a system of camouflage worked out by the naval consulting board. Details of these systems are government secrets.

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Since the ladies of Ashburnham have been obliged to cease collecting waste paper for the benefit of the soldiers by others "butting in," I am at a loss to know what to do with my collection of papers, which I formerly collected. I feel that it is a pity to burn it. If any use can be made of it. What shall I do with it?

Yours, etc.,

New Drug Acts on Every Organ of Body

Makes Your Checks Rosy.

A pale face, sallow complexion, weak stomach, clogged liver, painful kidneys, catarrh affections, rheumatic pain, run down and anemic conditions of the whole system are caused from an impure, thin and watery condition of the blood. All these organs of the body are directly dependant on the blood for their source of strength. It will be a great boom to all these thousands of weak, anaemic, nervous, run-down people to hear and learn about this new drug "Bonized Phosphorus with Iron." After each meal and at bedtime take from two to three of these tablets with a little water. You will note that you will get results after the first few doses the iron acts immediately upon the blood while the phosphorus goes direct to the spine, the center of the nervous system.

As soon as you get the blood purified and the nerves soothed, the stomach, liver and kidneys begin to do their work and in 9 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent stronger. Your blood pressure will be increased, making your cheeks rosy and you once more have that vigorous, vivacious, keen, bright, alert feeling of boyhood days. The new drug is dispensed by F. C. Webber.

"Hard? Man alive! I meet expenses at every turn."

COAL SITUATION.

Dealers are Puzzled Over Washington's Action.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—Washington's big cut in the price of bituminous coal has created a somewhat puzzling situation in Toronto. Some reports say that the existing contracts between Canadian buyers and American operators stand, while from other quarters comes a contrary view of the matter. If they stand, then the local buyer who paid high prices early in the season, will lose; if they do not stand they will have to face a loss or hold on to their coal in the hope that a scarcity may cause the embargo to be lifted or the price raised.

The spacious lawns with their beautifully kept terraces, rolling to the river, presented a most fascinating appearance with their gay decorations of peasants and brilliant illumination of scores of electric lights

OPENED BY JUDGE HUYCKE

The fete was opened at four o'clock by His Honour Judge Huycke who in a few words expressed the appreciation of the allied powers for the great sacrifices the women workers for Red Cross are making. He also spoke of the critical condition of the Russian situation, which, he felt confident, will be cleared up soon.

HAD CHARGE OF BOOTHS.

The tea booth was in charge of Mrs. A. Turner and Miss English, assisted by Misses Gladys Collinson and Gertie Hood. At the ice cream booth, which was extremely popular were Mrs. T. Walker, Mrs. W. Roger, Mrs. W. Rew and Miss E. Peck. Mrs. F. Lenton, Mrs. Price and Miss Thomson took charge of the fancy work Misses Hilda Evans and Ruth Cunningham the fish pond. Mrs. W. R. Morris the raffle, Mrs. Devey and Miss Jessie Mervin the flower table.

HOUSE ALSO OPENED.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes also gave their beautiful house to the societies for the entertainment and made ideal hosts to those who played cards, came in for the musical programme, or to have their fortunes told by Mrs. Grant, Miss Archer or Miss Gladman. Those taking part in the musical part were Mrs. George Evans who made a most able accompanist at the piano. Miss Ruby Quartermaine, Mr. Tom Ward and Mr. Walter Chambers solos by whom were greatly appreciated and encored, Miss Elaine Braund who rendered several fine piano solos. Miss Annie Bickersteth added greatly to the programme by her charming and original gypsy dancing.

WINNERS AT CARDS.

During the afternoon and evening bridge and five hundred were indulged in, Mrs. J. MacLeland carrying off the bridge prize in the afternoon, Mrs. Gardiner and Mrs. Devey at night.

BAND AT NIGHT.

Besides the countless other attractions a splendid band concert was given in the evening by the 57th Band. This proved a big attraction and drew an extra large crowd.

$120 NETTED BY FETE.

The C.W.A. of St. John's and the Progressive Club are deeply indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, who with magnificent generosity and patriotism, undertook the entire expense of the fete which netted $120 for the Societies.

NOT WANTED AS LEADER

Western Liberals Willing to Have Borden in Cabinet But Desire a New Head—Premier Offers to Vacate in Favour of Foster

THE LATTER REFUSES

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Aug. 29.— Following a two hour and a half caucus of the Conservative party to-day the following official statement was given out:

"Sir Robert Borden announced that as the outcome of recent negotiations he had received from the spokesman of the Western Liberals with whom he had been in conference, a notification that they were prepared to enter a union government, of which Sir Robert Borden should be a member, but they desired another leader.

Of the four names put forward in this connection one was now present—Sir George Foster. Sir Robert offered to vacate his premiership in favour of Sir George, who should assume the leadership of a union government. Sir George stated that he was not prepared to undertake this responsibility, as he felt that Sir Robert was essential as Premier if Canada was to prosecute the war to the utmost. All present enthusiastically and unanimously endorsed this view, a number pledging themselves to continue in loyal support of Sir Robert Borden and co-operation with him in an effort to secure a government embracing all elements to a vigorous war policy.

GALLANT FEAT BY HARRY BUTLER

Jumped Into the Otonabee and Saved a Drowning Child

Maurice Deutch, the little 18-months-old son of Harry Deutch, 440 George street, had a narrow escape from drowning on Sunday afternoon. The little lad had been sent out for a walk with his elder brother who led him to the George Street Wharf. While the older boy was throwing stones in the water the little lad fell in. A little girl who was on the wharf jumped in but on finding herself unable to save the child called for help which she received from Mr. Harry Butler of the De Laval, who dived for the baby and rescued him after he had gone down for the second time.

The little girl also escaped unharmed from the accident.

Frank Carlisle, a youth of southern birth, fights for the Union during the Civil War. At its close, he finds himself ostracised by his former young friends, including Virginia Leighton, the girl he loves.

Huntley Thornton, a dissolute spendthrift, becomes Virginia's favored suitor.

Frank wins the admiration of the conservative politicians, and is made their candidate for congress, while Thornton becomes involved with Isaiah Gore "carpet bagger" and adventurer, who persuades him to run against Carlisle.

Thornton antagonizes the negroes. Frank befriends them, and when he saves Virginia's life and becomes a hero, his opponents resort to desperate means to win. Jim, Thornton's colored man, is made their tool.

Unknown to the plotters Virginia Leighton is at the Carlisle home at the time they send the terrified negro in to attack Carlisle's mother, thus hoping to force Frank to murder. It is she Jim attacks. Through the window Thornton sees it. He shoots the boy and carries Virginia away, leaving evidence against Frank.

That night Gore leads a mob of lynchers clamoring for Frank's life. He escapes, is found unconscious by Virginia's colored mammy and saved in her cabin.

In the morning Virginia and Frank together perceive the plot. That night the conspirators are exposed. The election goes to Frank, and with it that which is dearer, Virginia herself.

MONTREAL DISTURBANCES

MONTREAL, Aug. 28.—Harmless shouting of "A bas conscription" and the occasional shooting of a revolver marked the meandering progress of the anti-conscription procession through the streets of Montreal tonight until coming down Windsor street the leaders of the crowd heard someone ask "Will they go past The Gazette?" Immediately one of them yelled "The Gazette," and it was taken up rank by rank along the 500 or 600 marchers who still remained of the 2,000 who had started from Lafontaine Park.

They swung down into St. Antoine street, and the revolver began its popping at shorter intervals than before. Somewhere between The Gazette office and the corner of Windsor and St. Antoine streets certain marchers possessed themselves of pieces of brick and stone and threw these at The Gazette office as they passed, breaking four windows in the downstairs office and cracking two others.

There were a large number of mere boys marching in the ranks and the act of throwing stones was with most of them just an oblition of the mob spirit. Stones were also thrown at The Mail building as the rioters passed, and breaking glass was heard but it was reported afterwards that no damage was done.

At St. Peter street everyone began crying "The Star! The Star!" and some of the leaders tried to turn up in that direction, but Fernand Villeneuve went on, and, having more influence than the rest of the speaker-leaders, carried the procession past the corner of decision.

How The Wild West Does Things, Guided By An Old Peterboro' Boy

Jack Miller, Ranchman, "Stampedes" $1,800 Into the Red Cross Cash Corral

The Jack Miller mentioned in the following from the Hanna (Alberta) Herald is an old Peterorough boy, of Keene. Mr. Miller was a famous hockey star, who played with the Edmonton team for the Stanley Cup and afterwards with the celebrated Renfrew team. He was a team mate of Fred Whitcroft's for several seasons:

Approximately three thousand people attended the Stampede, given in aid of the Lonebutte Red Cross Society, last Friday, at Jack Miller's ranch, Hand Hills Lake. Early in the afternoon previous, teams, automoiles and saddle horses began to arrive from every point of the compass. Several parties from a distance camped on the grounds over night. On the morning of Friday, every trail leading to the Miller ranch was dotted with conveyances of every description, and hundreds of riders were taking every available short-cut to the scene of the Stampede. All morning the trails were black wih traffic, and at noon well over two thousand people had gathered at the ranch, with hundreds more yet to arrive.

The ladies of the Red Cross Society were at duty on the grounds early in the day, and the crowds were given the very finest of service at the refreshment stands, lunch counters, etc. Dozens of ladies sacrificed pleasure for the day and worked extremely hard at the booths These women deserve great credit for the manner in which they catered to the wants of the visitors. No lunch could have been more tastily prepared. Home-cooked victuals were awaiting the ravenous appetites during every hour of the day, and the quality would have done credit to the best hotel chef on the continent.

Mr. Miller had not overlooked anything which would have a tendency to make the visitors comfortable for the day, and a great deal of labour has been expended to this end. As a result, the thousands of visitors were able to view every event on the programme from good points of vantage, and in comfort.

Words fail to fully describe how successfully this big event really was. It is hard to imagine that one man, Mr. Jack Miller, known among his most intimate friends as "Hay" Miller, could finance and engineer a Stampede of the proportions which last Friday's event attained, practically unaided. That is to say, this Stampede could properly be called a "One Man Stampede," because there has been no committee formed Mr. Miller was president, master of ceremonies and secretary combined. The duties of financing, arranging the programme advertising and a hundred other things fell on the shoulders of Jack Miller, and three thousand people say that he filled his position with unqualified success. It is the unanimous opinion of every person who was present at the Miller ranch, that the Stampede was the most successful event, from every standpoint that had ever been staged outside of an Alberta city. While the Calgary and Medicine Hat stampedes were of much larger proportions, no more enjoyment could have been crowded into one afternoon, than was prvided last Friday.

A fine programme of sports characteristic of the West, including a roping contest, won (for Red Cross by Jack Miller), best cowboy outfit best bucking horse, etc.

The Herald was informed by Mr. Miller, that the gross receipts amounted to about $2,600.00, everything considered. It is estimated that about $1,800.00 clear profit for the Red Cross will be realized. These funds were obtained by selling over one thousand admission tickets, at one dollar each, to gentlemen alone, ladies and children being admitted free. The committee of young ladies selling these tickets regret to report that there were numerous parties who "stalled" and would not purchase these tickets. As it was advertised that an admission charge of one dollar would be made to all men, these "slackers" were hunted out whenever possible and forced to leave the grounds by the police.

* * * * * * * *

In the evening the barn dance was well attended, and accommodation was at a premium. The Delia orchestra which kindly supplied the music for the day, deserves special mention, as the members would take no remuneration over and above their bare expenses, necessarily incurred.

The thanks of a grateful community are extended to Mr. Miller for his untiring efforts in arranging such a successful and entertaining event for the benefit of the Red Cross Society. The success of the Stampede speaks volumes for the ability and patriotic spirit of the guiding spirit of this celebration.

It would also be a regrettable oversight if thanks were not extended to those neighbours of Mr Miller's who so kindly donated labour, in preparing the grounds, and in assisting in other ways for the Stampede. The ladies of the Red Cross and all who assisted deserve great credit for their noble work.

KITCHENER'S POPULATION IS GROWING.

KITCHENER, Aug. 27.—The uncomplete assessment returns for this city show an increase in the population of Kitchener of 181. These returns are from three wards. It is expected that the returns from the two remaining wards will bring the increase to over 200. Poll tax collections have been unusually heavy this year. The collector expects to exceed the estimates by $2,000. The amount collected this year is far in excess of that year.

La Patrie On Food Question

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Aug. 29.—'Are the orders of the food controller tending to increase the cost of living? It is noticed that the price of beef has increased since use of it was forbidden on two days a week in public eating rooms. The price of smoked bacon is equally firm in spite of a similar restriction, and we are curious to see if it will break now that the British Government announces that it will buy no more Canadian bacon." So says La Patrie in an editorial.

"Because the British Government will import no more, pork dropped yesterday from 2 to 2 1-2 cents a pound." it continued. "And bacon—the Davies Company exported last year about one hundred million pounds— if England buys no more it is clear that Canada will have superabundant supplies, a fact which should bring prices down to their normal level.

La Patrie concludes by urging the food controller to fix a maximum price for canned vegetables.

FOOD CONTROLLER EXPLAINS INACTION IN PRICE CONTROL

Discusses Questions Pertaining to Wheat, Flour, Fruit and Meats in Address at Toronto Yesterday —Co-operation of the People is Required.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.— In his address to-day at the dinner of the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition, Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, dealt with the proposal to fix the prices of wheat, flour, fruit and other products.

"You will recall," he said, "that the price of the remainder of the 1916 crop of wheat in Canada was some time ago fixed at $2.40 per bushel, and an embargo was put on the export of wheat. With wheat here at $2.40 and an embargo on its export, wheat on the American side of the line went up to $3.10 per bushel. This meant an increased demand on the Canadian millers for flour for market consumption.

"To meet this, and in order that the benefit of the fixed price of wheat should follow through to the consumer, we put an embargo on the export of flour, so that the price of flour to the Canadian consumer today is based on $2.40 per bushel for wheat. We have not fixed the price of the loaf of bread, because on the investigation that has been conducted at Ottawa over the last six or eight months the price of bread generally is not out of proportion to the cost of wheat although there are many spots in Canada where local dealers are charging an excessive price, but this is not true of the larger cities and towns where competition is sufficient to regulate it.

Expects Fair Regulation.

"However, this whole question is up both there and at Washington. With the utmost co-operation between the food administration there and our office we expect to be able to act concurrently, and trust that before long this action will result in a fair regulation of the cost of wheat, the cost of flour and the cost of the loaf.

"It is urged that we should, as a matter of regulation, insist on whole wheat flour, instead of the high-grade flours that we get to-day. In this connection we had a very interesting meeting at Ottawa, at which the principal millers of Canada as well as the Grain Commission were represented.

An Asset of Canada.

"We had there, as well, Colonel Tasker, of England, who is one of the very highest living authorities on flour, and who has been entrusted by the allies with the purchase of flour and wheat for England and the allied nations. His head office is in New York, and he came to Ottawa to be present at that meeting. His statement to the meeting was most instructive. He urged very strongly that Canada should not interfere with the present extraction of flour from her wheat.

"He went on to say that the high quality of Canadian flour is to-day one of the very best assets Canada has in the European markets, that when this war is over the price will have to be paid, and it must be taken care of in the balance of trade between the nations, that for Canada now to lower the high standard of her flour output, and to lose the reputation that her flour has made and is making in the markets of the world, would be to make a sacrifice that is wholly unnecessary, and would cost Canada millions in the years to come.

May Fix Flour Costs.

"No one, I believe, listening to his argument and following his reasons could dispute the soundness of his position, and I certainly do not.

"With a reasonable price fixed for wheat for the crop of 1917 it will not be a difficult matter to fix the cost of flour the cost of middlings, the cost of bran and shorts, and finally the cost of the loaf. We hope that such a solution will be arrived at common to both sides of the line, as it is necessary in order that successful co-operation may be had.

Can't Arbitrarily Fix Fruit.

"Then there is the fruit situation in Canada. It is not our intention to arbitrarily fix prices; it would be not only difficult, but impossible to do so in justice to the producers and consumers, but we can be of very considerable help. The apple supply in Ontario and part of Quebec is very short, not over a twenty per cent crop., while there is approximately a normal crop in the Maritime Provinces, and a fair crop in British Columbia. We can and will be of great assistance in securing a supply for Central Canada from the two ends of the country that have apples in plenty.

"Nova Scotia is cut off from her former market across the Atlantic. We have representatives in Nova Scotia to-day arranging with the growers for supplies for this section of Canada at reasonable prices to the producer, and are arranging facilities for transportation and distribution whereby the consumers here will get the supply at reasonable cost.

"In this we are asking and securing the support of the wholesale dealers and the retail grocer with the view to having those apples delivered to the consumers with the minimum of work and expense and arranging for a very moderate return to those who are asked to lend their facilities for this work.

Killing Veal and Lambs.

"The question of veal, lamb and lighter hogs has been the subject of many requests from different parts of Canada. Many urge that the killing of veal and lambs, in view of the great scarcity, should be prohibited, in the interests of the general supply later on.

"There are two sides to this question. The difficulty is appreciated by the Department of Agriculture here and by the authorities at Washington. We have appointed a committee of representative men to deal with the Canadian interests, when the whole question will be taken up at once with a view to a solution.

"It would be premature for me now to indicate what their findings are likely to be, but whatever those findings are the different sides of the question will be heard and carefully considered before any action is taken.

"As to the prices of meat, cheaper meat in England after September 1st has been promised by Lord Rhondda, and details of his plans for governing meat control have been received by us. The sliding scale of maximum prices to be paid for live cattle has been decided upon as follows:

For September $17.76
For October 17.28
For Nov. and Dec. 16.08
For January 14.40

"These prices will apply to cattle purchased to supply the army and are probably similar to those to be paid for cattle for civil consumption. He explains that the declining scale of prices is made for the protection of farmers who purchased feeding stock at high prices.

Beef is 12 Cents Cheaper.

"Under the new prices he expects that beef will be twelve cents per pound cheaper by Christmas than at the present time. Sirloin steaks now selling in the United States at 31c. and 32c. per pound wholesale have been bringing 44c. to 46c. in London with other meat prices in proportion.

"This action on the part of Lord Rhondda very largely settles the price of these commodities in Canada and the United States.

"It would be impossible to enumerate this afternoon the many different commodities that are to-day under consideration. I give the few that I have named as instances of what is being done and as instancing the work ahead so far as commodity prices are concerned.

Co-operation Needed.

"But beyond this there is the work that the people themselves can do by co-operation and I may say that they are doing well. We have, as you know, set on foot the organization of the different provinces through which we expect to bring to the work of conserving food for export the assistance of the Women's Institutes and the different organizations of various kinds, including the schools and the churches. We have made distinct progress in this work in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and are assured of the hearty assistance of the other provinces.

"Through these organizations we hope and expect to get the people in every home to fairly observe our requests to save bread, beef and bacon for the soldiers overseas, and to prevent waste and to consume so far as possible the cheaper products in their season instead of allowing those products to go to waste when they would otherwise be consumed and take the place or canned goods and other more expensive products that could be saved for overseas."

ART TREASURES STOLEN

Historical Museum of Russian Grand Duke Plundered.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 28. — Art treasures and pictures valued at 5,000,000 rubles have been stolen from the great historical museum of the late Grand Duke Michael Nicholaievitch. A painting by Corregio, valued at 500,000 rubles, was among the articles taken. The police have searched 150 houses, but have found no trace of the booty. This robbery is one of a series recently. Six armed robbers stole silver statues and antiques valued at 1,500,000 rubles from the Senate Building.

How To Lose Your Tan, Freckles Or Wrinkles

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a lake trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson or, more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolised wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolised wax at your druggist's and use this nightly as you would cold cream, washing it off mornings. In a week or so you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, so apt for form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hasel, ½ pint. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also.

Hadn't Seen Well Day in 12 Months

Toronto Woman Says Tanlac Has Saved Her From a Nervous Breakdown

"I had not seen a well day for the past twelve months, and I firmly believe that two bottles of Tanlac saved me from a nervous breakdown," said Mrs. Elsie Maeer, of 329 Weston Road, south Toronto, whose husband is with the Canadian expeditionary forces "somewhere in France" in a recent interview.

"I had nervous indigestion for a long time," she continued, "my appetite failed and what little I did eat seemed to settle in a hard lump right in my chest and made me miserable all the time. My health was wretched, my system all run down, and I worried so much my nerves were fast giving way under the strain. The least little excitement would completely upset me and I would almost jump out of my chair at the ringing of the door bell. I couldn't hardly sleep at all, but would roll and toss from one side of the bed to the other all night long. I had no life nor strength, and was as limp as a rag and too weak to do anything about the house. I was fast going down hill and thought if I didn't find relief soon I would become a nervous and physical wreck.

"One of my neighbours told me about Tanlac and advised me to try it, and I was certainly surprised to find I was getting better and am fast overcoming my nervousness so that I now sleep fine every night and get up in the morning feeling stronger and better than I have in a long time. I have a splendid appetite and eat anything I want and am never bothered by indigestion at all. I am improving every day and am going to keep on with Tanlac as long as it does me as much good as it is doing now."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Limited.

GERMAN SUB CAPTURED.

Members of Crew Who Boarded British Ship Killed.

A Gulf Port, Aug 28.—The capture and destruction of a German submarine by an American destroyer and the killing of four members of the submarine's crew who had boarded a British steamer is reported by Wm. Raymond Brown, an American seaman, who arrived here today aboard a British steamer.

According to the story told by Brown, the submarine emerged near the steamer, but soon after she came alongside the American destroyer came up and destroyed the U-boat.

After the submarine was destroyed the men who had previously gone aboard the British steamer tried to take charge of the vessel. One of the German officers was hit on the head and killed as he was going to the engine room and three others were killed in the fight that followed.

Premier's Announcement In Regard To Pensions

Following is the Hansard report of Premier Borden's announcement in the House in regard to pensions. It will be of much interest to all soldiers:

Right Hon Sir Robert Borden: My hon. friend from Pitou (Mr. Macdonald) made an inquiry with regard to a resolution on the Order Paper with respect to the Board of Pensions Commissioners and the rates of pension. Hon. gentlemen will remember that on March 14, 1916, a committee was appointed for the purpose of taking into consideration the rates of pensions. On the 10th of May, 1916, the committee made a unanimous report. The chairman of the committee, on the 18th of May, moved that the report should be commended to the consideration of the Government. Parliament prorogued on the same day. There was not an opportunity to bring in legislation at that session. Accordingly, on the 3rd June, 1916, the recommendations of the committee were put into the form of an Order in Council and passed under the War Measures Act. By a resolution on the Order Paper it was proposed that a similar committee should be appointed this year to take into consideration representations that had been made to the Government from various quarters, and more particularly by several organizations of returned soldiers, as to the desirability of increasing the rates of pensions then allowed. This was urged for various reasons several of which have a great deal of force. We have reached the conclusion that it would be impracticable to deal with the matter in a thorough and satisfactory manner at this session and that it is a subject which should be dealt with finally and permanently by the new Parliament which is to be summoned in the early future. There is, however, the consideration which the Government will have to take into account. Owing to the fact that since the committee made this report on May 10 last year the cost of living in Canada has very appreciably increased, it is thought reasonable and desirable that, pending the consideration of this question by Parliament, there should be some increase made, that it should be made on a percentage basis and that it should take effect from the beginning of the present fiscal year, which is the first of April last. Accordingly, as soon as the prorogation of this House permits the Government propose to take the question into consideration in that regard for the purpose of affording temporary relief at this time and with the view of having the whole question exhaustively and finally settled by a new Parliament fresh from the people as soon as that Parliament has been summoned.

Mr. Murphy: Did I understand my right hon. friend to state that the Government had decided to grant an increase, and if so, what is the rate of increase?

Sir Robert Borden: That has not been determined. We thought the increase in the cost of living made it only fair and reasonable, as well as desirable, that there should be an increase, to date from the first of April last, pending consideration by a new Parliament of the whole subject in an exhaustive and final way. It seems undesirable that so important a question should be dealt with finally by this Parliament. Therefore, we propose to give temporary relief by the method which I have mentioned, and the whole matter will then be entirely free for such disposition as the new Parliament may determine to make of it.

Mr. Murphy: And the rate of that temporary increase will be determined after prorogation.

Sir Robert Borden: We will make probably a temporary percentage increase to meet the increased cost of living in the meantime, leaving it free to the new Parliament to deal with the whole question when it comes up for their consideration and determination.

Mr. Nesbitt: The increase will apply to the pensions that have been granted, as well as to those to be granted in the future?

Sir Robert Borden: Yes, all would be dealt with on the same basis.

The recent hot, dry weather has seriously reduced the prospective yield of spring wheat in the northwestern States, and has also had an injurious effect on potatoes in many parts of the Union.

WAR BREAD POPULAR.

Woodstock Housewives All Buy It—Will Double Output.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 27.—The sale of 'war-bread' by the bakers, which was inaugurated Saturday, has proved a great success; so much so, in fact, that it looks as if 'war-bread' is on the market to stay. There was such a demand for the bread that the bakers were called on to-day to double their output. The bread sells for the same as the white—ten cents a loaf. The composition is as follows: White flour, 50 per cent.; whole-wheat flour, 30 per cent.; oatmeal, rice flour and corn flour approximately 7 per cent. each.

At a sale of Holsteins in England seventyfour animals averaged £80 15s. Two animals sold for 300 guineas each and one for 240.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfils that purpose as nothing else can.

PAULETTE STOLE HOME ON BIG ALEX

Crossed Plate with Winning Run in Seventh—Knocked Oeschger Out.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—St. Louis won to-day's game in the seventh inning by knocking Oeschger off the rubber and by Paulette stealing home while Alexander was pitching, the latter feat producing the deciding tally of a six to five score. Philadelphia took the lead in the early innings by bunching hits with base on balls off Goodwin and errors. Watson went to the rubber in the fifth inning and stopped the scoring.

Score.			R.	H.	E.
St. Louis	100100400		6	13	3
Philadelphia	002030000		5	7	1

Batteries — Goodwin, Watson and Gonzales; Fittery, Oeschger, Alexander, Bender and Killifer.

At New York — New York easily won the second game of the series from Pittsburg to-day the score being 7 to 3. The Giants won in the fourth inning, driving Grimes out of the box when they scored five runs on two doubles, four singles, a base on balls, three steals and an error.

Score:			R.	H.	E.
Pittsburg	000100200		3	8	2
New York	10050010x		7	10	1

Batteries — Grimes, Carlson and Schmidt; Perritt and Rariden, Onslow.

At Boston — Schneider's pitching was too much for Boston to-day, while both Barnes and Allen were hit often and hard. Cincinnati won nine to one. The hitting and fielding of Kopf and Rousch were remarkably good. Score:

Cincinnati	110003400	9	12	0
Boston	0000001000	1	6	3

Batteries — Schneider and Wingo; Barnes, Allen and Tragessar.

At Brooklyn — Vaughn shut out Brooklyn two to nothing to-day, by being effective in the pinches. Cadore also pulled himself out of several tight places, although the visitors reached him for eleven hits including two doubles. Errors by Myers and Olson gave them their first run while the second was earned on hits by Mann and Zeider, and a double steal. Score:

WHITE SOX SWEEP YANKEE SERIES

Increased Lead to Three and One-half Games—Davenport Gets Revenge.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Chicago gained one-half game on Boston to-day by defeating New York in the final game, 4 to 3, making a clean sweep of the series, while Boston remained idle on account of rain, at Detroit. Chicago now is three and one-half games ahead of Boston. The feature of the game was a triple play New York executed in the third inning when, with the bases full, Jackson lined to Baker, who touched third, doubling Leibold before he could get back to the bag, and threw to Gedeon, who touched second before McMullin could return.

Score:		R.	H.	E.
New York	000009010	3	10	1
Chicago	00102100x	4	10	2

Batteries—Caldwell and Alexander; Williams, Faber and Schalk.

At St. Louis—Davenport, who was knocked out of the box by Philadelphia on Sunday, came back to-day and let the visitors down with four hits, St. Louis winning, 2 to 1. St. Louis got its two runs after two were out in the first innings. Sisler doubled, Pratt singled and stole second, Sloan singled, scoring both Sisler and Pratt.

Score:		R.	H.	E.

MONTREAL LACROSSE HARD GAME TO KILL

Players Doing Their Best to Put Each Other Out with it.

Montreal Mail: The Shamrock-National game on Saturday, unfortunately, had a few of the elements that go to kill the national game. In the first quarter Penny gave Degray a vicious blow of his stick across the stomach, for which Finlayson gave him ten minutes. As he was coming to the penalty bench he was insulted by some of the spectators and he made a rush at them with his stick, but on the advice of Ald. Tom O'Connell "Nate" cooled off. Egan and Doutre staged a fistic encounter, but a trip to the penalty bench kept their spirits in check. Eddie Farney in checking Brossard happened to miss his stock and checked his head, with the result that Pigeon gave him the heaviest penalty of he afternoon, 20 minutes.

At the end of the third quarter a fight was staged by some spectators at the side of the club house. Roberts was ruled off tiwce, his last offence being for knocking Doutre out. Harry Hyland checked too strenuously in the last quarter and got ten minutes. Pitre and Langevin got five minutes for heavy checking.

At the end of the match Penny tried to get at Degray with his stick and caused a small riot in the club house which took some minutes to quell.

The Shamrocks were a bitter disappointment to their many supporters. They never played such a poor game. It was their day off, and hard luck was on their side. Twice did Penny pass three defence men, the first time to be thwarted by "Happy" in goal, who stopped his shot, and the second time to shoot the ball wide when L'Heureux had left the net unprotected. Penny was so vexed with his performance that he threw his stick about twenty yards. The attendance was over twenty-five hundred, which showed hat the game "still lives" notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

WHITE SOX OWNER GIVES $14,066.67 TO AMERICAN RED CROSS

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Charles A. Comiskey, President of the Chicago American League Baseball Club, today sent to the American Red Cross his fifth donation to that fund, $14,066.67, representing a percentage of the gross receipts in recent series of games at Comiskey Ball Park. The total amount, including the sum sent to-day, which Comiskey has given to the Red Cross is $14,066.67.

Grand Prize For Blind Score Test

A "blind score" five-pin contest is now being run at the Water Street alleys during two weeks ending Sept. 11th. The grand prize, which is a handsome electric reading lamp, can be seen in Warne Bros. big window. The score will be drawn on Tuesday, Sept. 11th, and is from 120 to 132; the same rules as before will govern the play-off, the date for which will be announced later.

A BOOST FOR BOBCAYGEON

Written By Morris Ackerman in the Cleveland "Leader"

"If you can't get them at Bobcaygeon and the Kawarthas, you can't get them anywhere," says W. C. Barney, of the Union Paper and Twine Company. Dave Tietrow, able-bodied French-Canadian guide on Pigeon lake has the same version. And both express our personal opinions exactly. If you can't get your string of large and small-mouthed bass and lunge at the Kawartha chain of lakes, you can't get them anywhere.

You have probably heard many a tale from fishermen just returned from this great chain of Ontario lakes and the chances are you did not believe half of what you heard. It is the fisherman's privilege to listen to all tales and then believe as little as he wishes.

But take it from your old friend and trusty side-kick that the tales they tell of the fish they caught and of the scenery they saw, and the feeds they had, are the real stuff and exaggeration is not in them. The fishing for bass and lunge in the Kawartha is great and no man, woman or child who journeys there will come home disappointed—as far as fishing, scenery and eats are concerned.

These lakes, consisting of Bald, Sandy, Buckhorn, Chemong, Pigeon, Sturgeon, Stoney, Clear, Rice, Balsam, Cameron Scugog and others are all supplied with fish and await your lures. The chain of lakes would take you a year to fish over. Therefore we will confine our story to the lake fished mostly by Americans visiting Bobcaygeon—Pigeon lake.

This lake is considered the best for lunge and bass—that is on the part of the chain lying west of Burleigh Falls—the eastern part of the chain is best reached from Peterborough.

The method of fishing is with a guide, rowboat and a troll—that is with a trolling spoon, phantom minnows, heavy line and stiff rod, for lunge. The bass fishing is according to your particular desire, but generally one of still-fishing with live bait. Frogs, worms and minnows can all be had at Bobcaygeon, as well as 'crabs' or crawfish.

For this method of bass fishing the guide usually pulls you out to the edge of a weed bed or over a rocky reef. In either event you will get small-mouthed bass enough to appease your appetite.

For the "green or yellow" bass, better known to us as the large mouthed, you have the shallow bays of wild rice and logs and stumps. This angling is via the casting route, either with live or artificial bait. Success will be yours with either rigging. The bass are there, have been there for centuries past and will be there for centuries to come.

There is no polution, no sewage, no mud, nothing to "rile" the waters to that stage of repulsion that looks like a lake full of yellow paint—just clean, cool, sparkling water that bids you drop a line and feel the thrill of dynamic response from the depths below.

A CANADIAN VENICE.

Bobcaygeon lies perched up on the top end of three small islands that jut so far into the waters of Pigeon and Sturgeon lakes that they just cut 'em in two. Not only this but the islands are parted by Little and Big Bob rivers, and withal you have a veritable Canadian Venice. The sight that is good for sore eyes and discouraged whipstickers and chuggers and trollers and just plain fish hunters.

There is a population of "one thousand" persons—mostly guides, hotel and boarding house keepers, business men and soldiers home from the war. Each American vacationist adds to the said population by one—the growth of the town is measured by the eye with the coming of each train from the south. The train is the Canadian Pacific and is the only road that runs to Bob. The people have no time to watch the incoming guests during the day as everyone is out fishing. Meeting the train that arrives at 9 p.m., is the principal outdoor sport afforded the natives in their "wild" dissipation. They are all on the job with a regular Bobcaygeon welcome.

It is only a run of three hours from Toronto to Bob and the Canucks are keen for spending week-ends and vacations in and around this popular resort. There is room, and lots of it, for all the fishermen in Ontario and the northern part of United States in these Kawarthas.

If you are fishing on Pigeon lake alone you will hardly see a half-dozen parties during the course of a whole day.

In the morning you have your breakfast at six o'clock. At six thirty you join your guide on Big Bob river and at six-forty you are trolling along the west bank of Pigeon lake and headed for a trip of miles and miles over and around the weed beds and over the rocky reefs where the tackle smashing musky and the vicious peppery small-mouthed defies your lure to cross it's nose.

At noon you find yourself resting under the cooling shades of balsam birch and pine— with your guide frying fish over a camp-fire on the rocky shore of a distant island—or perhaps on the mainland. It matters not for there are no motors or waggons, traffic cops or open sewers. Just the cool breezes that waft over land and water to bid you welcome to a few days of life in the open. Boys, it is the life. For when the shades of evening some sliding over the trees you are well on your way again to the mouth of Big Bob, with lungs ful lof pure air—a heart full of gratitude—and, and, and a tummy full of fish. Gee, them are the happy days.

THE WORD "KAWARTHA"

Now do you know that that word "Kawartha" is spelled wrong? Well, a man who has done as much for the Kawarthas as anybody else stuck the name onto that chain of lakes. The man's name is A. E. Bottum. Bottum and another booster for the lakes set out to get a name for those waters. They met an old Indian. He gave them the name "Kawartha"—meaning "swift shallow water." There is no "r" in the Indian language—but the boys stuck it in by mistake, then the railway came along and gave the same kind of boost they had the Muskokas and to-day the "Kawarthas" are known over the whole world.

There is a boat and canoe works at Bobcaygeon. also a bank and five churches. We are convinced that every one uses the boats and canoes, but we went fishing on Sunday. However, we were so impressed with the honesty of the people that we are satisfied their chances are good whether they go to church or not on Sundays.

You've heard of that little burg known as Akron, in the state of Ohio Well, we found an old friend up there from that town who just bo't five cottages. We ran into Akronites in the hotel and in the boarding houses, also out fishing and in the near-beer tonsorial parlors. Gee, you gotta go some to beat Akron. And all the folks from the states who were not from Akron were from Cleveland.

Now the biggest man who lives in Bobcaygeon (outside of Bill Haynes, of Akron.) is Sir Edward Kemp. Sir Eddy has a beautiful summer home on Sandy Point and fast motor boats and everything on, can imagine. He would use all those things, only he is "Lord of Arms" or something like that and is stationed at Toronto.

Now something more about tackle, and railroads, and schedules, and the "investment" necessary, and we will dismiss the class for the day. There are a few "homemade" trolling spoons for lunge you can buy at Bob and nowhere else. Two of the most successful killers used for lunge are the "silver willow" and the phantom minnow with blue back and silver tummy. Those are the words of no less an authority than Guide Percy Nichols himself. (There are lots of Nichols' in Bobcaygeon. One friend said about ($200 worth).

And by the way, there are sixteen registered guides in that town that can row you from Bobcaygeon until "the middle of next week" and never get up a sweat. It is not unusual feat for them to row fishing parties thirty miles a day. And, boys, all the work is "done by hand," too.

Getting back to tackle—your bass outfit, with a few exceptions is as good there as here. Live bait and still fishing for lots of fish. Artificial bait and castings for lots of sport.

The average hotel rate at Bobcaygeon is $2.50 per day. The average boarding house rate is about $2.00 per day. Guides are $3.50 per day and carry two people per boat at that price. You furnish lunch for them from your hotel via the basket route that is for an all day trip. Weekly hotel and boarding house-rates draw reductions.

You can fish from shore in the canal and in Big Bob river, and catch sunfish and even small-mouthed bass to exceed your fondest hopes. The Ontario license, as you know, is two dollars per rod—and worth it. Here's to you, Bobcaygeon—I know there is not a "soul so dead" that will ever visit your welcome waters, as a result of reading these lines, who will not come back home again singing your praises and ours!

following evening. Each day the time is spent in gun carrying and drill.

Kingston, Aug. 29.—Lieut.-Col. R. W. Smart has the Eastern Ontario Battalion lines in splendid condition. The lines of whitewashed stones mark out the various streets of tents. Electric lights have been installed in the tents of the officers.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—Everyday nowadays prominent athletes figure in the casualty lists. To-day its Jimmy Lowe, the Stratford hockey player, who was killed August 21, and Harry Stansfield, the Balmy Beach rugby player. Lowe who was a Lieut., but acting captain, is a son of John Lowe of Stratford, and played hockey for six years with Stratford teams. He is well known to Toronto hockey rail birds too, because he turned out, though he did not play, with St. Michaels while attending the College of Pharmacy here. He could have had a place on the team but was loyal to the home town. That Lieut. Jimmy Lowe had the right sort of stuff in him is indicated by the "M.C." after his name. He won it for bravery on the field and the cross was pinned on his breast by King George in February. He only returned to the front after an operation for appendicitis a few weeks ago. Harry Stansfield, the Beach rugby player who is reported wounded to-day, was one of the stars of the City Rugby league. Both he and his brother Joe, who made a place on the Argonaut Rugby team turned out with oarsmen. Both joined the 180th Sportsmen's Battalion and both played on the Sportsmen's rugby team in the fall of 1916. Both Joe and Harry were good runners, jumpers and shot putters, and won a number of points for Col. Greer's "late and lamented" battalion in military competitions, both here and in Camp Borden.

VACATIONS ON BIG SHIP.

Holland Boat Is Turned Into Floating Hotel in North Sea Canal

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands.—Vacations may be enjoyed in Holland on board a liner without the present day perils. This privilege is conferred by the use of a floating hotel of the 12,000 ton steamship Jan Pietersoon Coen, one of the Netherland Steamship company's colonial liners. In normal times this ship runs between here and the Dutch East Indies, but, since unrestricted submarine war, her owners have laid her up for safety in Amsterdam harbor.

The steamer was anchored at an attractive spot on the North Sea canal, between Velsen and Ymuiden, and opened as a hotel. Remunerative patronage was easily secured, at prices according with those of first-class hotels at Holland's seaside resorts, and there was a big run on this innovation in European holiday facilities.

WOODSTOCK SEES AEROPLANE

WOODSTOCK Aug. 29.—The people of this city had their first opportunity this morning of witnessing an aeroplane pass over the town. About 7.20 a.m. the "bird" appeared to the east of the city. It was flying at about 2000 feet at the time. Nearing the C.P.R. station it swooped down to within a few hundred feet of the ground. Ascertaining the name of the place the aviator, with a passenger aboard, quickly ascended, and at a terrific clip struck off in the direction of London.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—Live Stock Market — A general drop in prices marked to-day's market. Heavy steers sold at $11; choice butcher $10 to $11; hogs, fed and watered, $17 to $17.25; off cars, $17.25 to $17.50; f.o.b., $16; lambs sold $14 to $15.40. WEDDING BELLS

LEGROW—WARBOY.

Quietly this morning in St. Peter's Cathedral Rev. Father McEwan officiating, the wedding was solemnized of Stella, youngest daughter of Mr. Jeremiah Warboy, 507 Aylmer street, and Jack, son of Mr. Jeremiah Legrow, 113 Robinson street.

The bride, who was unattended, looked very lovely in a chic blue taffeta suit with hat to match.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple drove to the 8.10 train on which they left for a trip to Toronto, Hamilton and points west.

On their return to the city, Mr. and Mrs. Legrow will reside on Rubidge street.

O'NEILL—CARLIN.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 28.—A very pretty wedding took place at St. Basil's Church at an early hour this morning when Rev. Father Dogorski united in marriage Mary Estelle Carlin, daughter of E. J. Carlin, manager of the Dominion Flour Mills here and Morgan J. O'Neill, B.A., of Onemee, formerly mathematics and science master at the Collegiate Institute here.

MAHONEY—REDMOND.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Church of the Sacred Heart Los Angeles, California, on July 5th, by the Rev. Father Donaghue. The bride was Miss Della Redmond, formerly of Two Harbours, Michigan, and the groom, Mr. Francis Mahoney, son of Mr. Jas. Mahoney, of Douro.

A wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's sister, after which the bridal party motored to Yosemite Park for a short honeymoon.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOSEPH KELLY.

Mary Genevive Reilly, beloved wife of Joseph Kelly, 264 King street, died this morning at the family residence after an illness of some weeks' duration. Mrs. Kelly was born in Meriden, Conn., 36 years ago, but has resided in the city practically all her life.

There are left besides her broken-hearted husband, seven children, Lillian, George, Genevive, Tom, Kathleen, Geraldine and Helen and two brothers, George of Toronto and Thomas of Peterborough, and her mother, Mrs. E. Reilly, 266 King street.

The funeral will take place on Friday morning at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's church, thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

MRS. CLEMENT GUERIN.

Mary Gagnon, relict of the late Clement Guerin, died last night at the home of her niece, Mrs. Joseph Ribauld, 272 Lansdowne street after an illness of some months duration. Mrs. Guerin was born in Prairie, Quebec, 80 years ago and has resided in the city for 50 years, during which time her kindliness as a neighbour and faithfulness as a mother has won the affection and esteem of a wide circle of friends. She leaves, of her immediate family, to mourn her death, five sons, Louis, of Toronto; Archie and Henry of the city; Villa, of British Columbia, and Noel of Port Arthur, and one daughter, Mrs. Joseph Young, of Port Arthur. One sister, Mrs. Louis Denno of this city, also survives.

The funeral will take place on Friday morning at nine o'clock to the Church of the Immaculate Conception and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

Peterboro's Coal Has Left Toronto On The Way Here

Six cars of the city's coal, about three hundred tons, are somewhere between Toronto and Peterborough, and are expected to arrive here to-morrow. Hence, whatever the financial results, Peterborough may boast of being the only municipality in the country that has a municipal fuel depot or even has the right to establish one. An advertisement in another column calls the attention of the citizens to the fact that orders will be received by City Treasurer Adams, and Ald. Dobbin states that from the inquiries of prospective purchasers the city's first order should soon disappear. As chairman of the committee, Ald. Dobbin has all the machinery for delivery ready to go into action within five hours' notice of the arrival of the cars in the local railway yards. Everything promises to work smoothly, and of course the citizens, in whose interests this venture was essayed, are expected to co-operate in the fullest measure. The price will be $10 a ton and should it fall below that mark the difference will be returned to the purchasers. Among the dealers $10 is the prevailing price. One yard quoting $9.30 a ton, it was reported, had refused further orders at that figure. It is understood that Ald. Dobbin will place new orders to-morrow or as soon as the first shipment arrives.

Chief Thompson Takes A Hand As Harvester Of Oats

County Crown Attorney Hatton's agricultural affiliation, growing out of his possession of a country estate on the fringe of the city, has naturally rolled up a very considerable harvest. And harvest is a synonym for work which naturally suggests labour and by contrast the police force, for it is the fancy of the public that the police never labour. They believe this old libel that was begotten in a joke as they believe that every man has his price, that the race of statesmen is extinct and that the only wise aldermen are the dead ones. At any rate Chief Thompson and P. C. Wigg, both of whom graduated from the farm, spent this afternoon on the Crown Attorney's farm pitching oats, generally assisting in bringing in the crop, and, incidentally tuning up their muscles. It was an off morning in Police Court, and the policeman was off duty.

Draft horses still move the great bulk of city commerce. In short-haul work they have actually increased in spite of motor competition —Wayne Dinsmore, Secretary American Percheron Society.

PREPARING FOR ELECTION

Montreal Conscriptionist Liberals Are Making Their Plans

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Aug. 29.— Prominent Liberals of Montreal in favour of conscription are getting together for joint action in case of a general election. Arnold Wainwright, K.C., Transportation Building, and George Lyman have the preliminary work of the organization in hand and already they have received many expressions of active sympathy from prominent professional and business men. "As to our attitude at an election," Mr. Wainwright said to-day, "we cannot determine that at so early a stage. It will be for the organization itself to decide. But I think we shall be able to show that opinion in Quebec is not entirely against compulsory military service."

It is possible the pro-conscriptionist Liberals may vote for the government candidates in the sidings where there are a lot of English voters, as in St. Antoine, Westmount, St. Lawrence, St. George and Sherbrooke.

It is also rumoured that Sir Herbert Ames may decide to contest St. George riding and that Col. Creelman, who has announced himself as an Independent Liberal in favour of conscription may not be opposed by a government candidate in St. Antoine. St. George is a new riding, part of it being taken from the seat Sir Herbert now represents.

How The Conscription Bill Will Work Out When It Is Enforced

Before Any Class is Called Out the Tribunals Necessary to the Act's Operations Must Be Appointed and Regulations Issued to Cover the Many Points Still Not Dealt With.

OTTAWA, Aug. 29.— The Military Service bill will become law to-day upon receiving the assent of the Senate but the only provisions which will immediately affect the public are those which provide penalties for dissuading the public from compliance with the new Act.

Before any class is called out the tribunals necessary to the Act's operation must be appointed and regulations issued to cover the many points left to be so covered. When this has been done the public will receive intimation that the first class, or some part of its is called to the colours. The class in question embraces single male British subjects between 20 and 34; this is, those who have attained the age of 20 years and were born not earlier than 1883. Widowers without children are considered single. The Government has intimated that subjects of alien enemy birth will not be required to serve.

Posters will be put up in every part of Canada notifying the public of the precise class called out. The administrators of the bill have power to divide the first, or any class, into sub-classes, but it is doubtful if this will be done with the first class, as the idea of Parliament was that the first draft should combine the steadiness of men in their twenties. It is hoped to get the whole 100,000 to which the bill is limited from the one class, so that no married men are likely to be called out.

Will Name Two Dates.

The proclamations calling out the class will name two dates; one, the earlier, at which those wishing to apply for exemption must do so before a local tribunal and the other or later date at which all who have not asked exemption or to whom exemption has been refused must report to the military authorities for service. Those whose cases are not yet dealt with or are in appeal to not have to report until there is a final judgment. A man may apply to any local tribunal in his Province for exemption, but the proclamation will set forth the one handiest of access to his place of residence. When a man reports for service, he is not necessarily sent to camp forthwith. Regulations will be issued in this matter. Some may be rejected upon reporting who were refused exemption before local tribunals, as the military authorities will have their own doctors to examine every man who reports.

Men of the various militia units in Canada not enlisted for overseas will be treated just as any other citizens. Returned soldiers, men from the navy, or members of the Imperial forces will of course be exempt.

The foregoing is a brief resume of the Act's operations, but the present necessity, as soon as the bill becomes law, is for the Cabinet to appoint a Supreme Court Judge as Central Appeal Judge and for Parliament to appoint members of the Commons and Senate on a committee to choose one member of each local tribunal, the other member to be chosen in each case by the County Court Judge of the District. The making of these appointments, with the issuing of a mass of regulations, will occupy the Government and the advisory committee for some time.

donate a day's milk to help the farmers in the devastated areas in Europe.

Labour: Workers from the towns and cities have undoubtedly assisted in relieving the strain on farmers during harvesting, although many cases of need could not be met. The Lambton representative says: "All applications have been filled to date. Our arrangements with the manufacturers and the Board of Trade of Sarnia have worked quite satisfactorily." The Peel representative states that about 200 men were placed on farms through his agency, the majority of whom made good, although for the most part previously unaccustomed to the work. The main reliance of farmers, however has been exchanging work and getting members of their families, both male and female, to assist in the time of rush. The Government tractors are said to be doing excellent work in preparing the land for fall wheat.

Laurier Agrees To Assist The Premier With Draft Measure

Leader of the Opposition Will Nominate Half the Members of the Board of Selection in Connection With the Military Service Bill.

OTTAWA, August 29.—When the Commons assembled, Sir Robert Borden stated that he proposed going ahead with the appointment of the board of selection in connection with the Military Service Bill. Sir Robert stated that this board, which will be appointed by joint resolution of the two Houses, will have power to appoint one member of each tribunal. He had decided that the board should consist of 24 members, four from Ontario, four from Quebec, and two from each of the other Provinces, including the Yukon. He desired that the leader of the Opposition should nominate half of the members of the board.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose to reply. His first words were drowned by three thuudering taps on the outer door. Sir Wilfred smiled, bowed, and sat down.

"Closure," some one called out.

The door opened and there was a roar of laughter as Hon. David Henderson stumped in with his stick. The usher of the black rod was right behind him. He was introduced as requested the presence of members of the Commons in the honourable Senate. Members filed out and the royal assent was given to the conscription measure.

IN A DELICATE POSITION.

On the reassembling of members in the Commons Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose to continue his interrupted remarks.

"The House will not be surprised," he said, "if I say at once that I find myself in a very delicate position. It is not usualy constitutional for one who has opposed a measure to be connected with its enforcement. I have opposed this measure. I do not approve of it. My opinion is not shared by all members of the Opposition. Some favour the measure and some do not.

"The bill, however, is one of such importance, it has become law and has been assented to, so that it is the duty of all to see that it is carried out. I feel it my duty to accept the invitation of my right honourable friend. I will consult with those who have opposed the bill and with those who favoured it and will at once communicate the result to my right honourable friend."

ASKS ABOUT FLOUR PRICES.

Hon. Charles Murphy referred to a statement to the effect that the millers were making five dollars a barrel out of flour sold at present prices. "The Food Controller," he said, "has been going up and down preaching thrift and conservation. He has been issuing pamphlets. Can the Government say whether it is his intention to deal with the situation as claimed to exist with regard to flour prices?"

Sir Robert Borden ventured the opinion the Food Controller would take such action as he saw fit in the circumstances.

SOLDIERS' VOTING BILL.

Sir Robert Borden moved the third reading of the Soldiers' Voting bill. Sir Wilfrid demurred, on the ground that no notice had been given. The Prime Minister admitted this, and the debate was adjourned.

The House then went into committee of supply.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley and E. W. Nesbitt strongly opposed an item of three million dollars to be devoted to the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway and terminals. Dr. Pugsley declared that at a time when money could only be procured at usury rates of interest such an expenditure was entirely indefensible.

CALLED IT "DEBAUCH."

Hon. Frank Cochrane declared that a contract had been let for a large bridge over the Nelson: It would require $800,000 to complete it.

"That is only a small part of the vote," retorted Dr. Pugsley.

"The whole of the vote will not be spent," said Mr. Cochrane.

E. M. Macdonald, Pictou, declared that the total civil expenditures proposed by the Government was $254,000,000 of which only $74,000,000 were statutory. "Is there to be no end to this debauch," he asked. "We are piling up a debt of two billion dollars. How are we going to pay the interest on it without burdening the people with imposts which will drive them away.

QUESTIONS FOR SIR THOMAS.

"How are we to encourage immigrants to a country which crushes its people under taxation burdens of an unbearable size" Mr. MacDonald referred to the vote of $3,600,000 for the Forget, Quebec and Saguenay Railway. "Can the Minister deny," he asked, "that every cent of that money is to come from the pockets of the people through the various methods of taxation imposed, forsooth, for the win the war? Is there to be any limit to hypocrisy"

Cries of "Hear, hear," from Sir Thomas White and Government members.

"Hon. gentlemen cry hear, hear," said Mr. MacDonald, "I defy the Finance Minister to deny that this money which he proposes to hand over to Mr. Rodolphe Forget, has, every cent of it, been taken from the pockets of the people on the guise of war taxes, he says hear, hear, can he deny that?"

"I was listening to the honourable member's speech" said the Minister, "he asked if there was any limit to hypocrisy, I agreed with him."

The Weekly Crop Report of the Ontario Agricultural Department

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

During the week much needed rains fell in many parts of the Province, which, although further delaying harvesting, revived, pastures and growing crops generally to such an extent that the Essex representative values the benefits of last Thursday's timely showers to his county at half a million dollars. Heavy soils, which with so much dry weather have been too hard for ploughing, can now be more easily prepared for the new fall wheat.

Fall wheat has been fully harvested, and many are busy getting ready for the new crop; in fact, some wheat for next year's cutting is already in. It is reported from Grenville, a county in which practically no winter wheat has heretofore been grown, that a number of farmers have decided to try out the crop this fall.

The barley harvest is also completed, and is highly spoken of.
